The Continental Hose Company left yesterday afternoon, on the 12:15 Pennsylvania train for Bradford to attend the convention of the State Firemen's Association. They had a special car which will be run through to the convention city and will remain there until their return home the latter part of the week. The Continentals expect to participate in the parade Thursday afternoon. There were thirty-three members who went on the trip and each bore a portion of the expense. The special car was gaily decorated with bunting and on its sides were streamers, as follows: "Continental Hose Company, No. 3, Danville, Penna." The special was attached to the Buffalo Flyer at Sunbury.

His Life in Peril.

Trouble for Farmers. MONTGOMERY, Oct. 7. - The farm ers are in for their share of ill luck in this vicinity. The late potatoes are rotting and the recent rain has ruined the corn and buckwheat crops. There will be no buckwheat in this vicinity to thresh this fall. The recent rains have caused it to sprout and spoiled it. The corn fodder is turning black and many acres will be unfit for use as feed. The corn also is only partially ripe, and the corn hereabouts will probably be scarce.

Here's the festive candidate. He kissed the baby and rubbed the heads of Sam and Sue. He swore the twins about the corn bread, which he vainly tried to chaw, and ferthwith begged or the recipe, of course that tickled ma-but that doesn't count. But just before he left he stopped and winked, closed up his jaw, and slipping out behind the barn, he took a drink with pa-and that's what counts.

To Kelieve the Situation. the necessities of the people for coal is that the miners go to work at the same pay as they were getting before the strike and continue mining coal until the more stringent demands are supplied. This course on the part of the miners would entitle them to wide public sympathy, an important aid in the struggle in which they are now engaged. This would be an important concession on the part of the miners and might lead to similar ones on the part of the operators.

Contrary to what is generally suposed there is in the aggregate a great deal of coal in the cellars of our town, carried over from last year. The really provident and long-headed individual when the strike was agitated last spring foreseeing what was likely to occur bought all the coal he could get. As a result it is no secret that there are a number of cellars about town that are filled to the top notch. These fellows may not be saying much about their good luck, but their faces show that some of the troubles that other people have do not weigh upon them. The idea, first suggested by Benjamin Franklin, that the master of a vessel, by observing the temperature of the surface water, could tell the moment of his entry into the gulf stream and could hence fix his position to within a few miles was hailed with delight.

The method was published in 1790 by Jonathan Williams in a work lengthily entitled "Thermometrical Navigation: Being a series of experiments and observations tending to prove that by ascertaining the relative heat of the sea water from time to time the passage of a ship through the gulf stream and from deep water into soundings may be discovered in time to avoid danger." In this work he makes a patriotic comparison of the gulf stream to a streak of red, white and blue, painted upon the surface of the sea for the guidance of American navigators.
