and for vice president a representative of the Silver Republican party, is one of the most encouraging and inspiring spectacles in recent politics. Its un selfishness and magnanimity, its testimony of the precedence of the cause of the people over any merely partisan advantage, raised the procedure of that convention into the serene upper air of true civic heroism. The Silver Repub-licans, 1,330 delegates, were indeed eager to name the ticket chosen at Sioux Falls, but to the great Democratic convention another course commended itself.

"That convention selected Hon. Adlaf E. Stevenson, of Illinois, a man of unimpeachable character and ripe political experience, who as a member of congress more than 20 years ago was a close associate and colaborer of Gen. J. B. Weaver and other great leaders in the reform political movements of that day, and who, as vice president from 1893 to 1897, distinguished himself by rebelling against the betrayal of nocratic principles by President Cleveland.

"Everybody knows that either Mr Stevenson or Roosevelt is to be the next vice president of the United States. I am expected to take a laborious part in the campaign. I shall, of course, advocate the election of Bryan and Stevenson. In what light should I appear before the American people if, while advocating the election of one ticket, I should be going through the form of running on another? No body in the United States would think I had the slightest chance of being elected, and nobody would believe that I considered myself seriously as a candidate unless at the same time he believed me to be absolutely lacking in common sense. Whom could such a phantom candidacy deceive? What respect should I deserve, indeed, if in such a matter I should attempt to deceive anybody whatsoever? I know the People's party to be composed of men most exceptionally keen and expert in political judgment. So obvious a sham could not elude their vision."

There they attempted to hire a carriage to drive here, but all the liverymen refused their requests. They telegraphed back that they would here again in the afternoon, and they came. Nearly 4,000 people were at the depot, and again they were permitted to leave the car. They then said: "If we cannot get off here we will go on to Chicago, but we cannot promise that we will not be back here next Sunday." The city is now quiet again.

Conger and Secretary Squiers bear date of July 21, the belief, founded not only upon them, but also upon collat-eral and later information, is that the legationers are yet safe from at least immediate harm. At present there is no means of knowing whether the ministers will accept the offer of the Chinese imperial government to provide an escort for them to Tien Tsin, but it is surmised they will prefer to remain within the British legation at Pekin until the arrival of the allied forces. Should they leave for Tien Tsin, in all probability, it would be because they regarded it the safer course to pursue. It is thought to be not unlikely that the Chinese government may be very insistent upon the departure of the ministers, in the ope, if they can be gotten to Tien Tsin in safety, the storming of Pekin may be averted.

The inhibition of cipher dispatches to the ministers, while a serious breach of diplomatic usage, is not regarded here with apprehension. The Chinese government, it is pointed out, is sus picious of the actions and intent of the powers, and probably has adopted this precaution to prevent communication to the ministers of details of the military movements. It is evident from the adoption of this measure that the imperial government regards itself as antagonistic to, if not actually at war with the powers. Thus far no inhibition has been placed upon cipher dis-patches passing between the various governments and their consular representatives in China, outside of Pekin.
