The "Cleveland Plain Dealer" of October 31 contains an article relating to the suit involving the estate of Leonard Case of Cleveland, Ohio, by which it would seem that the "Eastern Case Heirs," against which a decision was rendered by Judge Wing last week, are people from Connecticut and have nothing to do with the 'Case heirs' in Pennsylvania, who are still in the contest.

The Plain Dealer says: Two thousand four hundred acres of land mostly in the city of Cleveland are what the lawsuit now on trial in the United States circuit court involves, accord ing to a statement made vesterday by one of the attorneys. Of course he was referring to the suit involving the Case estate. There was a mile of land between St. Clair and the lake and 1,900 acres in Brooklyn and Rockport, most of which is in the city now and which belonged to Leonard Case.

The most remarkable testimony given yesterday was that by two sisters. Emily Spicer, aged sixty-four, and Theresa Stiers, aged sixty-two. These two sisters are grandchildren of a sister of Abiel Case, the man who is claimed to be the same as Leonard Case of Cleveland. When little children they lived in Columbus, but in the year of the great cholera epidemic, which they think was in 1848, they, with their parents, fled from the scourge, going first to Worthing ton, where they found the disease just as bad. Then they traveled about the state and finally started by stage coach for Connecticut. There they visited their relatives and finally, to use the words of one of the sisters, they struck across the Hudson river, went over the mountains and finally came to Buffalo. From there they came to Cleveland and became the guests of a man whom they called their Uncle Leonard. He, according to their belief, was the same as their uncle Abiel. They said they stayed while here in a house from which they could see the lake. Their uncle they say, was a lame man, who wore a full beard and appeared to be past middle age. He was very rich, they said, and owned a great deal of land. He was known here as Leonard Case. on Rockwell street now known as the house she visited stood about where ures of the performance. the city hall is now.

But they had seen their uncle before the Cleveland visit and each of the sisters told of a visit he made to Columbus in 1843. Mrs. Stiers was then a little less than three years old, but she told the court that she remembers him well.

"My mother," she said, "used to he had changed his name to Leonard and she must not call him Abiel." "I was a very little girl," she continued, "and was running about the place barefooted. Uncle Leonard noticed a mark on my leg and spoke of it as the Case mark. He told my mother he would remember the childen with the Case mark." Mrs. Stiers said at that time be poke of his first wife as Chloe Thomas and spoke of his son Selam, whom had left back in Connecticut This is exactly what the plaintiffs claim, the two Cummins brothers who are the leading plaintiffs, being direct de cendants of Chloe Thomas by her marriage with Abiel Case, and Chloe Thomas having a son Selam. Both of the sisters say that Abiel, or as they knew him, Leonard Case, wore a full heard and that he was a short heavy man who walked always with a crutch or cane and sometimes with both.

A third witness who the plaintiffs claim, establishes directly the identity of Abiel and Leonard Case is Cyrus Chambers. He worked on a railroad in which Leonard Case was interested between Cleveland and Columbus now a part of the Big Four road, and while working for it he met Mr. Case, who came to look over his work. After ward he ran an engine on the road known as the Leonard Case engine. Once when in Cleveland and out of work he says Leonard Case asked him to come to his home and while there he learned from Mr. Case that he had he had a son Selam, by that wife. Andrew Jackson Case was another of the Connecticut Cases sworn. He is seventy-three years old and came from Connecticut when he was a boy sixteen years old. He met an uncle, Abiel Case, here in Cleveland, but was not allowed to testify as to what he had heard as to the identity of Abiel and

Leonard Case. Hiram Thompson, a grandson of Chloe Case, was also put on the stand, Howe's statement to the audience. but the judge cut off his testimony as to what he knew of the identity of Abiel and Leonard Case. After these witnesses had been produced the case for the plaintiffs was closed and the attorneys for the defense immediately moved that the court direct a verdict for them. That motion was under consideration when the court adjourn-

If that motion is overruled the de fense, it is understood, will undertake to show that Leonard Case, the Cleveland Millionaire, was a Pennsylvania man and had no connection with the Connecticut Cases and their descendants who are now fighting for the property. They will also attempt to show that the Abiel Case to whom the plaintiffs, witnesses refer could NORTHUMBERLAND not have been Leonard Case for the reason that their descriptions of him are not like Leonard Case and also

THE FARM ROLLER.

The roller is an implement which should be upon every farm, and ye if it is used without an understandi of its operations it may be pr tive of harm instead of good ere the 1st, 13th and 19th. The mer- farm roller should be used in fitting cury dropped to the 26th mark on the the wheat ground. Ordinarily the 30th. The greatest range in one day roller is looked upon as an implement which to press the stones into the ground upon the meadow land. But when used upon wheat land it become something more than a clod crusher the seed bed, and as a result of its action upon soils the harrow is made far more effective in its action. That this last statement is true can be easily proved if one will take a fresh or loamy soils. By the use of the roller the surface particles of soil are pressed closely together, and surface capillarity is greatly increased.

It should be made a principle in farm used upon plowed land it should l followed with the harrow so that the surface soil may be again loosened and the escape of moisture be prevented. Where the roller is to be used at the time of drilling in grain the roller should precede the drill. After the plants have appeared above ground and are from one to two inches high, the roller may be frequently used to advantage. It serves to firm the soil about the plant roots and gives them a firm contact with the soil; i pushes the small stones which may be upon the surface into the ground and thus prepares the way for the

are sometimes confounded and by ome are considered the same, but there is a difference. Mottled or streaky butter has been explained as being caused by an unequal distribution of the salt, but "white specks" have different cause or causes. Sometime when the milk is set in shallow pane they result from the cream drying of are so hard they do not churn into but ter. These particles do not take the color like the rest of the butter, and the "specks" are thus caused. This may be remedied by carefully strain ing the cream when it is put into the

Another cause of "white specks" is "white specks," or "flecks," as they are sometimes called. This can be remedied by not letting the cream stand so long before churning, by fre quent stirring of the cream during the process of ripening or by straining the cream, says Dairy Instructor C. P.

Chinch Bugs In Corn. The Ohio station's advice for dealing with the chinch bugs in the corn is as follows: The chinch bug, though able to fly, prefers to travel on the ground, and its migration from wheat to oats or corn may be intercepted by making a V shaped trench, as with the corner of a hoe or the outside little coal tar. A line of tar an inch across will be sufficient. When a crust forms over the tar, it must be freshened with a new supply. As the FREE. It costs you nothing. We pay the postage. Its free as air.
