She Was Hunting a Hero

HAVE no objection to your being athletic and independent," Caroline's mother spoke slowly, "but doesn't it strike you that you are intolerant of those who have other testers?"

tastes?"
"Maybe so," the girl answered lightly. "But this I know. I am going West to the mountains. I am going to see big strong men who fear nothing and who are of a different breed than those I have known. I am going to escape from the sissies and the highbrows and when I come back I -well, maybe I will have entirely re-Caroline, in the mountain cabin, waited for the hero of the open spaces and the first man she saw, spaces and the first man she saw, other than old Abe Potter, who with his wife owned the retreat, was Leroy Boone. Boone was tall and slender. He wore nose glasses and spoke in a low voice. Except for his woodsman's clothes he looked like a college man. Caroline was disappointed and yet Leroy was the only man within sight."

"I have been waiting to meet a man of the West," she said, giving him one of her best smiles. "I want to learn all about the customs and people."

"It is probable you will find us such like the men of any other lace." He was amused at her enthusiasm

"You don't understand. I come from a little town in the East. I am vigorous and independent, in a place where girls are quiet and ladylike and men are studious and timid. I wish to forget books and science, and live with the trees and the hills. When I meet a man I want him to be-a miner, hunter, or even a stage rob-ber. Can't you see?"

The man of the West removed his spectacles, drew out a handkerchief and cleaned the lenses with delibera-

"They don't rob stages out here any more," he said, "and most of the cow-boys have gone in the movies." After a moment of deliberation he added, "Maybe, by hunting long enough, I could scare you up a man whose father had been a cattle-rustler?"

"I see," Caroline was offended. "You do not understand. But if life is so unexciting here why are you in the mountains?" "I might be a tourist like yourself

"I might be a tourist like yourself but I'm not. You see I work for the biological survey."
"Mercy that's a queer thing to have in the hills! It means college education and books; that you are a student and not a real wild westerner after all. I didn't think," she caught herself before confessing she did not think his appearage was promising think his appearance was promising and continued, "I didn't think it would be so difficult to meet the kind of men I've read about."

When Leroy Boone came by again he brought her a rare flower he had found on the trail and again he smiled oddly when he saw she was not

"Your western man," he said, "the one you have pictured, would not have picked a flower and carried it so carefully. No—I think he would have been shooting the lights out of a sa-loon or rescuing a leather-skirted girl from the hands of the villainous fore-man of a rival ranch. It's too bad there isn't a motion picture house up here." He went his way, walking leisurely as a man with plenty of

"He's angry because I didn't thank him for his flower," Caroline decided. "Well, as soon as he understands I do not wish biological surveyors bringing me posies, I will be better satisfied. I can see plenty of men like him at home." And when she returned to the cabin she said nothing to the Potters of the man who had no place in her picture or scheme.

Several times more the girl met him and at last she admitted to herself there was something in his quiet, almost tolerant manner that attracted her even while it exasperated. But she would not surrender. She had taken the superior attitude and until he proved himself a hero, worthy of his environment, she would continue disdainful. By the time she came to leave they were as well acquainted as the peculiarly strained situation would allow.
"I am sorry you are going," he said,

"sorry because I will miss you and because you should stay long enough to get the real values of our West."
Was the man going to propose?
And what would she say? Caroline felt suddenly her values had changed and that she was going to miss him. Then came that tantalizing smile and the banter which enraged her.

"If I were the sort you have been looking for I would kidnap you, throw you over a horse and take you to the parson. But as it is, I can only "Say good-by," finished Caroline and she hastened to the cabin vow-ing she would be glad to forget this man who had no right to pretend to be of her West.

As Abe Potter drove her over to the station he mentioned Boone. "He works for the biological sur-

A PIG SECRET

Mrs. Lazy Pig shook her snoot which meant that she wasn't always spoiling her children, for some of the other pig mothers had said that she did.

"I'll tell them."

So Mrs. Lazy Pig, Lawrence Lazy Pig, Letty Lazy Pig, and four other Lazy Pig children, as well as the other pigs, all listened to Mr. Lazy Pig while he told his story.

"We had the usual family name of Pig," he said, "until a short time ago. "We were fed and fed, ah, such

"Why didn't we grow fat?
"Ah, we don't know, or if we do—we won't tell, for that is our secret. "The farmer most certainly doesn't know what keeps us from growing

"We think you're very clever," said the other pigs, "and we wish we knew your secret.
