BOWSER AT IT YET.

THE OLD MAN MAKES A FOOL OF HIMSELF PER USUAL.

This Time It Was All Caused by the Fact That Mrs. Bowser Was Away, and He Thought That the House Needed Cleaning.

[Copyright, 1900, by C. B. Lewis.] Mrs. Bowser had gone to her mother's in the country for a few days for a began to pour down and continued for change of air, and Mr. Bowser and the family cat had been left at home to painting, he made another mixture of samily cat had been left at home to run the house and look out for things. Before leaving she extracted a solen promise from him that he would not ! disturb things while she was absent, but on the evening before she was expected home, and while he sat just outside the door in the back yard, a cigar in his mouth and the cat seated on another chair beside him, a sudden feeling of pity for Mrs. Bowser came over him. When she returned from her vacation, she would have to go right to work at fall housecleaning, and by the time she had finished all the benefits of the country air would be dissipated.

"By George, but I'll go at it tomorrow morning!" exclaimed Mr. Bowser as he recalled that business was a little dull and he could spare a day or the bodice portion in a deep square or V stores. There was a sound of gurgling and chuckling close at hand, and he turned to look at the cat. It was she, but she put on such an innocent expression that he laid the chuckling to a boy on the other side of the fence. He went to bed early to get a good start in the morning. He was alone in the house, and as he slept he dreamed that a big cat sat on his breast and grinned into his face.

At 8 o'clock next morning he had oat, vest, collar and tie off and was ready for the fray. The first thing to be done, as he figured it, was to rush all the parlor furniture into the back yard and give him some room to spread himself. He had decided that the woodwork ought to be gone over with a light coat of paint, and after getting the furniture out he went looking around for old paint cans. He had painted the veranda and the flowerpots in the spring, and he found some of the mixture left. It was a tender pink, which would have looked too lovely for anything on the cheeks of a bride, but it needed thinning down.

He knew that practical painters never used water, vinegar, cold tea or coffee to thin out paint, but his knowledge stopped short there. It was when his eye rested on the kerosene can that he solved the puzzle. When the paint had been duly repaired for use, a little oil was added from the sewing machine can to give it be worn extensively.

The odor wasn't "walking" and "shopping" skirt, that just escapes the ground, an addition to the "rainy day" skirt and of lighter major that would have taken an average painter a full day, with his going back to the shop for putty, sandpaper and around the corner for beer, but at noon Mr. Bowser stood in the middle of the room and ran out his tongue and looked around and saw that his work was finished. In addition to the bloom on the peachblow color, the oil had brought out thousands of bubbles, but he did not regard them as drawbacks. On the contrary, he rather prided himself on having struck something new in the line of high art painting. Mrs. Bowser had complained of moths. Yes, he remembered that she had been fighting moths for years and that it had been hard work to keep them down. Whether she had used the ax, the crowbar or hot water he could not remember, but she had slaughtered them without pity and left their corpses unburied. Before he went out to a restaurant for his lunch he made a hunt for moths, and his search was ably seconded by the cat. It was the cat who finally found one burrowed in a dark corner, and Mr. Bowser's resolution was taken. The moths or the carpets or something must be exterminated. He didn't go to a drug store when he went out and ask for a remedy. Believing that a waiter in a restaurant ought to know all about moths, he confided his troubles to the man and was answered:

"Yes, sir, I can tell you what to do. I've known all about moths ever since I was knee high to Tom Thumb. You want to sprinkle that carpet with a compound made of water, lime and kerosene. Make up about six gallons of it and don't be stingy about putting it on. The idea is to kill the moths all at once and have no long drawn out suffering around the house."

Mr. Bowser got the ingredients and made a six gallon crock full, and then, taking a flower sprinkler, he went over the carpet and started every moth on the fly out of the Tenth ward. After the cat had walked across the carpet once she also started, and it was late in the afternoon before she returned with sore feet and a reproachful look. When the sprinkling had been finished and just as the back parlor was to be attacked, a trainp rang the doorbell and asked for something to eat. Mr. Bowser felt complacent and liberal hearted. In place of food he gave the man a dime and then said: "I don't claira to be a professional artist, but I've just finished a little job here I'd like you to look at. In traveling around you must see more or less artistic work." "I do, sir," replied the tramp as he followed him into the parlor and look ed at the freshly painted woodwork

"This is what I calls a beauty, sir, a real beauty. You've used kerosene and oil with the paint, and the neighbors will all be jealous of you. You should have been an artist, sir." There was a tinge of sarcasm in his tones, but Mr. Bowser added another

The will of the late Marquis of Bute, which has just been admitted to probate makes large charitable bequests, includ-ing £100,000 to be distributed among vaous Roman Catholic institutions. Embassador Choate's reputation for cholarship appears to be impressing England, where the newspapers report that he always goes about with a volume of some classical author in his pocket. Governor Elect John F. Hill of Maine s already giving sittings to a Boston artist of some note for a portrait of himself to be hung in the state capitol at Augusta. He will be inaugurated in January

Ex-Senator Warner Miller has secured permit for a railroad across the north-rn half of the Colville Indian reservation in Washington for the Republic and Kettle River railroad, of which he is chief promoter. Thomas E. Watson, the Populist can didate for vice president in 1896 and the author of a history of France, has found a new field of labor in the purchase of a large Georgia farm, which he is running as a business investment. One member of the British parliamen recently dissolved, Captain Seeley, though alive and well, never took his seat. He was elected to a vacancy while he was in service in South Africa and was unable to leave the field to take up his peaceful duties. He is still in South Africa. Carl Browne, the former leader of the Commonweal army, which marched on Washington six years ago, and son-in-law in the United States patent office for a patent on a new airship, which he asserts is a radical departure in the way of feasible airships. Henry M. Flagler, the Standard Oil illionaire, is believed to have political aspirations. The sudden removal of his egal residence to Florida, where he has been a power in politics for many years, is said to mean that he will contest for a sent in the senate when the term of Stechen Process Wapwallopen. The position of cashier in a New York bank beats a Klondike find .- Atlanta Constitution. Only in a society where "money will buy anything" could there have been an incentive for Alvord's crime.—New York

If Mr. Cornelius L. Alvord, Jr., employed his enforced leisure in writing a book entitled "How I Did It," he might count on a large sale and increased fame. New York Evening Sun.

Dishonesty on the part of bank employees is, happily, rare, but, in the words of Shakespeare, "oft the sight of means to do ill deeds makes ill deeds be exposed to needless temptation.-New York Herald. Having been taken unawares by surprise visit from a bank examiner, Alword's practices were detected. It would seem that occasional surprises of bank offi-cers and employees by the directors of such institutions would operate as a check upon criminal misuse of the bank's funds. But knaves will find means to circumvent the most searching supervision.-Philadelphia Record.
