CHRISTMAS SEAL CLINIC REPORT

Much enthusiasm is evidenced in Confluence concerning the benefits derived from the health clinics financed from sale of Christmas Seals.
 Prof. C. C. Shaffer has received the formal report of the study of pupils by Dr. W. P. Brown of the Pennsylvania Tuberculosis Society.
 Tuberculosis diagnosis is especially stressed by Dr. Brown in the finding of ten pupils with some evidences of suspicious infection with tuberculosis. Goiter also was discovered in one-fourth of the entire group, and the possibility of the mass medication of the entire school population is advanced by Dr. Brown as a successful and economical way to control the dangerous disability.
 Underweight was termed evidence of over-fatigue, lack of adequate rest, unbalanced foods. Fifteen of the 40 high school students were severely under standard weight. Mrs. C. E. Rowe and Mrs. H. H. Williams, of the Tuberculosis League, in presenting the report to the school authorities, urged the stimulation of action by parents and others in the improvement of health of this group. Preventive medicine is cheap when compared with the cost of preventable invalidism, they aver.
 Clinic examinations found the following conditions:
 Diseased tonsils..... 6
 Enlarged tonsils..... 8
 Dental decay..... 24
 Unclean teeth..... 18
 Posture defect..... 20
 Goiter..... 3
 Slight goiter..... 8
 Underweight 10%..... 29
 Dyskinesia..... 6
 Suspected tuberculosis..... 10
 Assisting in the management of of the clinic details under the supervision of Mrs. Earle Begg, were the following: Miss Betty Longridge, Miss Esther Gerhard, Miss Julia Frazee, Eugene Longridge, Louise Burnworth, Miss Reba Gerhard, Miss Hilda Wyatt, Miss Mary Trimpey.
 Dr. Brown was loaned to the Tuberculosis League for this work by the Pennsylvania Tuberculosis Society. He is widely known for studies in tuberculosis, being president of the Mississippi Valley Sanatorium Association in 1920; 1921. At Meyersdale January 10th, Dr. Brown talked before the Rotary Club and invited members of the local medical profession, explaining the aims and accomplishments of the Tuberculosis Society.

Sharkey and Christner

It may take a little time for the truth to dawn on the cognoscenti, but nevertheless last week in boxing saw the beginning of a new heavyweight fistic dynasty.
 Jack Sharkey, the best of the crop that has been sluttering up the heavyweight division since Jack Dempsey was toppled off his throne the night of the Big Rain in Philadelphia, fighting about the best fight of his career, only was able to skin through and win by a whisker from one Meyer Christner, the bald-headed rubber puddler from Akron.
 Christner is the advance mark of a new heavyweight crop which will wipe the Heeneys, Paolinos, Risikos and eventually the Striblings and Sharkeys out of the picture. Christner himself is a bit too old—oh, what a fighter that blond Hercules would have been had he taken up the game ten or a dozen years ago—to scale the championship heights. But what he can do, and is doing, is to remove the pretenders and clear the way for younger and better men.
 Fighting the same kind of a fight he did against Sharkey, Christner undoubtedly will beat Heeney, Paolino and Risko. If Stribling can not display a better brand of fisticuffs than he has shown in other New York starts Christner will dispose of the young Georgian also.
 Stribling, Heeney, Paolino, Risko, none of them would have beaten the Christner who fought Sharkey to a standstill in the Garden last Friday night. Christner proved to those who read the signs along the fistic trail that it is idle to search longer for a real champion among the present crop of fistic headliners and that if a real champion is to come he must come from among the lesser knowns.—By George B. Underwood in the New York Telegraph.
