one of the Jims. The seven men took open order and double quicked across the open into cover, and the six Jims sang as they went. The colonel looked blank, and 500 men laughed, and the Indians almost ceased their fire as they wondered what was up.

"Now, dudes," said the sergeant as they reached cover, "this is no makin love to a red headed girl on the randa of a summer hotel. We've go to hold them Injuns off this flank if we die trying. You've got a chance to show what you're made of, and durn my buttons if I don't plug the first man who looks to the rear!" For answer the Jims sang a verse of a war ballad and then dropped down just as the Indian bullets began to sing about them. The sergeant cursed and muttered, and over on the line, half a mile away, the major said to the colonel as the singing reached their ears: "Did you ever know the like of that?

I'm afraid this minstrel show business will end in our being flanked." But even as he spoke the muskets got to work and rattled away so rapidly that there seemed a score instead of half a dozen, and the colonel's face ost its loo, of anxiety. A force of thirty Indians were sent down against the half dozen, but they could not get nearer than a certain line. There was an open space to cross, and every redskin who tried it was tumbled on his face. When there was shooting to do, the Jims buckled down to it. When there came a lull, one of them would strike up a song, and the others would join in the chorus. The sergeant sought to hush them, saying that songs did not belong to Upton's tactics, but they sang the louder and sang him down.

The Ninth had got itself into a hole. It was not strong enough to drive the situation before the men did, but when power to rebuild, to invigorate the latter became aware of it there and resupply every organ, every nerve, was a flutter along the line. It might every moscle with the lost energy, and to insure a complete return of health, colonel's heart was in his mouth and Mrs. John Bailey of Jackson St., Penn Yan, N. Y., says:

The health of the body as well as of the mind depends upon forgetting. To t the memory of a wrong, of angry words, of petty meanness, linger and rankle in your memory will not only ssipate your mental energy, but it will react toon the body. The secretions will be diminished, digestion imaired, sleep disturbed and the general health suffer in consequence. Forgeting is a splendid mental calisthenic edicine for the body.

He speaks of "patches of a most exulsite forgetmenot of pure, delicate ne with vellow center that grew to the height of about a foot. A handful of it looked like something just caught out of the sky above." In another pargraph he speaks of the forgetmenot owing round an Eskimo encampment at Flover bay, within sight of the Siberlan coast, that was scarcely an inch of deep ultramarine blue, "the deepest, most intense blue I ever saw in a wild flower."
