Western Man Travels a Hundred Miles and Goes to Hospital in Seattle. Seattle, Wash.—Andrew Hill's feet were frozen recently while he was sleeping in a box car a short distance from Cle Elum. Suffering intense pain, Hill, who is thirty-four years old, set out early the next morning for Seattle afoot, and despite the 100 miles that separated him from this city, he ar-rived here. He is in the city hospital, and fear was entertained for his left foot.

Hill started for Seattle from a farm near Cle Elum, where he had been working for several months. Not hav ing sufficient money to pay his way or the train, Hill walked. In the moun the train, Hill walked. In the moun-tains he climbed into a box car for the night. He awakened the next morning with severe pains in his feet and legs. Believing the pain would disappear with exercise, Hill resumed his jour-ney. For a long time he kept up a slow run, he says. The following night he found a haymow and protected him-self from the cold by crawling into the loft and burrowing into the hay. When he arrived at the city hospital examination showed that the toes of both his feet were gangrenous.

He worked in factories, studying nights, desiring to show his apprecia-tion to the man who had picked him up. His wages were small-but 25 cents a day—and the work of carrying water to several hundred mill hands was not as pleasant as might be. By doing chores for anybody who would hire him, he completed the pub-he school course, graduating as class valediction valedictorian.

Not being satisfied with a high school education, he took a course at a busi-ness college at Big Rapids. Securing a position as stenographer in a lawyer's office, he began to study law in his spare time, finally passing the exam-ination for admission to the bar, with papers so good he was excused from the oral examination. He was elected circuit court commissioner and ap-pointed United States commissioner. Mr. Breen handled his own campaign. He did not berate his opponents, one being another attorney and one the sheriff.

sheriff. Walking through the county, he talked with every rural voter. At times he ate but two meals a day, and some-times he slept in barns. For three months he campaigned, and when the primary vote was count-ed he had 1,100 votes more than his nausest opponent and was elected by a comfortable majority. Judge Breen's recipe for success such as his has been is a simple one: "Mind your own business, let people talk, hear when you listen, see when you listen, see when you sous and stick to a thing until you get there."
