Though the coal trade is at its very best, Somerset county coal operators are losing money because of the shortage of cars. The situation is a peculiar one. New when there are so many orders to make up for last summer's losses the coal men are losing thousands of dollars each week because of the lack of cars to transport the fuel to buyers who are clamoring for the deliveries.

DEATHS IN THE COUNTY.

MRS. WASHINGTON MEGAHAN.
Aged 77 years, died Nov. 16, in a hospital at Wilkingsburg, Pa. She and her venerable husband, now in his 95th year, went from Somerset to Wilkingsburg about three years ago to make their home with their son, John. The body was brought to Berlin for burial.

W. H. BAKER
W. H. Baker, justice of the peace, of Rockwood, who has been ill for several months past suffering from a stroke of paralysis, died at his home in that place on Saturday evening shortly after 5 o'clock at the age of 75 years. The funeral services were held at the Baker residence Tuesday with interment in the Union cemetery at New Centerville. His wife and three children survive, among the latter, W. E. Baker, of Meyersdale.

AARON S. WALKER.
Aaron S. Walker, 86 years old, died Saturday morning at his home in Jenner township. Deceased was a veteran of the Civil War. Death came after an illness of only one day, his heart failing under the weight of his years. Mr. Walker's remains were laid to rest in the cemetery adjoining Mt. Zion Lutheran church, the ground for which he donated. Deceased was twice married, first to Rebecca Berkley, of near Garrett. His second wife who was Miss Alice Galbraith, of Ligonier survives. The surviving children are Herman, of near Johnstown; Mrs. Fred Trexal, of Jenner township; Winfield, of Johnstown; Mrs. Elmer Shrey, of Boswell, John, Aaron, Jr., and Mrs. Dorsey St. Clair, all at home. Hiram Walker, of Garrett, and Silas Walker, of Summit township, are surviving brothers.

CONRAD TRESSLER.
A respected citizen of Meyersdale, died at his home near the W. M. station yesterday at three p. m. aged 62 years, 6 months and 6 days from a stroke of apoplexy received about eight weeks ago. Mr. Tressler was a trackman on the B. & O. railroad under Foreman S. M. Tressler.

There survive the deceased a wife whose maiden name was Shoemaker and three sons and three daughters: John W.; Lila Savilla; Catherine W.; Lloyd Elmer; Chauncey; and Mrs. George Topper of West Virginia and her arrival will determine whether the funeral will be held on Friday or Saturday. Interment will be made in the Union cemetery. The deceased was a faithful member of the Church of the Brethren. He also belonged to the Railroad Relief organization.

GOOD FARM FOR SALE.

Timber alone estimated to be worth one thousand dollars, good new barn, finest f spring water. Land lies comparatively level and smooth. Good school in sight. This farm is a bargain. For terms and price address C. F. Hammond, Oakland, Maryland.

HER LADYSHIP DECIDES

By IZOLA FORRESTER.

It would be dull for Wanda back in London. She had worked hard through the winter and needed a change. Ostensibly she came as the guest of Mrs. Towne, his mother, but it was Courtney who shouldered the full responsibility.

"I haven't seen Peggy since she was married. She says they are going to put in at Pinehurst pier tomorrow at ten and I am to motor over with you. She would love to have Mrs. Towne and you come, too, Courtney."

"My mother doesn't approve of Peg."

"No!" With lifted brows. "She's perfectly dear, and now she's married she's settled down wonderfully. I think I shall go, Courtney."

Courtney said nothing. He agreed quite pleasantly to drive her over the next morning. Mrs. Towne was indisposed and some way Wanda managed to coax her into acquiescence.

It was a cool, windy morning the next day, when they started for Pinehurst. Courtney had chosen his own car, a low, two-seated French machine. He seemed rather silent as they swung out along the shore road.

"It isn't far, is it?" Wanda asked lightly.

"About eighteen miles. I'm going to take the short cut."

Once outside the little seaside village, he turned off the main road and took the one through the pines inland. Wanda stole a glance at him again, at the clean-cut, almost stern profile beside her, and then at his hands and the way they gripped the wheel.

"You don't really mind my going, do you, Courtney?" she asked tentatively.

"Not at all now," Courtney returned cordially.

"Halbert's very fond of Peggy. I think he might have married her himself some time if she hadn't chosen Captain Minturn."

Courtney smiled at the ribbon of road unwinding before them. His eyes were half closed. He knew every inch of this road. And every mile was taking them from Pinehurst and the boat landing. Yet he waited to make sure. It was at the fourteenth mile that he slipped a lever wrong and the machine stopped.

With a quick apology he sprang out and started to tinker away at the car. Her ladyship chattered for a few minutes, waiting expectantly, but as the minutes flew by she glanced around curiously at the enfolded hills.

"Courtney, are you really trying to fix the car or just—"

He sat up in the road, his cap on the back of his head, and smiled at her.

"You're not fixing it at all, are you? That's what you call it over here, isn't it, fixing instead of repairing? Won't it go at all?"

He shook his head contentedly. She stepped from the car with dignity, delightful dignity he thought, considering.

"I think I shall walk until I find some sort of conveyance."

"You can't, because we're about seven miles at least from the last house. I'm going to stay here until—" he glanced at his watch thoughtfully—"until 10:30. They will have sailed by then, don't you think so?"

Wanda's dark eyes were bright with anger.

"I don't see how you dare to do this, Courtney Towne. They are my friends and if I choose to go with them it is absolutely my own affair."

"Dear, you are not quite nineteen," said Courtney gently. "Halbert put you in my care and I can't conscientiously let you chase down the coast with Peggy and have her marry you off to any other crowd."

"You mean Kent?" The color rose in her face quickly.

Courtney nodded.

"I know the whole thing, Wanda. I heard Kent bet that he would marry you before you returned to England. You know as well as I do that old Halbert is in debt to him badly. It was part of his game to make him so. It gave him a surety of his consent to his winning you, and I couldn't stand that sort of thing."

Wanda stood before him, white now, her hands clenched at her sides. It had all been a lark, her wanting to go with Peg. She had not really cared, but when he had made an issue of it, it had amused her to win the point over him. Even though she knew Kent Paxton was going, she had not realized what it might mean.

"You see, dear," he went on slowly, "it isn't just for Halbert's sake, either. It's for your own. You know that, don't you, Wanda? I haven't been able to get word out to your brother yet, but there's been a little run of luck for him, some money out of a Mexican deal that has seemed dead. We are both in on it, and I sold out our interest last week. There's enough to pay up Kent. You needn't catch the boat."

She caught the underlying bitterness beneath his words and stretched out her hand to him.

"Oh, Courtney, I do need you—"

"Of course, if you really want to go yet," he added unsteadily, "the machine isn't really out of commission. I can get you there. But I want you to come back with me."

Her hands were laid against his lips firmly. Courtney met her gaze with eyes that told all that was in his mind, and Wanda laughed softly in her own glance's waver.

"I've decided to go back," she said. (Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)
