SAND CRUSHED OUT LAD'S LIFE

Buried beneath an avalanche of fully ten tons of sand for more than fifteen minutes, Albert Buckler, of Bloomsburg, a lad nine years of age met death in a horrible form, while playing with his elder brother and a number of companions in the old sand hole on West Fourth street, Tuesday evening. It was about half-past six o'clock and not yet dark when the accident occurred. A number of children had been playing for some time about the sand hole and had in their play dug a small cave at the base of the wall of sand, which rose vertically for almost twenty feet.

This small cavern which was just about large enough at the opening to admit a man's body extended back into the wall not more than three feet.

None of the children had ventured to enter the opening but finally little Albert Buckler attempted to crawl in to it. His older brother, James Buckler, aged eleven years, eudeavored to persuade him not to enter the cave but the younger brother never realizing his great peril entered the cavern feet first and lay there on his back, only his head and shoulder protruding from the opening.

Fearing that the heavy wall of sand would fall, James, on the outside, kept hold of one of his brother's hands. "Let go, it's nice in here," and Albert tried to free his hand from his brother's grasp.

"Come out right away, the sand might fall," James said as he attempted to pull the boy out of the hole when suddenly the lad in the cave kicked up against the roof and without warning, an enormous mass of sand broke loose from above and one boy in the cave and covered James' extended arm to the shoulder.

When the sand broke loose Albert realizing for the first his jeopardous position called to his brother to pull him out, struggled to get free of the falling sand and fighting it with his arms turned over upon his stomach.

After being almost covered by the sand James was compelled to relinquish his hold upon his brother's hand in order to save himself and as soon as vainly dig with his hands to free his frightened, ran away, excepting Luther Shoemaker, who spread the alarm.

Within a few minutes a number of men, procuring shovels, came and be- their regular pay. gan working frenzily to uncover the imprisoned boy. But almost as fast as they shovelled away the sand, more fell and the boy could not be found.

Farmer's Bad Fall.

T. M. Wintersteen, tax receiver of West Hemlock township, met with a bad fall in this city on Saturday fore noon. Carrying a couple of large vessels he was crossing Mill street from Foster Bros. to D. R. Eckman's and was in the act of stepping up onto the pavement when his foot caught upon the curb and he fell violently upon the hard flagstones.

He was stunned by the fall and un able to rise. Officer Voris who was near ran to his assistance and soon had him upon his feet. In a short time he seemed to recover, escaping broken bones. He sustained a couple of bad bruises, however, and may feel the effects of the jar for some time.

An appropriate sermon was preach ed by the pastor, Rev. W. E. Wenner, who took as his text Revelations 2-11 "Be Thou Faithful Unto Death and I will Give You a Crown of Life." A large congregation was present.

Snow Sheds.

The railroads passing through moun tainous regious where deep snow falls in the winter are building powerful snow sheds that will stand the heav iest storms. The locomotives are having deflectors attached to their smok stacks which will throw the sparks to the sides instead of straight up against the roofs of these deflectors which are so hung that they can be thrown to one side of the stacks when the en gines are not in the sheds. These sheds will also guard against the frequent avalanches containing rocks and trees, against which the snow plow is use

When severe cold weather sets in trout hunt the mouth of the stream or the springs where they spawn, especially about the beginning of January. So far as I know very few trout are killed by the ice, because they get out of harm's way. I believe there will be plenty of brook trout this "Fish that almost surely go into retirement during winter are the little fish of the brooks of the chub genus, which in late May or June are the familiar bane of the fisher when he whips the trout streams. These common inhabitants of the brooks more closely studied reveal to the angler interesting habits. Most abundant in August, they begin to disappear with the first frosts of September. October hows a few thin schools, which it November pass from sight. If in winter we go to one of the larger pools of the brook, clear away the ice, and industriously prod under rocks or in the muddy sand, we shall dislodge a few luggish chubs, evidently hibernating. "One by one they begin to appear ir mid-April, multiplying as the water warms. In summer, unlike the trout and suckers, which seek the springlike holes, we shall find the chub in the still shallows, where they can bask in the sun-a habit curiously at vari ance with their quick death when the sun warms the water in the bait pail

GIVE IT A PUSH.

LIVONA CAMP, PA, APRIL 21, 1902 DEAR SIR

I think that every man that has a have a bottle of Moyer's White Liniment in the stable or his house. I had a horse that stepped in a hole with his front foot, coming down the mountain with a trail of props, and fell forward and strained his shoulder blade. That it swelled so fast that we could hardly get the collar off, and in two hours his neck was swollen to all the skin would hold. We used your White Liniment freely, and in a few days he was to work again, as d does not show any signs of eness. It worked like magic.

Respectfully Yours, J. A. BARTHAST. pi si si - MANUFACTURED BY-
