General Stoessel Sacrifices War Vessels

OHE FOO, Nov. 16.- The Russian topedo boat destrover Rastorophy, which reached this harbor from Port Arthur early this morning bearing dispatches from General Stoessel to the Czar has been blown up to prevent it falling to the hands of the Japanese.

It is rumored that the boat brought a dispatch from General Stoessel asking the St. Petersburg authorities for instructions is to whether he would continue to hold out, awaiting relief or make immediate arrangements with the Japanese for surrender upon the most advantageous terms possible.

This rumor cannot be confirmed but it is obvious that only dispatches of the highest importance would impel General Stoessel to risk the loss of a accident from the Hinebach house. a mission, in face of the rigid blockade the Hinebach women after the accidmaintained off Port Arthur by the Japanese fleet. The Ratsorpny brought Port Arthur newspaper.

In one of the issues it is stated that the battleship Retvizan and sunk. Her commander declared all forts remained in Russian hands and that the garrison was in good spirits and confident.

A THUNDERBOLT AT SEA

[Copyright, 1904, by C. B. Lewis.] This was the situation at 10 o'clock of a fine June morning many years ago: A big English sailing ship called the Kangaroo, one of the last of the Australian packets, was lying becalmed off the African coast to the south of St. Helena, and three miles away was a rakish brig, also without move ment. The brig had crept out from the coast during the night under the influence of airs too light to flare a candle. As was afterward known, she was a

out in a state of defense but for the passengers. Many of them became nervous at the sight of the brig, and to quiet them and at the same time exercise the crew the guns were cast loose, small arms served out, and the peaceful packet was turned into a man-of-war. There was a providence in it. When the stranger saw that he was suspected he threw off all disguise. Of a sudden his decks were alive with men running about, and later on four boats were lowered and filled with armed men. They were coming to attack the Kangaroo. They must have known that she was armed and had a strong crew aboard, but the pirates of old the boats left the brig's side we counted fifty-two men in all, and it seemed as if as many more were left behind. The black flag was hoisted, and there could no longer be a question as to the sort of men we had to deal with.

The passengers of the Kangaroo to a man volunteered to assist the crew. and we were presently prepared to give a good account of ourselves. We could note long before the pirates reached us that they comprised several nationalities and that they were a dessame time make the inspection for the and returning to shore, attempt re- perate lot. The boats divided as they came on, and when within a mile of us the fellows began cheering. Our first shot was from one of the big guns and could not have been bettered. It struck one of the boats fair on the stem and split her open full length, and of those not killed outright only two or three were picked up. The disaster only made the rascals the more desperate. Raising a vell, the three remaining boats dashed at us and were soon so close that the big guns were of no further use. We met them with bullets and buckshot, and we hove cold shot into their boats as they hooked on, and no gang of pirates ever got a harder drubbing. Although we lost two men killed and several wounded, not an enemy got aboard, and only two boats and eighteen men returned to the brig. That night the damaged spars wer replaced, shot holes plugged up, and there was no reason why we should not safely make the Cape. When daylight came we congratulated each other over our victory, and the captain had just decided to make a sort of holiday in honor of the event when a thunderstorm came racing up behind us, and in the midst of the black cloud was the pirate brig. Instead of sailing away in search of a haven or other prey when she had repaired damages she had picked up our trail and was going to give us another brush. Such grim persistency at first brought a feeling of fright, but this soon gave place to one of grim determination to fight her to the death and show her no mercy. When we had her crippled the passed away in her sixty-third year, night before we could have destroyed succumbing to the disease, from which her, but Captain Wilson simply sailed away. He now promised the crew to sink her if he could, and there was cheering as the men went to the guns. So terrific and continuous was the roll of thun der that the reports of the guns were unheard. You felt the concussion along the deck, but the report was lost in the war of the elements.

Loading and firing every gun which would bear as fast as possible, the Kangaroo rushed forward on her course and, hanging to her quarter like a bulldog to his prey, followed the Celeste. Of a sudden there was a great crash aloft, and down came fore and main topmasts together. The men were called from the guns to clear the wreckage, and the ship was in danger of broaching to and being swept when there came such a flash of lightning as seemed to burn the eyeballs.
