TWO CASES OF DIPHTHERIA

The outbreak of diphtheria in the Third Ward has occasioned some alarm about town. While, perhaps this is only natural in view of the malignant and insidious nature of the disease yet there should really be little cause for general fear if the proper precautions are taken.

The Board of Health immediately ordered a quarantine of the houses inplacarded, which seems to be about as far as a quarantine extends where this disease exists. There are still two cases of diphtheria, both on Montour Row, in addition to the two deaths which have occurred.

In the two instances where death possible, which of course was in line with approved precautionary measures. But there are other precautions that those infected owe to society at large. More rigid rules should be in force, seeking to compel the members of the infected household to remain as far as possible upon their own premises, as it is no doubt these occasional visits abroad that are in a great measure responsible for spreading the disease. The Board of Health will find plenty to do, as the situation, although not grave at present is yet one not to be trifled with.

Home For a Month's Vacation.

Elliott Morgan Pegg, a midshipman at Annapolis, Md., arrived in this city Saturday morning for a month's vacation. "Morgan" was seen at the home of his father, R. J. Pegg, Saturday afternoon. He is looking exceedingly well and talked very entertainingly of life at Annapolis. The studies, he they are not too hard.

The last three months were spent in craising off the New England States and Morgan was among the midship men who arrived at Annapolis Friday last on the battleship Indiana. The first month and a half were spent on the Chesapeake, a large sailing vessel. their studies along certain lines, principally relating to navigation and the construction of ships. They assisted at times at hauling in the ropes and thus got some practical ideas as to the management of a ship, although they were exempt from menial work such as scrubbing the deck and the like. Morgan is quite fascinated with life at sea, and on the whole after a year at Annapolis sees no reason to regret hat his lines have fallen in Uncle Sam's service.

Mr. Laubach's Odd Diet.

Thomas Laubach of Hazleton, who was in this city Tuesday, enjoys the unique distinction of subsisting exclusively upon a diet of milk. For many years Mr. Laubach suffered from acute dyspepsia. Milk seemed to be about the only thing that he could digest and twenty years ago he renounced food in every other form and in the long interval following he has tasted nothing but milk.

Mr. Laubach has settled the mooted question of whether or not milk is a healthful and all-sufficient food for adults, as he is a vigorous looking gentleman with at least the average capacity for hard work. He is a Justice of the Peace in Hazleton and a prominent factor in the affairs of the town. He is a nephew of Christian Laubach of this city.

That conference, as recommended, was approved, and the date fixed in October, 1902, and the place by the presiding elders, who appoint two clergymen and two laymen from each conference district. It will be a body equalling in dignity almost the general conference of the church, and Friendship No. 1, of Bloomsburg; its deliberations will leave an impress on the work of the organization which will be lasting. This week, Rev. Harman received a communication from Bishop Andrews stating that he had been appointed a delegate clergyman, and that the appointment had been approved by the General Missionary Committee. This appointment Rev. Harman has acceptd. It is unknown who the other delgate from this district is, but the fact that he had been selected as one of burg; East End, of Wilkesbarre; Hook the possible two, out of a district composed of so many able and earnest ministers, must be a very gratifying fact to him and highly appreciated. His church also must feel complimented in this distinction to its pastor and indirectly to itself.

No Time Tables Needed,

'How soon can I take a train for New York? where's the time table? was the hurried question to one of Philadelphia's merchants, by a country customer who has just received a telegram care of dealer.

"New York time table! Why, you'r behind the age. Don't you know the Reading has a train to New York every time the clock strikes, every weekday? It is now fifteen minutes of the hour, so you have plenty of time to reach the Reading Terminal, and if I recollect right you will catch a two-hour train.
