THE WEAKEST LINK.

Little Talks on Health and Hygiene By Dr. Samuel G. Dixon.

Do you know which is your weakest link in your chain of life? Is it heart, lungs, digestion or nerves? Which of the various organs and functions of the body threaten trouble?

The chances are that unless you have a thorough physical examination you could not tell, for symptoms are misleading and oftentimes their manifestation is general or sympathetically indicates the trouble is located in some other organ than the one that is the actual seat of the trouble.

If there is a knock in the engine of your automobile you are the first to desire an overhauling to rectify the trouble. You know if a mechanical defect of this sort continues it is going to multiply the trouble before long and that is just what happens with the human mechanism.

It is well known by the medical profession that those suffering from organic complaints may often through vigorous adherence to certain rational methods of living, recover sufficiently to live long and useful lives while those suffering from functional disorders may, by following out the instructions of able medical men, entirely recover their health.

Everyone suffering with persistent cold, headache or pains, should consult a good physician and submit themselves to a thorough physical examination. It would be well for everyone to be examined once a year. This should include an examination of the blood vessels, blood, heart, kidneys, consideration of weight in regard to height and the general activities of the various organs.

Such an examination superficially made is of no value. It should be thorough and the daily routine and habits of the individual carefully considered in relation to his physical condition.

Men ordinarily are obliged to submit to a medical examination now and then when they take out life insurance. Women are not so often insured and hence under ordinary circumstances are more apt to neglect physical examination. It is equally essential to both.
