The department has gone over the records to see how many routes were interrupted by the condition of the roads last spring and has sent out notices that unless the roads are improved to prevent similar interruption this spring those routes will have to be abandoned. The records show that a great many routes were interrupted

There were 40 of these routes in Iowa, 12 in Illinois, 10 in Wisconsin and a less number in other western and southern states. The record against Iowa is not so bad as it seems because that state has a great many more rural free delivery routes than any other state, and, like Illinois, the state suffers at times from bad roads which

The department admits that it will have to give some consideration to the difficulty in building roads in Iowa and Illinois, where the depth of the soil makes it almost impossible to con struct roads that will be passable at all seasons of the year. It is admitted that there are routes in Illinois and lowa where everything possible has been done to make good roads, and they have excellent roads for the greater part of the year, but during the spring freshets these may be impassable for a few days.

The order is meant to apply to those routes where the people are indifferent to the condition of the roads and have through neglect. The inspectors will report on the routes that are interrupt ed this spring, and where the interruption is due to neglect of the roads they will be abandoned. Where the interruption is due to conditions which will make allowances and continue the

But the department regards rural free delivery as an argument and an wherever the people are indifferent to the advantages of the service the department holds that the experiment is a failure. The demand for rural free devise a railway time table that any one delivery is greater than the department can understand, and he will have a can meet with the appropriation by congress, and it will favor those communities which show most appreciation by building roads over which the government can send mails with the least possible interruption.
