LOCAL INDUSTRIES

The situation in the great strike of the thracite miners is practically unchang so far failed and no attempt will be made to run the mines in that locality at presries are working and the North Frankn colliery is running short handed. The only collieries operating full handed are hose at Trevorton. The effects of the shortage of coal are now being felt throughout the entire East and at all anthracite market points. The dealers in this city say that it is impossible to buy coal at present except at ruinous prices and most of them have orders enough to clean up their present

The hardest situation to face in this city is the effect the coal strike will have on our industries both large and small. should the miners remain idle much onger the most of our industries will be ompelled to close down. There is but one mill in the city that has coal enough to continue operations should the strike be a lengthy one. Many families have already secured their winter's supply of coal. To a Morning News representative one of our leading dealers last evening said that he thought at least three-fourths of the domestic users had filled their bins. He also stated that it looked as though the present prices might prevail the entire winter even though the miners should eturn to work next week as it will be impossible to stock the market in a few months time.
