Tepel, of Williamsport arrived in this city Friday morning, ish charities are made on this day, and for the purpose of escorting to Williamlarge sums are annually collected for the sport, Stanley M. Sheffer who was arrested in this city on Wednesday evening, At B'nai Zion Temple the Rev. Adon a warrant, charging him with murlerous assault on the person of George vices, commencing on Sunday evening, W. Owen. Both Owen and Sheffer are residents of Williamsport and have always been on friendly terms until the altercation. It is said by friends of Sheffer that the real cause of the fight was a disput money matters. The informant says Sheffer stated that he had an agreement with Owen whereby the latter was to pay him a commission on all stock of the Federal Zinc and Lead company Full Automatic Stripers, Lizzie Henkie, that he (Sheffer) would sell, or would find a customer for. This friend then goes on to state that Sheffer secured customers to buy stock enough to run his commission up to $75. This amount he continued, Sheffer was trying to get when the fight occured. Owen called at Sheffer's house to make a settlement, and, the friend alleges, wanted Sheffer to accept stock in the company for the money that was due him. Sheffer wanted the cash, as is alleged to have been promised him, and as he wanted to leave town the stock would not have been of much service to him. After strong words had been used by both men, Sheffer, it is alleged, struck Owen on the head with a hammer. Constable Tepel and his prisoner left Fri-

A Strange Disease Attacks Fowls. A number of the owners of fowls of lifferent kinds in this city are completey dismayed over the great losses they have sustained lately from the ravages of a disease, the exact nature of which Fetterman, A. Kemmer, W. Wertman, has not yet been determined.

Benjamin Bookmiller, who usually has a fine lot of barn yard fowls and pigeons Hendricks, W. Broscius; Misses Ella at his home on North Mill street, reports Lunger, Kate Hendricks, Priscilla Jones, that during last week he lost seventy Mrs. Nase, of Philadelphia, Mrs. Thos. seven ducks and a large number of pigeons and John Bookmiller, First street, claims to have suffered the loss of over sixty fowl. The majority of these were chickens; the remainder being made up of ducks and pigeons. On York's Hill the losses have also been heavy and the disease seems to be spreading to differ-Howe & Polk's mill has been repaired.

ent parts of the town. The first symptom, as noticed by the Bookmiller Brothers, is a laxness in the muscles of the neck which allows the head to droop almost to the ground just previous to death; which comes about six hours after the disease sets in.

One remarkable peculiarity about the effects of it is that as soon as the victim gives its last gasp, the feathers all be ome loose and should the dead bird be given the least jar they will fall out until it looks as though it had been hand picked for sale in the market.

No effectual remedy has been found for the disease and owners of flocks that have become affected become discouraged in their attempts to check its spread.
