

SLAVS INVADE HUNGARIAN SOIL

Carpathians Crossed by Advance Patrols

BRITISH ARE HELD IN WEST

Germans Again Gain Possession of Thiaumont, Being Fourth Time This Field Work Has Exchanged Hands.

Russian cavalry patrols have advanced from Kimpolung, in southern Bukowina, over the passes of the Carpathians into Hungary, according to a wireless dispatch received from Bucharest.

The patrols made their way over the passes from Bukowina and down into Hungary on Tuesday, it is said. The raiders blew up buildings containing stores of food and munitions and cut telegraph wires. A sensation has been created in Budapest, the capital of Hungary, by the news that the invaders are actually on Hungarian soil.

Russian victories at Kolomea, near the foothills of the Carpathians in Galicia, and at Baronovich, 300 miles further north, are reported in the official Russian statement issued at Petrograd.

Positions west of Kolomea were captured after stubborn fighting and the enemy fled through the village of Potok Tcharyn, leaving it in the hands of the Russians. Several hundreds of prisoners and four cannon were taken during this fighting.

The German official statement claims that the Russians were forced back more than five miles on a twelve-mile front southeast of Tlumacz, twenty-seven miles north of Kolomea and twenty-three miles southeast of Buczacz. No mention of fighting in this region is made in the Russian communication.

Germans Concentrate on British.

Strongly reinforced, the Germans concentrated their entire strength in powerful attacks against the British in an effort not only to bring General Sir Douglas Haig's advance to a definite standstill but also to drive his troops out of the positions conquered in the first days of the new drive. These efforts were partly successful in that they made it impossible for the British to make any further substantial gains. All attacks aimed at recapturing lost ground were, however, fruitless, according to British headquarters' statement.

A twenty-four hours' battle in the streets of La Boiselle, taken by the British, ended in the Germans being compelled to leave their opponents in undisputed possession of the town.

French Make Gains.

New gains were made by the French troops south of the Somme in the new offensive. The German strategy was marked by apparent indifference toward the French lines on both banks of the river, all the Teuton reinforcements being concentrated against the British.

The official communique reported the capture by the French of the wood between Asevillers and Barloux and of the village of Belloy-En-Santerro, southeast of Asevillers. The French also took nearly the whole of the village of Estrees, the Germans still holding out in a block of houses, rendering desperate resistance. In this region the French took 500 prisoners.

Evidently with a view to extending their attacks the French sent out reconnoitering columns against the German lines between the Avre and the Aisne. According to the official report this resulted in a penetration of the Teuton first line trenches as far as the supporting trenches northeast of Beuvraignes and opposite Vingre. The columns returned to their lines with prisoners.

The Germans retook the field work of Thiaumont on the eastern bank of the Meuse. The French still retain their footing close to the field works, positions from which when driven out of the fortifications on June 30, they were able to launch attacks which recovered possession of the field work.

The successful attack followed a night of heavy bombardment of the position during which six separate German attacks, one of them under cover of flaming liquids, were sent forward only to break down under the French fire without making any gain. This was the fourth time that the position had changed hands.

CARRANZA NOTE IS CONCILIATORY

Arrogance Absent From First Chief's Latest Document

REPLY ARRIVES IN CAPITAL

Making No Demands, Carranza Suggests That American Troops Be Withdrawn From Mexican Soil.

The long expected note from Carranza reached Washington Tuesday. It arrived at the Mexican embassy and was presented to Secretary of State Lansing by Ilseco Arredondo, the Mexican ambassador designate.

In striking contrast to the belligerent tone of previous communications from Mexico City the new note, according to the statements of embassy officials is decidedly conciliatory and is characterized by an apparent desire on the part of the Mexican authorities to reach an amicable understanding with the American government.

It concedes, according to members of the embassy staff, the contention of the United States that conditions along the border by reason of the bandit raids have been intolerable and extends strong promises on the part of the Mexican government to restore order and protect American territory from further raids.

Furthermore, it is said, the note does not specifically renew the demands for a withdrawal of the American forces, but, contending that the presence of the troops on Mexican soil contributes to the unsettled conditions suggests that their withdrawal would go far toward removing the causes of friction and difficulty.

Calling attention to the fact that the Carranza government has accepted the principle of mediation as suggested by friendly powers, it invites a like expression from the United States. At the same time the expression is expressed that more satisfactory results could be obtained through direct negotiations.

It is explained at the embassy that the communication is intended to serve the double purpose of answering the American note of July 25, which was sent at the time of the imprisonment of the American troops at Chihuahua and demanded a statement of Carranza's future intentions and likewise of responding to the American note of June 20 which rejected the demands of Carranza for an immediate withdrawal of the American forces.

At the same time it is said the new Carranza note does not refer to the orders issued by General Jacinto Trevino, the Mexican commander, to attack any American detachments in Mexico that attempt to move in any direction toward the border, although it was concerning the authority for these orders that the American note particularly inquired. The embassy officials, in seeking to explain the conciliatory character of the communication, expressed the opinion that it was written personally by General Carranza and was inspired to a certain extent by the favorable impression created in Mexico City by President Wilson's New York speech and by the fact that General Pershing's forces is being gradually withdrawn toward the border. While officials of the state department has not been informed directly of the contents of the note the opinion was expressed in some quarters that the action of the president in calling out the national guard of the country may have had a sobering effect on Carranza's advisers.

If the text of the note bears out the statements made at the embassy today concerning it it is believed, not only in Latin-American diplomatic quarters, but among many officials of the administration, that a way out of the difficulty will now be found. Although the position of the state department has heretofore been that the American troops could not be entirely withdrawn so long as the Mexican government refused to accept the obligations of restoring order, nevertheless it was pointed out the United States has always been willing to withdraw when any assurance could be given of policing of the northern country by Mexican troops.

ABOUT SIXTY PER CENT PEACH CROP.

The peach crop in many sections of Pennsylvania will be a complete failure according to reports that have reached the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture but from present indications the crop for the entire state will be about 60 per cent of a normal yield with the fruit belt in Adams, Franklin, Fulton, Cumberland and York counties producing over 70 per cent of a normal yield.

The counties where the crop will be unusually small are Allegheny, Armstrong, Butler, Cambria, Forest, Jefferson, Lackawanna, Union, Warren and Wyoming. In Fayette, Indiana, Somerset and Westmoreland there are practically no peaches.

Thirty-four counties report that the crop will be better than two-thirds of the normal yield and many of them are counties in which peach growing has been made a specialty. Reports of a heavy crop have reached the department, but unless conditions are unfavorable during the remainder of the season about sixty per cent of the normal yield is expected from the State.

MOLE VS. MOTOR

To the observing tourist traveling through the Cumberland Valley there are still many reminders of the Civil War. Many of the substantial old farmsteads were raised again and again by Confederate cavalry on foraging expeditions. Prior to the battle of Gettysburg the Confederates troops marching up the valley took Chambersburg and Carlisle and threatened Harrisburg.

All of the mountain roads in the vicinity of the State Sanatorium at Mont Alto were traversed and retraversed by the soldiers of both armies.

Methods of transportation still in use at these institutions are, to the student, reminders of war-time days. The four-horse teams used for transport from Mont Alto station five miles up the mountain to the institution are identical with those which were used by the commissary department of the Union and Confederate armies.

Tons of foodstuff, coal, and general supplies must be transported over these roads to care for the small army of patients continually under treatment at the Mont Alto Sanatorium, and while Commissioner of Health, Samuel G. Dixon, has provided motor trucks and traction engines to do a portion of the work, the four-mule teams still do much of the hauling and are very necessary to that section of the State.

Let me but live my life from year to year
With forward face and unreluctant soul;
Not hastening to nor turning from the goal,
Not mourning for the things that disappear
In the dim past, nor holding back in fear
From the future evils, but with a whole
And happy heart that pays its toll
To youth and age, and travels on with cheer.

So, let the way wind up the hill or down
Though rough or smooth, the journey will be joy;
Still seeking what I sought for when a boy—
New friendship, high adventure and a crown—
I shall grow old—but never lose life's zest
Because the road's last turn will be the best—

LIVING OUT-DOORS

Little Talks on Health and Hygiene By Dr. Samuel G. Dixon.

God breathed into his nostrils the breath of life and man became a living soul—Genesis.

Air is life; without it man ceases to live. Living in impure air, his health gradually depreciates and he becomes a dyspeptic, predisposed to tuberculosis and other diseases. Often after suffering for years, during which time he is unable to enjoy the good things of life, he meets an untimely death.

In this climate the majority of us have to work in offices and buildings artificially heated during the cold season. Our places in which we spend so many hours during the winters and early spring days are far from having perfect ventilation. This therefore, is the reason for us all to take advantage of mild weather conditions to get all the fresh air possible to build our physical bodies up as to resist the unfavorable conditions we must submit during the cold months of the year.

This should apply to all ages, especially including babyhood and on up to old age. It means outdoor living as much as possible both day and night. When compelled to be in buildings keep the windows up; otherwise you have dead pockets of air in your rooms at your homes and place of occupation.

Clean, well aired, homes built so as to admit of plenty of fresh air all the year around and out-door living as much as possible during the summer, will do much to bring health to the home and just in proportion to your health your life will be worth living.
