SALISBURY.

"Come Along—Everybody." Been to the County Sunday School convention at Salisbury? Well, if you haven't you have missed half your life—the biggest half too. It was worth the time one spent in the convention hall just to hear Mr. Mack of Philadelphia, the music director, say as he led in the singing "Now, everybody sing; come along, SING. And one sang, too—couldn't help it, even though the music was new for it did not long remain so. Then who are more enthusiastic over their work, doing it themselves and teaching others to do it, than Preston Orwig of Philadelphia, Pres. of Secondary Division work of the State, and Mrs. Josephine Baldwin also of the Quaker City, Pres. of the Elementary work of the State?

The delegates of whom there about 300 were easily lodged and fed. The Boy and Girl Scouts directed them to the homes and everyone told everyone else where everything else was that every delegate might desire.

Three main sessions each day and two, three or four side sessions with a teacher training luncheon on Tuesday and Second Division luncheon on Wednesday kept things humming. At the former luncheon several good talks were given, toasts, a solo or two and of course delicious "eatings" were served. The County Teachers' Training Department also partially reorganized. Prof. H. B. Speicher was again nominated as president of the association. Mr. Bevans of Jenner No. 2 was elected President of the Teacher Training Dept. and Mrs. C. E. Stotler of Somerset, Sec. (Report of later sessions will be given in next week's issue.)

MILLER—LICHLITER.

A beautiful home wedding took place on Wednesday evening, June 21, when Miss Lucille Lichliter and Mr. Karl Miller of Pittsburg were married at the home of the bride.

To the strains of Lohengrin, played by Miss Effie Lichliter, the lovely bride and her only attendant, Miss Floreide Lichliter passed slowly in, meeting the groom and his best man, Mr. Sheldayline of Pittsburg, in the dining room where the ceremony was performed by Rev. O. G. Fye. The room was beautifully decorated with ferns, peonies, aural and roses.

The bride was gowned in white crepe de chine and silk lace caught up with a wreath of orange blossoms and carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley. After a two-course luncheon had been served, the guests engaged in dividing and receiving the wedding cake, the groom and the bride escaped to the home of the latter's grandparents and great was the dismay of the serenaders to find that their intended victims were gone—they knew not where. In the course of the evening the Salisbury Orchestra rendered a number of beautiful selections. The bride received many beautiful presents of cut glass, china, linen and silverware. They left Thursday afternoon for a short trip after which they will go to their home in Pittsburg. Besides the large number of Elk Lick guests there were many from neighboring cities. The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Miller extend to them their heartiest congratulations and best wishes.

Haun—Reiber.

On Thursday evening Mr. Robert Haun and Miss Gene Reiber were quietly married by Rev. C. V. Sparling, the bride's pastor. A crowd of young folks gave them a rousing send-off and methinks they were well repaid for their fun—those serenaders were. The bride received many beautiful gifts at a shower for her at her home on Wednesday evening. After a brief honeymoon they will go to house keeping in the Sheppard property on Gay street. Mr. and Mrs. Haun are two estimable young people and their friends extend to them their best wishes for a long and happy life.

HEALTH DEPARTMENT GUARDS AGAINST LOCK-JAW

Preparations have been made by Commissioner of Health, Dr. Samuel G. Dixon, for the distribution of tetanus antitoxin to protect those injured on the Fourth of July. Last year in Pennsylvania, 299 people were reported as injured on the Fourth. Of these injuries 154 were by powder and fireworks, 17 by fire arms, 29 by cannon, 73 by fire crackers, and 25 by blank cartridges, but no cases of tetanus developed.

The early administration of tetanus antitoxin following injuries from fire works or gun shot wounds is the only certain way of preventing lock-jaw. It will be furnished without cost to the poor.

In Somerset County the tetanus antitoxin distributing station will be J. S. Picking Somerset.

A Conductor's Story

"Yes, the crowds are letting up now," remarked the Pullman conductor on the through train, with a sigh of relief. "The warm fall has kept us hustling pretty late this year and we've been running full every day. Folks sort of hate to leave their summer homes when it's the nicest part of the year. Being conductor on the Pullman takes a lot of work before everybody is satisfied. There was one woman who was a regular tartar on my last full trip and I must say I didn't blame her a mite."

"Things went wrong, did they?" "Did they? Well, I guess. In the first place, you would have to see her in order to appreciate what it must have meant to her. She was one of these dowager duchess women, the kind that are used to commanding the whole world and making the world like it. You know!

She was escorted to the train at New York by a swell with a high hat and a cane, who seemed to be her son, and they were much annoyed in a quiet sort of way because she had to take a section instead of a drawing-room. I was sorry that we had no better accommodations, but it was rather late to give her anything else, running full as we were, so she settled down to make the best of it. When I came through she was sitting reading a high-class magazine and a bunch of those purple flowers that are so swell lay on the opposite seat. Say, she looked like a queen running away from the war."

"You should have felt honored." "Oh, sure I did. However, she kept me busy from the start. In the first place, the porter and I wired for her maid to meet her, and then we fetched and carried for her all the afternoon. Along toward evening we had just got peacefully settled when she rang for the porter and sent him after me. I was sorting tickets, but I stuck them away and went. My land, it was something fierce!"

"A draft on the back of her neck?" "Worse than that," chuckled the conductor. "At one of the way stations a woman had come aboard with four tiny children—all of them tired and some of them frightened to death—and they had settled themselves in the section opposite my dowager duchess."

"Every one of those kids was yelling to beat the band and they were all babies with good, healthy lungs. The noise was something fierce! My lady wished the racket to cease, just as if I could do it, but I wasn't any expert at quieting babies though I've got two of my own. These didn't seem to be anything to do. The poor little mother was working hard herself, kind of scared, I guess, for fear I'd put her off the train or something. And nothing she could do would make those kids quiet down. Most of the passengers on the car were men, and they slid out to the smoker, but there did not seem to be any place for the lady to get away to. I told her that the best thing I could do was to get her a berth on a sleeper that we'd take on at 6 o'clock and then I skipped back to my ticket sorting.

It took a lot of wiring around and a good hour's work to secure a berth on that extra Pullman we were to take on, but finally I got it. The porter brought me news from the front from time to time and I knew those youngsters were still waiting. And the dowager was complaining that she was going clean crazy in about five minutes. The porter said the little mother had one child lying on one seat and two others on the other, while she sat between on a suitcase and held the baby in her arms. He said once that she was crying herself, kind of softlike and pitiful, and that the dowager duchess was just screeching, and sighing by turns. It was a most unholy mess."

"She must have been glad to learn that she could move out."

The conductor laughed.

"I went back," he continued grinning, "after dreading to hear all that noise again. And I could hardly believe my eyes at what I saw. The dowager duchess was sitting holding the tiniest baby in her arms fast asleep, and on the seat opposite the two middle children were pulling her purple flowers apart with giggles. The oldest child was looking at the pictures in the high-class magazine, and the little mother was sleeping with her head against the pillow that the porter had brought."

"The dowager duchess frowned at me because I spoke too loud when I told her that I had her section in the other car for her."

"Section?" she says to me surprised. "Why, I don't want a section. I can't move," she says. "I've got to take care of these children and let that poor soul rest," she says.

"Say, what do you know about that?"
