Ensemble Fashion for Evening Wear

Hats and Coats Included in Smart Innovations of Present Season.

Now comes the evening ensemble, even with hats and coats. The an-nouncement from Paris that these ac-cessories were to be added to the for-mal costume was rather startling and at first not wholly credited. An en-semble on this very line, however, was presented with complete success in one of the smart fashion revues in New York, writes a fashion correspondent in the New York Times. Manikins, dressed in handsome fabrics and sheer stuffs for a formal occasion, wearing small evening "hats" nade of rich passementerie, gold with pearls, strass and pearls and finely embroidered hats of all pearls in natural tints and in the pinks, blues, havenders and shell greens in which they are now to be had.

Also, they wore, in the most non-chalant manner, short, decolette, sleeveless "coats" over evening gowns of which these tiny jackets were a part. The ensembles were artistic and complete and the details so subtly worked out that the effect was the reverse of startling and altogether

This latest phase of unusual combinations in evening dress was but binations in evening dress was but one of many. Another is the bolero. Whatever the model, the bodies usually take a bolero form in many of the gowns. This feature of last year, which had its first success in afternoon dress, has now appeared in the sheerest stuffs and most delicate treatments in the sort of costume that will be worn for dipling at a restanwill be worn for dining at a restaunt, the play, or for the smart supper

The bolero is made in practical tacket form and may be removed. jacket form and may be removed. Its most important adaptation is in the decolette bodice in which it is seen in a variety of designs. One was shown in a dinner gown of black point d'esprit, which is exceedingly fashicuable this season and is combined with wide bands of black chantilly lace over shell-pink chiffon. The waist was decelett gut round and deep, lower. over sneil-pine clinion. The waist was decolette, cut round and deep, lower at the back than in the front. Net fastened to each shoulder strap had the appearance of being dropped to fall in graceful folds between, ending just above the hips. The arrangement was the same, back and front, and the curving lines were repeated in the skirt by the use of bands of the lace. In both holero and skirt the dip of the drapery was longer at the back.

Girdle Concealed by Bolero.

In another evening gown of sea-green chiffon the bodice was long and soft in front, and there was a girdle, which was concealed at the back of which was conceased in the back of the bolero. It swung free, with con-siderable fullness. The entire bodice was dotted with rhinestones that sparkled like dew drops on the sheer green. The skirt had a deep circular flounce formed in intricate lines rippling about the bottom and converging toward the middle front, where were two large motifs of rhinestones between the belt line and the knee. In a delightful evening costume, which the designer Irfe describes as "a fantasy in lace," a bolero is used as a part of the gown at the back, where it is added to the bodice as a flounce, starting in a narrow plaited frill on each shoulder and cascading from the back it appears to be just one graceful jabot from the top of the low decollete neck line to the very tip of the skirt, which is a two-flounce model all but touching the floor. The skirt is just high enough to show the jeweled heels of slippers of pale green crepe de chine, which are ornamented with large square rhinestone buckles. The face of this model is cired to a high luster and veils a turquoise blue slip.

fled, as is usual, but flat. This admits of treatment as if it were a heavy silk or satin. The skirt is fitted snug-ly to the hips to keep the silhouette slim and flares widely at the bottom It is high in front, somewhat longer at the back and very long at each side. The plain tulle surface is saved from dullness with a large antique buckle of brilliants, which holds in front a crepe de chine girdle dropped at the back to accentuate the bolero bodice. This is detached at the lower edge and then caught under in the manner of a blouse Lace Over Taffeta.

Nicole Groult, who never strains at effect, achieves chic in an evening gown of black chantilly lace over black a slip but a part of the creation. In this the sleeveless bodice of taffeta is cut square in the neck, and the lace which covers it as a blouse is draped like a scarf from one shoulder and carried across the back, forming a bolero, which drops over a swathing girdle of the silk. One of the extremes in evening dress shown this season is an original model from a prominent New York house. This is an artistic creation of nouse. This is an artistic creation of black tulle which presents a silhou-ette of five flounced tiers. The gown has a simple bodice which disappears under a belt of black velvet ribbon embroidered in brilliants, with upturned ends crossed in front. This outline is repeated in each of the three flounces of the skirt, which ends just below the knees in front and drops below the knees in front and drops low at the sides, one side being longer than the other. The bodice of this gown is cut loose at each side of the belt and hangs in the form of a bolero at the back. It has a strip of the same velvet ribbon embroidered to match the belt over each shoulder. The extreme of the bolero mode is the side girdle with which the hips are swathed in some of the gowns, the bodice being lifted to blouse at the the bodice being lifted to blouse at the back. This subtle and sophisticated design is being adopted by all the prominent French couturiers in one way or another. Louiseboulanger makes a long, slim evening gown of Japanese green noncrushable velvet with a bodice that has a slender vest with a bodies that has a stellar vest of silver tinsel. This is crushed about the waist and hips, meeting in front. The skirt, which is slashed at the bottom, dips low at the back and has graduated panels at the sides, is attached with a shirred heading and tached with a shirred heading and lifted sharply in the middle.

Velvet Beans Are Soil Improvers

Best Way to Plant This Crop for Good Results Is With Corn.

Velvet beans, while not recommended for hay, are as valuable for soil improvement as soy beans or cow-peas and at the same time cost only peas and at the same time cost only half as much.

"The best way to plant this crop for good results is with corn," says E. C. Blair, extension agronomist at the North Carolina State college. "They will do as well or better with corn than if planted alone and the grower will receive a profit from the corn in addition to improving his soil."

Plant in Alternate Rows. The corn and beans should be planted in alternate rows, three feet apart, dropping the beans six inches apart on poor soil and about one foor apart on rich soils. Cultivate the corn until the bean vines have covered the middle. In this way a ton or more of vegetation, worth $14 in plant food will be added to each acre planted to these crops.

On light sandy land or on very poor soils velvet beans make a much better solls velvet beans make a much better growth than do soy beans, while on good land they make equally as good a growth and are much more valuable as a fall grazing crop. Cattle may be turned into the fields at frost and grazed until the vines and seed are

Where the beans are planted for grazing purposes, it is a good plan to plant two rows of corn to one of vel-vet beans. This gives a clear space between rows for harvesting the corn and will also furnish sufficient grazing for the average farm animals.

Mr. Blair states that velvet beans and the Biloxi variety of soy beans grow together with excellent results. The heavy stalks of the soy beans help to hold up the beans, which makes for a larger growth and a corresponding increase in value to the land as well as grazing.

Prune Grapes in Winter

to Get Best Results

Winter is the season for pruning grapes—anytime when the wood isn't frozen, for then the vines are brittle and will snap off if handled.

Pruning grapes is in reality thinning the crop. The idea is to remove enough wood so that the strength of the vine will be thrown into fewer bunches, and make them larger and finer. In general this result will be best gained by pruning the vine to about 30 or 40 buds distributed over four or five canes.

The size of the canes is important. According to Michigan studies the best yields are from canes about one-fourth of an inch thick, measured between the fifth and sixth buds. Big canes have spent their strength in producing wood and are poor produe.

Cut Out Over-Wintering

Get after the fire-blight during the dormant season by cutting out the over-wintering cankers, for they are the sources of next year's infection. The cankers are often found at the base of blighted twigs and are dark-sunken areas in the bark. The cank-ers should be cut out beyond the dis-colored part of the inner bark. The wound should be disinfected with cor rosive sublimate and painted over with white lead paint, or coal tar. Blighted twigs and branches should be Blighted twigs and branches should be cut off during the growing season about six inches below the blighted part and the stub disinfected. The disinfecting can be quickly done with a swab on the end of a stick which is carried in a bottle of disinfectant. A fast growing tree is more susceptible to fire-blight than a slow-growing one, and a tree in full bearing is groutly less susceptible than a young usually less susceptible than a young
