COUNTY AGENTS' NEWS LETTER

Fruit Damaged Due to Cold Wave

No one at this time can tell the damage done to fruit due to the recent cold spell. There is no question but that some damage has been done. There was a hardening-off period prior to the low temperature. The center pith of the bloom turning black when frozen does not tell the whole story because the stems are very tender and may be injured. If these stems have been injured there will be what is known as the "fruit drop" a little later on.

Home Grounds Improvement

During the past week Mr. Emil Kent, Extension Landscape Gardener, was in the County assisting in selection, proper placing and planting of shrubs for the purpose of beautifying the home grounds. Much comment has been made on homes where some thought has been given to the seeding of flowers and the planting of shrubs. This condition is a good advertisement for the community. "Beautiful homes and good gardens" should be a slogan for Somerset County.

Executive Committee Meeting

At the last executive committee meeting it was decided to conduct a Farmers Auto Tour to State College for Farmers' Day. Farmers' Day is June 20th and 21st. We will leave Somerset the morning of June 20th and return the evening of June 21st or the morning of the 22nd. Mr. C. B. Baermeister consented to see that Stonycreek Township would sign up 100 per cent for the Tuberculosis Area Testing Plan.

Mice-Girdled Trees Saved By Grafting

Orchards visited by State College extension fruit workers show much more injury from mouse girdling than many growers imagine.

This injury caused by the mice ravages may result in a heavier loss of trees than experienced for several years unless immediate action is taken to remedy the trouble. Proper protection can be secured by bridge-grafting.

Where trees are found girdled, the first step is to remove the soil from around the trunk so that the uninjured bark below the girdle will be exposed. Often growers wonder how many sections to use. The larger the number of sections inserted and bridged over the girdle the greater the food-carrying power and naturally the less the injury.

After the bridging has been completed the ground should be heaped up about the tree to a height of two inches above the girdle. The time spent in repairing the girdled trees may mean the difference between a heavy crop of fruit next year and complete loss of the trees.

Circular 103, entitled "Budding and Grafting," which is published by the Pennsylvania State College, contains helpful information on this subject. It can be obtained at the Agricultural Extension office in Somerset.

Yellow Leaf Disease Dangerous to Cherry

Yellow leaf or shot hole is the most destructive fungus of cherry trees in Pennsylvania. It often defoliated most of the unsprayed orchards.

Symptoms of the disease are small, definite brown spots on the leaves. These eventually become so numerous and dense as to turn the entire leaf a yellow color, whence the name, yellow leaf. The leaves fall to the ground prematurely, and where preventative measures are not practiced defoliation occurs by picking time.

Obviously, defoliation results in the need of a new crop of leaves. The production of new leaves causes a severe drain on the food supply of the tree. In cases of unusually early defoliation new fruit buds are not able to form. Furthermore, the trees are considerably weakened and easily subject to killing by adverse winter weather.

Parasite Causes Disease

A fungus parasite causes yellow leaf. The source of new infection are the old leaves on the ground. Spores are liberated by the fungus during rainy periods and are splashed by rain or carried by air currents up into the trees. Examinations of the fungus this spring by State College extension plant pathologists reveal that the spores will mature and be ready to infect the trees soon after the petals fall.

On the lower surface of the infected leaves pinkish masses of spores are produced and these infect healthy leaves. The diseased leaves fall to the ground but the fungus contained in them lives through the winter and becomes active again the following spring.

Spraying controls the cherry leaf spot. Control by preventative measures involves applications of spray during the course of the season at sufficient intervals to protect the foliage. The applications necessary to accomplish such protection are made at the following times: (1) when the petals fall, (2) when the shucks are off the young fruit, (3) just before the cherries turn red, and (4) after picking. Self-boiled lime-sulphur is the material used. The same spray controls brown rot, which is the second most destructive disease of cherries.

Do Not Crowd Chickens Into Brooder Houses

Plan to have all chicks in the brooder houses no later than May 15. Certain precautions help to maintain health in the flock to get the best growth. Overcrowding the brooder house lowers the vitality of the birds and makes them more susceptible to diseases. Plan at least one square foot of floor space for every three chicks brood-

Garrett Boxing Bouts Draw Fine Crowd

The boxing bouts held at the Garrett Athletic Club on Tuesday evening of last week was a huge success. The main bout of the evening staged between Clyde Byrd of Somerset and "The Battling Barber" Gene Walters was a fine treat and ended in Walters gaining the judges decision after Byrd in every round, although Byrd put up a very courageous fight.

Curley Courtney of Meyersdale won on a technical K.O. in the 4th round of his fight. It was very even up to that time.

The curtain raiser was between Sammy Walters and Johnny Fullerton and they put up a good exhibition. The last bout of the evening was between the Cossel Brothers and it likewise was a thriller.

IDLE THREE YEARS, COKE PLANT RESUMES

After an idleness of three years, the Fort Hill plant of the Corrado Coal and Coke Company, near Connellsville, has been fired. Twenty ovens are in operation and 10 will be added next week.

If the demand for coke continues, the Clarissa and Nellie plants of the same company at Vanderbilt, near Connellsville will also be operated, it was announced by G. Corrado, president.

MAKING REAUDIT OF TOWNSHIP ACCOUNTS

A reaudit of the accounts of the Road Supervisors of Somerset township for the year 1928, was started by auditors Webster Barron, Harry Walker and Benjamin Letcher. Taxpayers of the township are represented at the new audit by William J. R. Hay and Paul Baker, both of the township. The township supervisors, Nelson Mosholder, William Davis and Samuel Manges, are also present at the audit. The audit is being held in the Assembly Room of the Court House.

Two chicks per square foot are enough where close confinement is practiced. It is advisable to remove the cockerels as soon as possible so the pullets will have more room. Encourage the young stock to roost after three weeks of age. If a complete ration is fed, there need be no concern about crooked keel bones.

Sweet Clover Best Temporary Pasture

Sweet clover is the "king of the legumes" for temporary pasture says Nicholas Schmitz, State College Extension Agronomist.

One acre of this legume will support from one to two cows from early spring until September. It furnishes a highly nutritious food, being well supplied with lime, phosphorus, and protein, all very essential to the dairy cow and the growing calf.

When sweet clover is used for pasture, the cows should be turned in as soon as the plants have reached the height of 3 to 4 inches. They relish the sweet clover better then later when the plants are older and bitter in taste. Best results are obtained if enough cows are pastured to keep the legume grazed down to 8 or 10 inches.

Sweet clover is sown at the rate of 15 to 20 pounds per acre. Sow it with some other clover so that the sweet clover will be some growth even when the sweet clover fails because of poor soil preparation or some other unfavorable condition.

There must be a good supply of lime to insure success, because sweet clover will not grow on sour soil. Take a sample of soil from the field to be seeded so that it can be tested for lime requirement. Where no more than a ton of lime per acre is needed it will be safe to seed sweet clover after the lime has been supplied. Where sweet clover has not been grown previously on the soil, inoculation with the proper bacteria is necessary.

Inspect Strawberries Under Mulch At Once

Watch the condition of strawberries under mulch.

Many Somerset county growers of strawberries who desire the highest yield always take the added precaution after the ground is frozen in the fall to protect the sensitive plants with a mulch of straw or straw manure. This aids in extending the period of fruit bud information and increases the possibilities of a heavier crop.

Removal of this mulch can be done to early. At this time strawberry growers should inspect their patches, lift the mulch, and see if the foliage is discolored. If the leaves are becoming yellow, this indicates that the mulch is too thick and is beginning to smother the plants. By removing part and stirring the rest of the mulch, better aeration will result and the plants will be able to resume a natural condition. Working part of the straw into the space between rows will retard wood growth, and later this material will add humus to the soil.

Even if discoloration is not found it is a good plan to fork up the straw lightly and leave it over the rows for a while to furnish additional protection for the plants.

NEWCARITIS Is the Cause of the Return of the Annual Spring URGE

"Newcaritis" has succeeded spring fever as an annual malady, according to H. I. Phillips, humorist. Analyzing its symptoms and effects in The American Magazine, he confesses that he is now suffering from newcaritis in its most virulent form.

"And I'm growing weaker every hour," he adds. "Few men are immune. The fellow without a car feels that gnawing urge to get one; the man who has a car longs to trade it in for something bigger and better; the plutocrat with a covey of benzine rickshaws feels the impulse to add to his collection a few models with more filigree work on the panels.

"As early as the January automobile show I first feel the craving to possess a car that has never been dreamed of. But as much as the new models tempt me I push the idea away with a resolute, 'Nothing doing!' The old car is like new. The engine is a marvel, there isn't a scratch on the body and the tires are good for another ten thousand miles."

"About the first of February after gazing into the salesroom windows a few hundred times, I say to myself, 'I don't see how they can turn out such beautiful cars for the money.' By Washington's birthday I have probably received thirty or forty circulars giving pictures of 1929 models and bearing an urgent invitation to follow Mr. Ketchum to give you a demonstration."

"I begin to reflect how wonderfully the makers improve their models every year and to realize that my car needs new fenders and its motor thoroughly overhauled. Then, around the middle of March I weaken and allow Mr. Ketchum to call and give me a demonstration. When this is over I am pretty well sunk. Not much more is needed to pull me under and by April the last urge comes when several of my neighbors pass the house in glistening new sedans and look condescendingly on my last year's car standing at the curb. That settles it. I go to the telephone and call Mr. Ketchum.

"It is a curious thing how a brand-new car will thrill a man. Even if he has his last car only one summer, there will be a certain zest in trying out a smarter model. There seems to be no sentiment in the ownership of an old boat. Back in the buggy days, men became so fond of horses that they hated to see them sold and I have known people to wax sentimental over the sale of a bicycle that had been in the family for a long time. But I have yet to observe a fellow shed any tears when he has to turn in a last year's automobile for this year's model.

"The minute a man lets his car go without washing after a muddy spell, fails to get peevish when he finds a hub cap rusty and shows no emotion at the discovery that someone has struck a match on the door, he is practically in the market for a new car.

"Well, the automobile makers of this country plan to turn out 7,000,000 cars this year and they won't expect to sell them to people who have never had an automobile before. There must be at least 3,500,000 others like me. The man who drives the old teakettle designed by Rube Goldberg and synchronized by the American Can Company and boasts, 'I've had it seven years now and I just can't wear it out,' has almost disappeared from American life. "Newcaritis is responsible."
