NEARLY READY

Matters incidental to the formation of the Medical Protective Association by the Montour County Medical Society, are progressing. Nearly everything is in shape for organization, the committee having its work about completed and its plans formulated. With the view of organizing the physicans will meet in a short time.

The move to organize a Medical Protective Association in this county has stirred up the physicians in other counties in the state, and they have decided to act too and protect themselves against dead beats by forming similar associations. With that object in view they have written frequent letters to the local physicians, requesting instructions and advice in the matter. In the face of all this comes the information of a more gigantic move by Association has a bill introduced in Congress asking for a charter, in order that it may become a chartered organization and be under the protection of the laws of the United States. Consequently dead beats will soon find hard traveling all over Uncle Sam's domain, and the service of a physician difficult to procure.

Visiting Old Friends.

Lewis Rodenhoffer, formerly of Danville, but for the past eight years a resident of Buffale, N. Y., is in this his many friends. He was two days on the way from the "Queen City on the Lakes" to this place, having been snowed under during the late blizzard which swept with such terrific force through New York state.

Mr. Rodenhoffer is a veteran of the civil war. He went to the front with hundreds of others who enlisted into the service of the United States at Danville, and he is being hospitably entertained by his old comrades in arms while in town. Her left leg was broken at the ankle by being caught under a rocker of the chair upon which her mother was seated. The parent and child had been playing together for some time, the latter in childish glee gamboling about the former's chair, and the accident was a sad ending to the sport. Dr. Stock reduced the fracture, and the little girl is getting along as well as can be expected.

WHEN FORKS WERE NEW.

How Their Use Impressed a Lady the

A lady who saw forks used for the first time at a dinner of Henry III. of France records her "impressions" of the occasion. Henry had in 1574 been tendered a magnificent reception in Venice. At this entertainment forks were used. The royal guest observed them with much interest and immediately introduced them to the French court

It seems from the account of the lady, who had never used them before, that some others were in the same predicament. She writes: "They never touched the meat with their fingers, but with forks, which they carried to their mouths, bending their necks and bodies over their plates. "There were several salads. These they ate with forks, for it is not considered proper to touch the food with the fingers. However difficult it may B. Seal. Devotional, Ray S. Daubert. be to manage it, it is thought better to Chorus by Junior K. L. C. E. "The put the little forked instrument in the mouth than the fingers.

> "The artichokes, asparagus, peas and beans were brought. It was a pleasure to watch them try to eat these with their forks, for some, who were less adroit than the others, dropped as many on their plates and on the way to the mouth as they were able to get to their mouths.

"Afterward a great silver basin and pitcher of water were brought, and the guests washed their hands, though it seems as if there would not be much scent of meat and grease on them, for case, no matter of how long standing. they had touched their food only with those forked instruments.'

THE MISSISSIPPI.

mmense Volume and Varying Meeds of Its Yellow Pleed. "The Mississippi river has an irremistible attraction for a person of im aginative mind, but perhaps its most impressive characteristic is the majesty with which its turbid, yellow tide got out." rweeps along between the shores, impressive by its sullen murmur and inspiring awe by its immense volume," said a traveler.

"The river is sublime no matter when or where you view it, and one has only to catch a glimpse of the yellow flood, veiled by rain or glistening in the sunshine, to fall beneath its spell. At times the river moves so smoothly and peacefully that you are almost lulled to ter, that constant eddying and washing sound that is distinctive of the Mississippi. Then, again, the water will swirl angrily around a hidden snag or rushing with impetuosity against the rielding bluffs it will eat into the earth, and tons of dirt will rumble down only to be absorbed and swept away. Perhaps for a moment the water will assume a chocolate color, but the influx of yellow tide from above will soon dissipats every trace of what was once an acre of cotton field. Sometimes there are trees growing along the shore that are engulfed. These fall with a crash into the flood, spin about for a moment and then drift slowly down with the current, their half drowned boughs rising at intervals from the water."-Bir. mingham Age-Herald.

The Orange Tree. The orange tree is regarded as a prince among trees and the emblem of genius. A peculiarity of this tree is that it bears fruit and flower at the same time. Its leaves are evergreen, and as it grows older it grows in beauty and fruitfulness, its blossom indeed a fit emblem of marriage promise and hopes. The orange tree is considered typical of love because, though its fruit is golden and its flavor and scent delicious, its rind is bitter. And, as every one knows who has experienced it, Cupid's dart causes pain. The orange tree is emblematic of gratitude as well as of genius and love.

A case had been opened, valuables extracted and the case repacked and shipped onward to its destination. The only clew to the criminals was that the unpacking must have been done at some of the customs bouses through which the goods had passed. To all appearances the microscope had a hopeless task. Ehrenberg took some of the sand which had been used in repacking, placed it under the microscope, looked through the tube, and, behold, there on the sand lay a peculiar specimen of foramini fera. That animal was found only at one place in the world and told just where the crime had been committed.

Dangers of Melancholy. The weak, broken spirited person grows morbid and melancholy, and the brain degenerates rapidly under the influence of these mental states. Melancholia is something that comes more within the province of the will power than anything else. It can be cast off and avoided only in this way. Some times for the lack of stimulating the will physicians will recommend a change of occupation, scenery and as sociation. This is merely an attempt to rescue the mind from introspection and give the will an opportunity to as sert itself. Sometimes this is accomplished, and then, if followed up by cultivating the will, a permanent cure may be effected.—Exchange.

Native Dress In Tibet. The native dress of Tibet consists essentially of a very wide gown five and a half feet long, with long sleeves tightened in at the waist and gathere up so as not to fall below the ankles of the men of quality, or the townsmen, nor below the knees of the common people, who have much walking and work to do. Thus gathered up, the gown puffs out at the breast, forming a huge pocket. At night the wear er lets it fall and is thus wrapped up from his ears to his feet, as in a bed Tibetan women wear the same gownit is called a "chuba"-letting it hans down to the ankle. Their dress varies according to the locality to which they belong.

Raisins and Alcohol "By the way, speaking of raisins, said a California grower, "did you ever know that they are a great help to sobriety? No; I do not mean that they will cure one of a taste for alcoholic stimulants, but that they will enable one to keep sober even when drinking to a considerable extent. The raisins absorb alcohol, and so, no matter how much one drinks, if he will eat raisins continually, not less than three or four to each glass of beer, for example, they will prevent the alcohol from being taken up in the blood and thus pre-serve a state of sobriety."

The custom of taking a text as the basis of a sermon originated with Ezra, who, accompanied by several Levites in a public congregation of men and women, ascended a pulpit, opened the book of the law and, after a prayer, "read in the book in the law of God Agent, Broad Street Station, Philadeldistinctly and gave the sense and caused them to understand the reading."
