Shockey and Joseph Miller, held at the court house Saturday afternoon, it is reported that work will be started within a few weeks on the proposed new state road between Somerset and Meyersdale, via Berlin and Garrett. The output of the present maple sugar season, farmers say promise to be the largest in the last seven or eight years and will be worth many thousands of dollars to the owners of sugar groves. Weather conditions for sugar broiling have been about right during the past four or five weeks and sap has flowed from the trees in streams. Sugar is quoted by the manufacturing farmers at 15 cents per pound, and maple syrup at $1.25 per gallon in the local market. Jobbers are of course asking a higher price for both sugar and syrup and they are shipping large quantities of both to city dealers.—Somerset Herald.

The State workmen's compensation board returned compensation to Mrs. Swanson, widow of a Windber bartender who fell down the stairs at the Leicester House in that place last fall, thus reversing Referee Jacob Snyder, who awarded compensation to Mrs. Swanson. The insurance company in which Swanson was insured peeled the case on the ground that Swanson's death had resulted from heart disease from which he had suffered prior to the fall, and the company was upheld by Windber physicians who testified that Swanson had a complete recovery from the fall and was discharged from the hospital as cured.—Somerset Herald.

YOUR HEALTH AND THE WAR

If we are to have war, let us have the lesson of the tremendous bearing of health problems on our armies in camp and our citizens at home well learned at home beforehand, so that we may not have to learn it by bitter and calamitous experience. It would seem to be a late date to have to point out the almost self-evident fact that sickness will decrease the national efficiency by just so much, whether it be among soldiers or non-combatants, but the general public does not yet give enough attention to this aspect of war's demands, the accent being placed on more spectacular elements of preparedness.

Each individual must consider himself a unit of our great population to be kept able to meet whatever comes along. If there was ever a time when the individual had the duty of taking thought of how he could keep in good health, it is now.

One of the first elements of the health of a nation, is its food. It cannot be healthy and strong without good food and plenty of it. Therefore agriculture and gardening must be intelligently and extensively stimulated, so that larger crops shall be brought forth.

The housewife's task will be to economize the food supply and cook it with skill, so as to make her meals tasty and digestible.

The streams from which our domestic water supply comes should be carefully guarded against pollution, so that communities shall not run the risk of being infected with some deadly disease.

Vaccination against typhoid is a valuable step in preparedness under conditions as they are at present and the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, through the agents of the Department of Health, is prepared to give virus for vaccination to those who can afford to purchase it.

While our water supplies have been improved in the Commonwealth so that typhoid had been cut down 75 per cent, vaccination against it during this emergency should bridge us over a period when we must attain the highest efficiency of health and give the health departments throughout the Commonwealth time to continue their work of reducing the pollutions of our streams, and enable our people to go on with their daily labors and produce food and all other things necessary for us to maintain our strength during any war.

Smallpox is a loathsome disease that is often fatal and under the best of circumstances creates a long period of incapacity for work, and one which demands the strictest kind of quarantining of all who may occupy the same home. This can be absolutely prevented by vaccination. The presence of smallpox would greatly handicap the efficiency of our great Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in serving the nation in time of war.

The Life Extension Institute, with whom we are worshipping, has estimated that nearly half the body building food and 70 per cent. of the sustaining food on American tables is derived from grains such as wheat, oats, corn, rye, barley, rice and buckwheat, and that these grains are to the human machinery what coal is to the manufacturing industries, the greatest source of heat and power. The time has come to consider these matters in a spirit of patriotism. It is the duty of every citizen to attain physical fitness, and of the people as a whole, to take measures for the increased production of food materials.

Wanton destruction of food is an injury to our country just as positively as destruction of munitions or arms, for in the last analysis a nation that is well fed is the nation that will prevail. These are matters already claiming the attention of the Federal Government.

Hand to hand with the mobilization of factories and munitions must go the mobilization of agricultural products, the planting of as many acres of land as possible with grain and vegetables, and the distribution of the crops in the most economical way.

THE GARDEN PLAN

Even since the average garden, prepared and planted at random proves a good investment, why not increase its returns by following a definite plan? The possibilities from letting crops closely follow one another or even overlap are legion.

There is for first consideration, the kinds of vegetables. These will depend largely upon the personal tastes of the family and the space available. The average-sized garden must be devoted to green vegetables rather than to crops like potatoes.

The garden plan may be drawn to show the exact shape and size of the plot and the points of the compass. To locate the crops to the best advantage, a knowledge of the habitually thin, dry or wet spots of the soil will be helpful.

Beds, or "patches," are wasteful of space and labor. Rows running north and south, the full length of the plot are economical and convenient. If a full row of one vegetable is not desirable, several kinds may be planted in the same row, but they should be similar in cultural habits and length of growing season.

By separating the vegetables selected into long and short season crops "companion cropping" may be practiced. This is simply the planting in adjacent rows, or in the same row, of early and late-maturing crops. With this system at least half the ground in a garden may be used twice in a season, even though full-season crops are grown. For example:

Cabbage plants are set in rows thirty-six inches apart and twenty-four inches apart in the row. Midways between the cabbage rows and also between the cabbage plants in the row, lettuce is planted. Early radishes are drilled in halfway between the lettuce and cabbage rows.

This combination is harvested as follows: the radishes in a month and the lettuce in seven or eight weeks; and the entire space is then left to the cabbage, just when it is needed.

"Succession cropping" is another space-saving practice. This plan follows short-season crops by a second planting of the same vegetable or a different vegetable. For instance, to-matoe-planting time comes shortly before the last peas are picked, so that the tomatoes may be planted in the space which the peas occupied. In a similar way, late cabbage may follow spinach or mustard which was planted earlier in the season, or turnips may be sown broadcast in the seed corn.
