

TAHAN, INDIAN LECTURER.

OLIVE skinned, eagle eyed, aquiline nose, with hair in three braids as black as the raven's wing, Tahau, the Chautauqua lecturer, is an Indian of the best class—educated, an ordained Presbyterian minister, a scholar, lecturer, musician and altogether charming gentleman.

He will give his great lecture, "From Savagery to Civilization," on the opening night of the Chautauqua. His life story reads like a "yellow back" novel, and it is worth going miles to hear him tell of the many hairbreadth escapes he has had on the trail and the many close calls he has had during his life on the plains.

Tahan's mother was an Osage Indian. His father was California Joe, a white scout with Custer's band. Both were killed before he was three years old. He was taken by an Indian warrior in the Kiowa tribe and was raised in true Indian style. In his Chautauqua address he gives a most dramatic and intensely interesting and instructive account of his early Indian life.

MISS MAUDE WILLIS, READER.
Miss Willis is coming among the Chautauquas this season with a new play, which she will interpret, "In the Vanguard," by Katrina Trask. It is a dramatic plea for peace, and as presented by Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts, superintendent and treasurer of the International Reform Bureau, as "the Christiana message of this awful hour."

WESTINGHOUSE STRIKE BROKEN

Electric Men Follow Airbrake Employees--'8 Hours' Lost

ULTIMATUM IS PRESENTED

President Herr Thinks Strike Is Broken; Announces Men Who Do Not Return at Once Will Forfeit Record.

Following the refusal of President Herr of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company to grant the demands of the men for an eight-hour day, the plant has been thrown open. A large proportion of the men went to work, but no estimates have been made public as to the number. President Herr believes the strike is over.

Pickets were on duty near the gates of the plant and Pennsylvania guardsmen patrolled the district. They had nothing to do. There was no violence the men merely requesting their fellow workmen to remain out.

At a mass meeting, where the leaders, by implication at least, signified that the eight-hour day was a hopeless undertaking at this time, at least half of the men attending refrained from voting to go back to work because of the rage of some of those present when a motion to submit such action was proposed. A few denounced the calling of the strike, but were soon hooted down.

A collection was taken at the meeting for a defense fund for the men arrested in connection with the Tuesday riot in Burdock in which three men were killed and many injured.

Six thousand employees of the Westinghouse Airbrake company plant, Wilmerding, returned to work without any interference on the part of strikers.

The following was posted outside the plant of the Westinghouse Airbrake company at Wilmerding:

"Conditions having again become normal, and being assured of ample protection against outside influence (for all employees while on or off duty) these works will open at the usual time (7:15 a. m.) on Monday, May 8. A. L. Humphrey, vice president and general manager Westinghouse Airbrake company."

In order to avert a recurrence of rioting of the kind that caused the deaths of three men and the injury of about thirty persons, including one woman, outside the Edgar Thomson works of the Carnegie Steel company last Tuesday, deputy sheriffs of Allegheny county inaugurated a sweeping crusade against agitators.

The militiamen probably will remain several days.

The strike of the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie railroad shopmen at McKees Rocks is over. The men walked out Monday without saying a word without making any demands or stating any grievances, according to officials of the road. There are 1,200 men in the car repair and locomotive shops, which were compelled to shut down on account of the walkout.

MEXICANS RAID BORDER TOWNS

Three Troopers and Child Are Killed at Glenn Springs, Tex.

FIFTY MEXICANS ARE KILLED

Two Frontier Villages Burned—Word Reaches Funston Two Days Later, Because of Remoteness of Scene.

Mexican bandits crossed the Rio Grande into Brewster county, in the Big Bend country of Texas.

They raided and burned two frontier settlements, Glenn Springs and Boquillas, and a wax manufacturing plant and a general store, killed three troopers of the Fourteenth United States cavalry guarding Glenn Springs, wounded three and made prisoners of several, two at least, possibly three or four. They shot to death the ten-year-old son of O. G. Compton at the Ellis & Woods wax plant, near Glenn Springs, and carried off a man named Deemer, who ran a general store near Boquillas.

Troop A of the Fourteenth cavalry has gone south through the rough country from Alpine, Tex., on the Southern Pacific railroad, eighty miles north of the raided district, and the nearest railroad point. Two more troops of the Fourteenth are on their way by train from El Paso to Alpine and a machine gun detachment is hastening by railroad from Fort Clark to Alpine. These troops are commanded by Colonel Frederick Sibley, whose orders are to get the bandits even if he has to go into Mexico after them.

Two survivors of the Glenn Springs battle were taken to El Paso from Alpine and now are at the base hospital at Fort Bliss. The men are Privates Frank De Free and Joseph Birck of Troop A, Fourteenth cavalry. Both men were burned and Private Birck was wounded in both legs. De Free escaped with a number of burns on the hands and chest.

Private Joseph Birck says he thinks at least fifty Mexicans were killed. The story of the attack and escape of five members of the guard as told by De Free is as follows:

"I was standing out by Private William Cohen, who was on guard, when suddenly we heard a chorus of Mexican yells, and a number of men, we judged to be about 300, appeared over one side of the hill and on a small road. He rushed into the tent and awakened the men there, while I ran into an adobe building and aroused three members of the guard who were asleep. I had looked at my watch a short time before and it was 11:30 o'clock when the attack occurred.

"To my knowledge seven members of the guard then rushed into the adobe buildings, while two were cut off in the tent. All of this time shots were being poured at us. The adobe had two doors and four windows and had been built for the use of the guard at that place. We replied to the fire as best we could. They made a number of attempts to fire the building and at last succeeded in getting a quantity of candelilla weed, used on the roof, ablaze. The heat of the tin roof then set the rafters on fire and that became so hot that we decided to break down the door and make a rush for shelter.

"Private Cohen, who was manning one window, suddenly threw the window open and jumped out. He received the full charge of a load of bullets in the face, his head being literally torn off. Private Birch then told the men that he was going to lead them out of the building.

"As Birch stepped out of the burning door it fell across my chest and hands, burning them. I do not know how the other soldiers came out. Private Stephen J. Colce rushed across the space between the adobe building and another shack and was shot dead, a number of bullet wounds being found in his body. The Mexicans used military formations and were arranged so as to cross fire us when we stepped out. Rogers was killed about fifty feet from the adobe building. Birch, myself and Sergeant Smyth and Privates Dempsey and Grosken then ran for a hill east of the town and succeeded in making it.

"Sergeant Smyth then went back to the Compton home, where he found the body of the son of Mr. Compton. Smyth then hid out all night. I do not know how we became separated from Corske and Dempsey but Birch and I ran as hard as we could to the wax mills. Four men were pursuing us. After we had gone about a mile we ran into an outpost, and we shot three of them. At least three men fell. We went on some distance further and found an overhanging ledge of rock. We crawled under this until daylight came. We then went back to Glenn Springs and looking over the hill saw the Mexicans loading goods from the store in a wagon. We were found about 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon by two truck loads of men who came out from Alpine to retrieve us, and who had not heard of the fight."

III; Lay Down on Tracks.
Alvin W. St., aged twenty-four, of Piedmont, Va., was killed in the Meyer (W. Va.) yards. He became ill and lay down on the tracks.
