The name of Frank B. Black, of Summit township, is prominently mentioned as a likely successor to State Highway Commissioner Robert J. Cunningham, whose death occurred a short time ago. Now that the primary election is over the Governor will probably fill the vacancies that have occurred among the department chiefs without further delay.

TOTS AND OPERA STARS.

Pittsburgh Business Men Back Youngsters in Festival.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—[Special.]—Realizing a project of a group of Pittsburgh business men, the Pittsburgh Festival Association, 1,200 grade school children and 500 evening school pupils here are rehearsing daily to appear in a great outdoor music festival in Forbes Field, Saturday afternoon, June 10, with Johanna Gadske, Lila Robson and Clarence Whitehill of the Metropolitan Opera Company.

The Metropolitan orchestra of 100 pieces will accompany the school choruses, and the director of music in the public schools, Will Earhart, will conduct.

The Pittsburgh Festival Association was organized by William C. Hamilton, a local business man, four years ago to give fitting importance to public school music. With this financial backing the school choruses held May choral festivals for three succeeding years.

The business men had planned to make possible a fourth May Festival this year, when the big outdoor production of Wagner's "Siegfried," given in the Harvard stadium last year, was engaged to appear in Pittsburgh's big ball park, Thursday evening, June 8. It was decided to use Metropolitan stars and the Metropolitan orchestra and give a school festival on the outdoor stage to be erected for the opera.

Johannes Sembach as Siegfried

AS Siegfried, child of the forest, destined to forge the invincible sword. Nothing, and with it to conquer the dragon, Fafner, and cleave the spear of the god, Wotan, which bars his way to his sleeping sweetheart, Brunhilde. In the magic circle of fire, Johannes Sembach will be seen at his best in the open air performance of Richard Wagner's music drama "Siegfried," to be given in Forbes Field, Pittsburgh, home grounds of the Pirates, Thursday evening, June 8. In connection with the opera a Siegfried Festival Concert will be given by public school children and Metropolitan soloists and orchestra Saturday afternoon, June 10.

Sembach is one of the most recent and most famous stars of the Metropolitan Opera Company and has been declared the greatest Wagnerian tenor in the world. He is the center of a cast which has never been equaled since "Siegfried" was composed and which includes Melanie Kurt, Ernestine Schumann-Heink, Frieda Hempel, Clarence Whitehill, Albert Reiss, Otto Goritz and Carl Braun.

He stands in the photograph as the youthful hero. In his hand is the sword he has just forged from the fragments of the shattered weapon which failed to save his father, Siegfried, from the fatal spear of Wotan.

ARTUR BODANSKY

He is like a magician, conjuring wondrous music from a great instrument of 102 men—the Metropolitan Opera House orchestra—with a wave of his baton. When the splendid outdoor production of Richard Wagner's music drama "Siegfried" is given Thursday evening, June 8, in the home grounds of the "Pirates," Forbes Field, Pittsburgh, Artur Bodansky, whom New York has named one of the most eminent Wagnerian conductors of his time will have not only the orchestra, but every one of the world famous opera stars who are to sing at the command of his baton. He and his men will assist in the Siegfried Festival Concert in Forbes Field, Pittsburgh, Saturday afternoon, June 10, when 1,200 children and 500 men and women from the Pittsburgh public schools will sing with Johanna Gadske, Lila Robson and Clarence Whitehill.

WAGNER—NOT HONUS—STAR.

Great Composer to Eclipse "Pirates" Wonder.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—[Special.]—The star of Honus Wagner—"The Flying Dutchman"—all-around wonder of the Pittsburgh baseball team, will suffer a momentary eclipse in Forbes Field, Pittsburgh, Thursday, June 8. The star of another Wagner—Richard, this time—will be in the ascendant.

The event at which the eclipse will occur will not be a baseball game, however, but a performance of the aforesaid Richard Wagner's great music drama, "Siegfried." There will be a whole constellation of stars in the performance—among them Melanie Kurt, Ernestine Schumann-Heink, Frieda Hempel, Johannes Sembach, Clarence Whitehill, Albert Reiss, Otto Goritz and Carl Braun, famous Wagnerian singers from the Metropolitan Opera Company.

Wagner's music will be played by the Metropolitan Opera House orchestra of 102, under the baton of the famous conductor, Artur Bodansky.

The music drama, with a choral concert by school choruses and Metropolitan soloists and orchestra, Saturday afternoon, June 10, will constitute the Siegfried Festival.
