

Entertain 2,000 Prisoners With Their Music and Impersonations

THE REGNIERS.

At the Ohio penitentiary in Columbus recently the Regniers, who come to the Chautauqua for an entertainment on the second day, gave their program of music and impersonations in the presence of nearly 2,000 prisoners. Chaplain Reed, who presented them, expressed an appreciation of their kindness and thanked Manager W. V. Harrison and the Redpath Bureau for the opportunity afforded. After the entertainment the party was shown through several of the prison's most interesting departments. Preceding the Regnier program the penitentiary orchestra played several selections, and these musicians were among the most interested auditors when the entertainment was under way.

Billy Sunday Hits Beefsteak Trail; Home Economics Expert Responsible

FOR three successive years Mrs. Ida C. Bailey Allen, who is to give her "preparedness in the home" talk here on the second afternoon of the Chautauqua, gave lectures and demonstrations at Columbus under the direction of the Ohio State Journal.

During Mrs. Allen's first visit to Columbus the Billy Sunday campaign was under way, and Mr. Sunday accepted an invitation for himself and party to partake of a luncheon, the items of which were selected by himself and prepared by Mrs. Allen. The meal was prepared and eaten on the stage of Memorial Hall. The food which Mr. Sunday requested consisted of beefsteak, baked potatoes and celery salad. In other words, Billy hit Mrs. Allen's beefsteak trail.

Colonel E. S. Wilson, whose daily editorials in the State Journal are a source of interest to thousands, was particularly impressed by Mrs. Allen's lectures. At various times he commented editorially, saying on one occasion: "It is a treat to hear Mrs. Allen, for she is as bright as she is instructive. She knows all about her subject and to hear her is like listening to a melody."

On the occasion of her last visit to Columbus Mrs. Allen was presented to her Memorial Hall audience by Mayor George J. Karb. Later in the week the secretary of the state board of agriculture attended one of the sessions and took occasion to say: "I feel that there is a divorce case ahead for the girl who cannot cook a meal or bake a loaf of bread. I think every man in Ohio will support a law compelling you to cut an apple pie into four pieces instead of six. Mrs. Allen can tell you how. Good cooking has a lot to do with health. You can get a better complexion out of good cooking than you can out of a box of medicine or paste. A good dinner is the weapon of the politician and the lobbyist when they want to put something through. We give a great deal of attention to the balanced ration for the hog and the cow. I think we ought to give more attention to the balanced ration for the man."

Mrs. Allen's Chautauqua lecture, "Mrs. Uncle Sam Wades In," will appeal to the men of the city as well as to the women.

TRI-STATE BUSINESS SCHOOL CHANGES HANDS

Chas. S. Catherman, Manager of Strayer's College, Baltimore, takes Over Local Institution.

The Tri-State Business College, formerly the Mountain City Business College which was started in 1901, has been sold by B. Frank Shaffer to Chas. S. Catherman, manager of Strayer's Business College, Baltimore. Mr. Catherman has already taken charge of the school and will continue to operate it under the name of Catherman's Business School. Mr. Shaffer, the retiring owner and manager, has been connected with the school since May, 1904, a period of thirteen years.

Extensive improvements will be made to the school building on South Centre street. The interior will be repainted and decorated, and entire new equipment will be installed. The second and third floors of the building will be used for school purposes. Mr. Catherman will retain the present faculty and make additions from time to time. Accommodations will be made for from 150 to 200 students.

The new head of the local business school is one of the best business educators in the country. He has been in school work for about twenty years, and has numerous testimonials as to the high standard of his work. Mr. Catherman is a graduate of West Chester State Normal School, West Chester, Pa.; The Pierce Business School, Philadelphia; and the Emerson School of Efficiency, New York. He has been managing Strayer's Business College, Baltimore, the largest in the state for several years.

In addition to the course now given at the school, Mr. Catherman will introduce courses in secretarial training, civil service work, telegraphy, accountancy and personal efficiency. During the winter a special course will be offered once a week in penmanship and rapid calculation.

THE FARMER.

By OPIE READ

OPIE READ

Here Third Day of the Redpath Chautauqua.

THE man who has worked on a farm all his life has just as many pleasures to look back upon as the city merchant. The farmer may in his time have bought the gold brick, but maybe the merchant has been taken in by a bigger swindle. And along toward the end they both have something to think about. And that is about all there is to life's contentment. At a very early age we learn to live in the past. The farmer has his past closer about him than other men have. He has seen the same seasons pass over the same endeared fields.

In a small way the successful farmer is a statesman. Experience is his guide, and we are told that all wisdom dates back to experience. It is true that he doesn't handle as much money as the banker, nor does he handle as much bread as the baker, but the baker can eat only a certain amount, and the money that the banker handles—money that can't relieve a real want of nature—ain't doin' his soul any particular good.

The doctrine of contentment is an old one, but a better one was never preached. And the farmer ought to be the very model of contentment. He would be if he stopped to think. Men that set the world afire die in the flames. Greatness at least acknowledges its weakness. In this there is a valuable lesson. It should teach us to ourselves this vital question, What is success? It ain't noise, for silence must follow, and silence can last longer than sound. There never was a storm as long as the calm. They that find happiness in bluster will find misery in quietude.

To Whom It May Concern:

As President of Strayer's Business College, Incorporated, Baltimore, Maryland, I employed Mr. Charles S. Catherman as a teacher for that institution about fifteen years ago. Mr. Catherman came to us very highly recommended and he fulfilled all of our expectations.

The fact that Mr. Catherman remained with Strayer's Business College, Baltimore, for fifteen years, rising from his first position to that of head of the Commercial Department then to Superintendent of Instruction and afterwards to Acting Manager of the institution, speaks more eloquently of the high esteem in which he was held than any words that I could write.

I understand that it is now the purpose of Mr. Catherman to engage in the school business on his own account and I take pleasure in commending him to the favorable consideration of the people in any community in which he may locate.

Mr. Catherman's education and experience fit him to render superior service along the line of Commercial education to any persons who may favor him with their patronage and my knowledge of him as a man leads me to believe that no effort on his part will be spared to give his patrons the very best business training that it is possible for them to procure.

Chautauqua Needed Abroad, Says Noted Chinese Statesman-Lecturer

THAT the Chautauqua movement would be the greatest boon to the Chinese people in opening to them a new world vision is the belief of Dr. Ng Poon Chew, famed internationally as statesman, orator, humorist and author. "At the present time the Chautauqua is impractical in my country," says Dr. Chew. "The proper environment of intelligence is wanting. My people are not sufficiently developed to appreciate the work and not public spirited enough to support it, but the time may come in the distant future when the Chautauqua movement may be inaugurated with success."

Dr. Chew, who is to be here on Patriotic Day, during the Chautauqua, considers the Chautauqua movement the most remarkable institution in America. He asserts that it is the direct product of American spirit and at the present time can exist only in America. "Its continued existence," he maintains, "requires democratic atmosphere, public spirit in the communities, liberal policy along religious lines, political principle and broad mindedness on the part of a country's citizens."

"The Chautauqua movement presents the world thought and the world force to the most remote and secluded village in the land and makes it feel the pulse vibration of all activities of all mankind. Its moral, religious and intellectual power is beyond estimation. The community which continues to demand and support the annual visit of the Chautauqua is to be congratulated, for the Chautauqua institution is just as much an asset as a school or a church."
