The Mother's Health. Mrs. Louis Botha, wife of the commandant general of the Boer army. who, report says, has been for months working for the peace of South Africa by trying to effect a conciliation between her husband and Lord Kitchener, commander of the British forces, is related to the family of Robert Emmet, the distinguished Irish patriot. She is a woman of culture, having passed her girlhood days in school in Paris. In Pretoria she was recognized as a social leader while her husband was a member of the Boer parliament. General and Mrs. Botha lived on a farm some distance from the capital and were in Pretoria only during the raad sessions. In the early days of the war it was Mrs. Botha's custom to visit her husband frequently on commando where her presence always had a cheering effect upon the burghers. She was a dashing woman and a fit companion for the gallant leader. When Pretoria was occupied, Mrs. Botha remained in the city. She met Lord Roberts a few days after the capitulation and, being persuaded of the hopelessness of a continuance of the struggle, offered to try to mediate with her husband. A passport was provided her, and the meeting was effected. "If it is to visit me you come, I am delighted to see you," said General Botha, "but if you come to implore me to cease this struggle you only shame me." Mrs. Botha said nothing more about her mission, and nothing came of the negotiations at that time.-Chicago Times-Herald.

It Pays to Be Courteous. There is an old saying that "virtue is its own reward," and there is a girl in one of the department stores of the city who knows that to virtue may be added courtesy and kindness. There came to the counter where she stands a little old woman the other day. She was tiny and shriveled and not very well dressed in rusty mourning. She bought a number of little notions, all of the best, being very exacting and almost querulous, but the young clerk was more than usually attentive and courteous in trying to please her customer. Once she said when the customer hesitated about getting a certain article. "My grandma uses it," and the bargain was clinched at once. When the little old lady was through at that by and wavered on her feet when she rose from her seat. The young lady was at her side in an instant and gave the support of her strong young arm for the few steps. When the counter was reached, the lady thanked the girl in tones tremulous with age. "I will remember you," she said. The clerk returned to her counter and had almost forgotten the incident when a voice at her elbow startled her, and there was the little old lady. "I forgot to ask your name," she said in apology. "The young are not so thoughtful of old age as you." The clerk gave her name, and then the customer asked if she could have the strong arm to lean upon again to her carriage. At this the clerks about began to look interested. They had been chaffing the girl before about her "mash," but a woman who had her "carriage" was not to be made the subject of ridicule. The young lady spoke to the floorwalker and then went with the customer to the door, where a handsome coupe, with footman and coachman, was waiting. "My maid was not well this morning and I could not let her attend me." said the little lady simply, "but I am scarcely strong enough to go about alone. Thank you, dear. Your name is Martha -... I will not forget." Nor did she. Wednesday the little old lady sent her maid with an invitation for the young clerk to spend her time from Saturday night to Monday morning at the beautiful home in the suburbs of northwest Washington, and the "carriage will call for and carry you back to your work."-Washington

When Woman Is Weak. An amusing little incident occurred at the meeting of the Era club that will interest women generally. The ladies were listening to the admirable talk of Miss Sadie American on the purposes of the Consumers' league, and after she closed her interesting explanation Miss Kate Gordon, president of the Era club, asked Miss American, who is the first vice president of the Consumers' league and naturally acquainted with all the legislation that it has advanced and advocated, if any effort had ever been made toward securing equal wages for men and women. Miss American answered: "Well, yes, a little at a time. The question of wages or equal pay for men and women is one which we have handled in so far as we ask equal pay for equal work performed. Upon investigating conditions we find some very harrowing experiences," said Miss American, smiling. "When a woman has just about rendered herself invaluable to her employer, ten chances to one she turns around and gets married. Women do not look upon employment in the same way that a man does. She is generally looking forward to something that she calls 'better' in the shape of matrimony, and once she has embarked upon this sea her employer of course loses her services. "Many women have a true idea of the first two principles, but precious few have any idea of the latter. When the right opportunity comes, they will get married.

At this all the ladies laughed, and a pretty young girl said, "And they will continue to do so as long as the world lasts, all efforts of the business world to educate them up to the idea of the alue of permanence to the contrary.' New Orleans Picayune.

The Late Annie Wittenmyer.

Annie Turner Wittenmyer was born n 1827 at Sandy Springs, O. She came of a long line of warrior ancestry. Her great-great-grandfather was an officer of high rank in the French-Indian war, her great-grandfather was killed at Saratoga in the Revolutionary war, her grandfather was a soldier in the war to the civil war. It needed only the ring of the gun at Fort Sumter to fan nto a blaze the smoldering fire of patriotism kindled in childhood by the oft told tales of her grandsires.

Annie Turner was married to William Wittenmyer in 1847 and became the mother of five children, all save one dying in infancy or early child-

In April, 1861, she offered herself to the governor of Iowa, of which state she was at that time a resident, and was sent to the front to distribute sanitary supplies. She continued to act in this capacity and that of a nurse became active and aggressive in patriotic work. She was instrumental in establishing a soldiers' orphans' home n Iowa, a soldiers' home in Kentucky and a soldiers' memorial home in Pennsylvania. She was a leading tional Woman's Relief corps and a prominent factor in establishing the National W. R. C. home at Madison, O. Mrs. Wittenmyer served five years as the first president of the National W. C. T. U. When the change of policy caused a division, she became a member of the Nonpartisan W. C. T. She was editor and contributed to many popular periodicals. On the platform she was intense, witty and persuasive, abounding in telling illustrations of personal experience. Though above medium height, inclined to full habit, she was active and vigorous. Beautiful Mme. Le Vert.

"To no other woman of the south were there accorded so often the tributes of poetic and romantic fancy that clustered around the name of Octavia Walton, or Mme. Le Vert as she was known after her marriage," writes William Perrine in The Ladies' Home Journal. "As a little child she charmed Lafayette with her brilliant conversation-she spoke the purest of Frenchand later she was the friend of Clay, Calhoun, Washington Irving and, in fact, of nearly all the prominent people of her day. Nor was her cleverness unrecognized in Europe when she made the first 'grand tour.' It was there at a state ball in Buckingham palace, whither she was escorted by Joseph R. Ingersoll, the American minister at London, that she was presented to Queen Victoria. Presentations on the occasion of a state ball were not fre quent, and the southern beauty was delighted over the unexpected compliment. When the dances were over and the queen was again seated, the lord chamberlain waved his hand, and the company moved back, leaving a vacant place around the royal chair. Mme. Le Vert, with all eyes upon her, aproached and was presented. Victoria advanced and graciously gave greeting, smiling sweetly as the American courtested low before her, and then passed to the group that encircled the throne. About 2 o'clock in the morning the queen bade adieu to her guests. Then one of the noblemen escorted Mme. Le Vert around the picture and sculpture galleries and presented her to many eminent persons."

MEXICO CLAIMS THE HONOR FOR THE AMERICAN CONTINENT.

The Success and the Disasters That Attended the Establishment of Printing Throughout the Vast Extent of This Country.

The first printing press on the American can continent was set up in the City of Mexico in the sixteenth century. So much is known regarding the com ment of the art preservative in the west ern world, but when details are looked for different accounts and conflicting statements are found. One author claims that the first Spanish viceroy of Mexic cine which can be confidently relied on to cure diseases of the organs of guished for his devotion to literature on to cure diseases of the organs of guished for his devotion to literature, respiration. It cures obstinate, deep-seated coughs brought by a control of the coughs by a control of the control of the coughs by a control of the cough by seated coughs, bronchitis and bleeding of the lungs. It cures when nothing else will cure, and the local physician always helps. It almost always cures.

"Two years ago a severe cough started on me and I was also bothered with catarrh," writes Mr. F. Skjod, of Danewood, Chisago Co., Minn. "I could not sleep nights, as the cough was worse at night. I tried several cough medicines, but to no avail, until a year ago, when I got so bad I could not breathe through my dose at times. I then tried Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. After taking eight bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and at the same time using Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, I am a well man. I can thank Dr. Pierce for my good health, and will recommend his medicines to any one suffering from the same trouble."

Jesse Glover, through whose exertions the press had been secured and who contributed largely to the purchase, died upon his voyage to the new world, and his sons had afterward of the press. This primitive establishment was subject to the authority of Cambridge college, the president of which was censor of the press and responsible for all publications until special licensees were appointed by law in 1652, the press never being enfranchised in Massachusetts until as late as 1755.

One Green became the second printer in the United States. Three hundred acres of land were granted him in 1658, but Mr. Green, it would appear, could not find a suitable location for his grant until 1667, when it is recorded that 300 acres of land were laid out to Ensign of 1812, and her father gave three sons | Samuel Green of Cambridge, printer, in the wilderness on the north of Merrimac

In 1659 an Indian boy taught at the charity school of Cambridge to read and write English was apprenticed to Samuel Green and took upon himself subsequently the name of James the Printer, or James Printer. He printed Eliot's Indian Bible, the first copy of the sacred Testament made in this country. He rendered such efficient service on this work that Eliot said he "had but one man, namely, the Indian printer, that was able to compose the sheets and correct the press with understanding." A copy of the Indian Bible is to be seen in in North America appeared in 1704, but full 14 years previous to this date one number of a newspaper had been published in Boston, which was instantly suppressed by the authorities. To the publisher. Richard Harris, this appears to have been no novel experience, for he had in his native land been fined for selling a Protestant petition during King Charles' reign and had also come to grief through printing a book with the revolu-tionary title of "English Liberties." Besides, he was once set in the pillory, on which occasion his wife is recorded to have stood by him to defend him against the attentions of the mob.

Boston was early distinguished as the home of letters. James Franklin, an older brother of Benjamin, established in 1721 a periodical which he made the organ of a company of literary gentlemen whose common characteristic seems to have been total disagreement with each other. The object of the journal was ultra revolutionary in tendency, being generally to show the world the events of the day by assaulting all established beliefs and conventional manners and customs. Attacks were leveled in discriminatery at the British government, the preachers and finally inoculation. The aged Puritan minister, Increase Mather, protested publicly against the iniquity of the vile Courant and warned its subscribers against being "partakers in other men's sins." James Franklin was put in jall for a month and forbidden to print or publish the Courant or any pamphlet or paper of the like nature except it be first supervised, and he was finally obliged to leave Boston, like his brother Benjamin, and journey to a more liberal minded community.—Washington Tims.
