SOME HISTORY RELATING TO BANDS

Some facts accompanying the portrait of Stoes' band printed in the Philadelphia Inquirer last week, allusion to which was made in these columns, are disputed by some old-time band musicians of this city. In addition to Charles H. Stoes, who was represented as the sole survivor it appears that no less than seven are still living who assisted to organize the famous old band. As to the date of organization there seems to be some difference of opinion among the survivors.

In order to obtain full facts relating to band history in Danville the American set about the work in a painstaking way, interviewing old timers and looking up the records.

Stoes' band, it appears grew out of another organization—the first regular cornet band in Danville—which was organized in 1858, with Abraham Sechler as president and leader. It was known as the "Danville Independent Band." Among the members were Jesse F. Sholes, George S. Sanders, Oscar Moore, Jacob R. Sechler, Michael Rishel, George W. Hall, Joseph Hiles, Charles Sechler and Jesse Clark.

Abraham Sechler was really the band pioneer of this section. Prior to the organization of the Danville Independent Band he was at the head of an amateur organization made up of himself and four brothers.

In course of time the Danville Independent Band became the "Danville Cornet Band." In 1855 Charles H. Stoes became its leader. In 1857 new instruments were procured. These were of German silver with the exception of that presented to the leader, which was of solid silver. From that time on therefore, the organization was known as "Stoes' Silver Cornet Band." The members in addition to the leader, Charles H. Stoes, were: Meyer Lyon, George S. Sanders, John F. Gulick, B. W. Musselman, A. F. Henrie, E. K. Hale, George W. Hoffman, Charles Sechler, Jacob Weitzel, Joseph R. Patton, O. G. Melin, H. L. Shick, Joseph Clark, and Hugh Parsell. The survivors at present are: Charles H. Stoes, E. K. Hale, George W. Hoffman, Joseph R. Patton, O. G. Melin and Hugh Parsell.

For many years it is said this band was the most distinguished in the state, bearing away honors on many public occasions in various parts of the country.

In 1856 a new cornet band was organized in Danville with Abraham Sechler as leader. It was known as "Sechler's Cornet Band." Many of its members later volunteered in the Army of the United States.

Two other bands were organized later, but they disbanded after a short career. Stoes' band still survives. J. T. Oberdorf is leader.

PROHIBITION CONVENTION

The claim made by the Prohibitionists that their party this year shows unprecedented strength received support Monday in the attendance at the Prohibition County convention here, which was larger than ever before known.

The convention, which was held in the Grand Jury room, was called to order at 2:30 o'clock by County Chairman Thomas W. Mills, who presided during the session. J. M. Kelso and Rev. L. H. W. Kline were chosen as secretaries.

The room was well filled with Prohibitionists. In addition to the well-known adherents of the party in Danville, there were an unusually large number present from other parts of the county, including A. D. Crossley of West Henlock township; Clark Boone of Derry township; William Snyder, W. J. Messersmith, Henry Pollock, T. E. Yerg, William Robinson, J. H. Leidy and Rev. M. C. Flegal of Washington.

State Chairman Charles R. Jones, who arrived on the 2:21 Pennsylvania train, was also present at the convention. Before proceeding with the nominations he gave a short talk. He was gratified, he said, at the good attendance which was in harmony with the increased interest in Prohibition which marks the campaign elsewhere in the state. The sentiment in favor of Prohibition is especially strong in the Western part of the state. In Vanango county at the last election the Prohibitionists elected a sheriff and six local officers. In that section, he said, the local vote predicted that Stoes' vote for Governor will be more than double what it was in 1898. The State Chairman recommended that Prohibition pledges be put in circulation among the voters. Many persons, he said are favorable enough to Prohibition but decline to vote the ticket on the ground that it would be "throwing away their vote." Had they any assurance of success, they would vote for Prohibition.

In order to take these people at their word pledges have been devised. The one that the State Chairman recommended for this county would read about as follows:

Believing that political corruption largely made possible by the liquor traffic in politics is the most dangerous element of our political life today I, the undersigned citizen of Montour county hereby pledge myself to vote for the Prohibition party candidates in county affairs, this pledge to be binding as soon as a bona fide notification is received that 1500 genuine signatures to this pledge have been obtained. The pledge is null and void unless 1500 signatures have been received.

On motion it was decided to adopt the above pledge and put it into circulation.

F. P. Johnson was elected Chairman of the County committee, with Rev. E. B. Dunn as Secretary and Thomas Mills as Treasurer.

Clark Boone of Derry township; T. E. Yerg, of Washington and W. H. Manger of this city were chosen as members of the Executive committee. They were authorized to appoint a full county committee embracing all the districts. The following nominations were made: Representative, Rev. L. H. W. Kline; County Commissioners, Clark Boone and Thomas Mills; Auditors, E. L. Rank and J. M. Kelso.

Rev. L. H. W. Kline, Rev. L. E. Twichell and Rev. M. C. Flegal were chosen as conferees. They were instructed for F. P. Johnson for State Senate and Rev. H. C. Harman for Congress, taking in both long and short term.

SOLDIERS HOME FROM GETTYSBURG

Company F, Twelfth Regiment, N. G. P., arrived home from the division encampment, at Gettysburg, Saturday afternoon. The 25th troop train arrived in Danville late for the Danville company to catch the 2:21 train, but the boys were brought up later. They marched from South Danville to the armory and looked very orderly.

This camp was one of the best ever held by the guard. The weather was unusually fine, as there was no rain until Saturday morning. The conduct of the entire guard was exceptionally good and there was no disorder in Gettysburg during the week. The monuments and markers on the historic battle field were unharmed and the general impression left by the citizen soldiery of the Keystone state was very favorable. Every day in the guard from Governor Stone down was highly pleased with the encampment.

The soldiers were given plenty of opportunity to go over the battle field and lectures on the battle were given by the guides. There were two reviews, one by Governor Stone, and the other in honor of the visit of Secretary Root. Mr. Root paid a high compliment to the guard and the camp. The Twelfth Regiment showed up well at inspection and Colonel Clement made an address to the men Saturday morning, in which he spoke of their soldierly conduct and of the good work of the regiment, not only while in camp but in the past year which led to the high rating at the spring inspection.

The Danville boys were kept posted on what happened at home by The Morning News, a copy of which was mailed to every member of Company F. This was greatly appreciated and the company tendered its thanks to The News for the courtesy.

The whole guard put in a profitable and earnest work at soldiering on a famous battle field, but the Third Brigade was the most popular and was conceded to be the best in the division. General Gobin's regiments are all from the central part of the state and have improved considerably in the past few years. The Third has seen more service than the other two brigades and always does efficient service when on duty. It led the guard in the spring inspection ratings, having the four highest regimental general averages. The Ninth stood first, the Twelfth second, the Eighth third and the Thirteenth fourth. The ratings at the annual inspection at Camp Meade are expected to keep this brigade in its well earned place. The special troop train of the Ninth Regiment passed through South Danville Saturday afternoon on route from Gettysburg to Wilkesbarre.

HIDDEN LANDMARK BROUGHT TO VIEW

The heavy rain Tuesday which flooded our streets for an hour had here an old landmark, whose very existence was forgotten except by a very few. After the downpour an opening some six feet in diameter was discovered at the rear of the lot belonging to the property of Benjamin Harris, West Mahoning street, which revealed below an abandoned well nicely walled up with brick and at least forty feet deep.

Some five feet down are traces of rotten plank supported on the top of the brick wall. These gave way during the rain precipitating the mass of earth with which the spot had been levelled over into the depth of the well.

The re-appearance of the old well has started a great deal of controversy among people of middle life and older. They all agree that many years ago the site was occupied by Best and Rockefeller with a slaughter house and candle factory; also that a fire occurred there which wiped out the buildings after which the well was abandoned. None, however, agree as to the date. Some place the fire at 45 years ago; others at 50 years.

The method employed in getting rid of the well is one not to be commended. The plank upon which the earth was dumped in filling it, is true, held out well but they gave way in the end. The spot lies open to the public just adjacent to the row of stables. That a man or a horse was not engulfed in the cavity is fortunate. There is only one way to effectually get rid of a well and that is to fill it up, beginning with the bottom.

In the New Woman's Sphere

PARDON me if I relish a chapter of congressional proceedings which is now ancient history, for it is a record of several weeks ago. It is an occurrence in the United States senate, the most solemn and "etiquetish" masculine organization in existence, with the possible exception of the British house of commons. The handling of the newsgaper dispatch says, "Tillman and McLaurin in Furious Combat With Fists Upon Floor of Senate." Yes, but women are too emotional to be allowed to take part in politics! Further, the dispatch says: "T. Insulted that M. had sold his vote for federal patronage. M. called T. a liar. T. sprang over three chairs and viciously attacked M., striking him in the face with his fist. M. hit back, striking T. on the nose, drawing blood." Just so! But women are too emotional to be trusted with the ballot or to take part in politics! Further, this dispatch concerning the cool and powerful white male who permits not himself to be governed by his feelings says: "Again T. struck out frantically, this time with his left hand. The blow did not hit M. but struck in the face of a sergeant at Arms Dayton, who had sprung over the desks in the effort to reach the two belligerent senators." But women are too emotional to take part in politics! Once more: "The two senators were still striking wildly at each other, some of the blows landing upon Mr. Lorton. An instant later the angry senators were pumiled in the arms of Senators S. and W. Finally they were forced into their seats. T. was white as a sheet. As he sat in his seat he drew his handkerchief from his pocket and wiped blood from his face." Here in the senate of the United States occurred a "serap" unexcelled in vulgarity and brutality in the lowest slums of men, white, black or yellow. Nevertheless, woman, you are a weak, hysterical creature, governed wholly by your personal feelings! Look up to man—powerful, brain, calm, self-controlled man—as your superior! Hide yourself within your own inferiority! You are too emotional to take part in politics—yet!

TEACHING ETIQUETTE.

How Mrs. Gentlewoman increased Her Unpleasantly Small Income.

When Mrs. Gentlewoman found herself almost penniless at the death of her gay clubman of a husband, she was in despair, never having been fitted for any other occupation in life than giving great entertainments or assisting at those of her friends. Things looked very black for her indeed. At this juncture she went to an afternoon tea, and it was while watching the antics of a very newly made rich woman that an idea flashed through her anxious brain. The next day the following advertisement appeared in an exclusive society paper:

"A lady of culture, belonging to the best circles both here and abroad, will instruct social aspirants in the most correct forms of etiquette. Strict secrecy guaranteed."

From that moment her future was assured. She had many answers, and her charming manners joined to her discreet silence as to the identity of her pupils brought her many more. To day she is doing well—very well indeed.

deed. The lessons are private, and the secrecy of the professional is maintained about them. Mrs. Parvau is taught how to stand, how to handle her train without taking headers over it; an imaginary dinner is served, and she is taught how to act as hostess; an imaginary dance is given, and she is taught how to bow, to sit properly and to use her fan in a dignified manner. Miss Goddines, too, is taught how to wear her new Paris frills and how to converse in a fascinating manner when introduced to eligible young men. Altogether Mrs. Gentlewoman's little heart to heart etiquette talks are a great success. And as is only right, she charges a good sum for giving the benefit of her long experience.

COUNCILS ARE SUSPENDED

The Pennsylvania State Judiciary of the Junior Order of United American Mechanics has issued a decree suspending 113 subordinate councils which refused to pay the increased per capita tax to the National Council. Seven other councils, that filed answers and were tried, have been expelled by the same decree. The councils thus ousted constitute the majority of the members of the order in this state and a rival organization will probably be formed.

Two years ago, when the State Council met in Philadelphia the "insurgents" had a majority and there was a bolt by the smaller faction, known as "loyalists". Both factions elected state officers and quo warrant proceedings were brought to ascertain the legal standing of the two State Councils. This matter is still pending in the courts. The "insurgents" look upon this wholesale suspension of the "loyalist" judiciary as a bluff. Both sides are fighting in the Philadelphia courts for legal recognition, but a decision will not be given until fall. A special examiner has been taking testimony for over a year. W. P. Rambo, of Philadelphia, one of the attorneys for the "insurgents" makes this statement concerning the strength of the "insurgent" forces: "Since June, 1900, when the National Council met at Minneapolis by a change in the ratio of representation allied the Western, Southern and New England States against the States of the Middle East, the latter have held their own, with a solid membership in Pennsylvania of 45,000; New York, 10,000; New Jersey, 35,000; Virginia, 12,000; and District of Columbia, 2,000 while the fight has been carried into Kentucky. The National Council needs the money from Pennsylvania. In 1900, when all the State lodges under a ruling of the Supreme Court were forced to pay the per capita tax to the national body, Pennsylvania paid in $11,225.25 out of a total collected from the members of the order of $26,776.50."

Death of Aged Lady.

Ellen, the wife of William Ward, died during Saturday night, after a long siege of suffering. The deceased fell down stairs some six weeks ago, sustaining internal injury of a serious nature which resulted in death.

The deceased was born in Ireland, emigrating to this country in girlhood. She was married just prior to the Civil War, and resided in Danville ever since. Her husband, "Billy" Ward, is a pavior of reputation, cobbling cutters being his specialty. The old couple were well known about town, and during his wife's illness, Mr. Ward was kindly assisted by sympathizing neighbors.

Sunday morning the door of the humble home on East Mahoning street, bore a home of crape indicating that the aged sufferer had passed to her long rest. She was very bad on Saturday, although conscious, and Billy says he informed her that "it would be the death of her." The husband sought his bed at night. He was very tired and notwithstanding the incessant groaning of his sick wife he fell asleep. When he awoke Sunday morning he was surprised at the stillness which prevailed in the house. He at once sought the bedside of his wife and found her dead.

Mrs. Ward died childless. Her husband has no idea of her exact age. He himself, he says, is 72 years old, and she was several years his junior. She had rounded out at least three score years and ten.

ACT QUICKLY.

Delay has been Dangerous in Danville.

Do the right thing at the right time. Act quickly in times of danger. Backache is kidney danger. Doan's Kidney Pills act quickly. Cure all distressing, dangerous kidney ills.

Plenty of evidence to prove this. Mrs. Edward H. Langer of 11 Church St., says: "I suffered so much from pain in my back that I could not sleep at night. The pain over my hips was continuous and when on my feet it was one steady gnawing ache. It hurt to do anything requiring bending over. The kidney secretions annoyed me and the sharp twinges would catch me suddenly that I had to brace my back against something until they stopped. The kidney secretions annoyed me and the sharp twinges would catch me suddenly that I had to brace my back against something until they stopped. Save a Woman's Life.

To have given up would have meant death for Mrs. Lois Cragg, of Dorchester, Mass. For years she had endured untold misery from a severe lung trouble and obstinate cough. "Often," she writes, "I could scarcely breathe and sometimes could not speak. All doctors and remedies failed till I used Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, and was completely cured." Sufferers from Coughs, Colds, Throat and Lung Trouble need this grand remedy, for it never disappoints. Cure is guaranteed by Parke & Co. Price 50c and $1.00. Total bottles free.

Fire Destroys Three Houses.

Three houses on North Fifth street, Danville, were destroyed by fire Tuesday morning. The fire originated in the home of A. J. McCurdy and was caused by the explosion of a gasoline stove. A double house occupied by McCurdy and Charles E. Kern and a single house in which Andrew Lyons resided were almost totally consumed. The furniture in all these houses was ruined. A gold watch belonging to Mr. Lyons was stolen from a bureau drawer while some of the furniture was being carried from the burning house. Several firemen were injured while fighting the flames and a falling chimney endangered many more. Mrs. McCurdy was compelled to climb on the roof of her home, with her baby, and was rescued after climbing to the porch roof of the Lyons residence. McCurdy was burned about the face in bringing his son, Raymond, out of the house.

There are some women who seem to be perennially youthful. The grown daughters are companions as well as the children, and the wrinkles in the mother's cheeks, the brightness in her eyes, the roundness of her form, all speak of abounding health. What is her secret? She is at the middle age of life when so many women are worn, wasted and faded, and yet time has only ripened her charms. The secret of this naturally health and beauty may be told in the brief phrase, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. The general health of woman is so intimately related to the local health of the delicate womanly organs, that where these are diseased, the whole body must suffer. "Favorite Prescription" dries the debilitating drains, heals ulceration and inflammation, cures every weakness, imparts to the delicate female organs natural vigor and vitality. Women who have lost their health and their beauty have been restored to their former condition by the use of this marvelous medicine.

Dr. Detwiler Breaks a Leg.

Dr. E. H. Detwiler, of Williamsport, a leading physician of that city and a trustee of the Hospital for the Insane at this place, had the misfortune to sustain a fracture of a limb on Sunday morning. He was in the act of ascending the steps leading into his barn when he missed his footing and fell breaking his right leg below the knee. He was carried into his residence where the fractured limb was set by Drs. Klump and Donaldson.

Dr. Detwiler is well known in Danville and especially about the Hospital and his many friends here will be sorry to learn of his accident. At last accounts the injured member was doing nicely, but it will be at least six weeks before the doctor will be able to be about again.

Where Locusts Kill the Trees.

It is odd that the seventeen year locusts, concerning which in other localities much has been written should not have made their appearance in Danville or vicinity. This is unmistakably the year for the seventeen-year locusts, but the fact is that the insects are likely to appear in any remarkable numbers only in scattered localities. If any at all have appeared in this vicinity the number has been exceedingly small and as a general thing they have passed unnoticed.

At many places the woods are alive with them and their monotonous and melancholy song is heard on every side. Their presence is fatal to vegetation. They have a peculiar way of prying upon the trees which kills the ends of the branches. The leaves affected soon droop and although they still cling to the slender twigs they become brown as in autumn, presenting the appearance of clusters of dried fruit among the rich green of the leaves which escaped.

Along the line of the P. & R. railroad over a tract of several thousand acres between Shuman's and Brandonville the locusts have gotten in their work to perfection. At places the dead leaves outnumber the green ones and the landscape as far as the eye can see presents a drear and sombre aspect. It is quite a marvel to tourists and others who travel the road and the conductor and brakemen are kept busy explaining the cause of the phenomenon.

Between Reading and Harrisburg, especially in the vicinity of Wernersville, the noble tracts of woodland, ordinarily such an attraction in summer, show but few green leaves and the densely wooded slopes present the appearance of late autumn. Locusts are also numerous in many parts of York and Adams County and the effects of their death dealing sting is plainly visible on the landscape.
