Aunt Hannah Snow, wife of Captain Jabez Snow of Kennebunk, was almost as good a sailor as her husband. She had gone with him to the West Indies on seven voyages and had acted as mate and second mate. She could mend a sail, steer her trick, make or take in sail and use a quadrant as well as any one, or at least as well as any mate that ever sailed with the Hannah Snow, as the brig was named. Captain Snow ran between Boston and the West India islands, and the shippers of Boston came to know his wife and the way she could discipline a crew and han-

"No. I don't." he replied "but I don't see what you can do in this case except to git me back home and nurse

"Well, I see where I can do something else, and I'm goin' to do it too. I'm goin' to take the Hannah to the West Indies and back and save our charter."

"Have you lost your senses?" "Not a bit of it. If I couldn't make that voyage I wouldn't be worth my or Idris' Chair. The hollow, couchlike salt. I know all the crew, and I'll have Bill Henderson for mate. We'll slip down there and be back ag'in before your leg has begun to knit. There needn't be any more talk about finding a captain." When Captain Jabez thought the matter over he was inclined to think that his wife could do all she said, but the consignees had to be consulted. When Aunt Hannah went to them and stated the case they did not raise a single objection, and it was settled that she was to be Captain Hannah Snow for the voyage. It was only after the brig had left port that the mate's of the Three Pebbles," which lies at meanness came to the surface. He the foot of the Giant's Chair, contains had sailed with the craft on several voyages and was a neighbor of the Snows at home. When the accident happened to Captain Jabez the mate naturally hoped to get command for the voyage. He would have been distressed if any other captain had come aboard, but to be walked over by a woman, even though she was the captain's wife and a neighbor, was too sulks. "Look here, Bill Henderson," she said, "It won't do you the least mite of good to go on biting your tongue over this. I can captain this brig as well as Jabez, and I'm going to take her out and back." "You'll have her at the bottom before we strike the gulf stream." he re-

A day later she found the mate carrying too little sail, and an argument ensued. Later on she came on deck from her watch below to find him chumming with the men. Two or three other things happened to put her out of temper, and she exercised the privilege of a captain by "breaking" the mate and sending him to the fo'castle. When she would replace nim with the next best man, the sailor remotion of the head, a quick jerking fused to take the place. The crew was with the mate. Aunt Hannah expressed her mind freely, and as a consequence the crew refused to obey. The brig was brought to the wind, sail taken off, and the woman was laughed at. She was told that not a man would do him at short range. The bullet passed duty until the ma's was reinstated.

"Then it's mutiny, is it?" she replied.
"Very well. I'll let you know that you've got the wrong pig by the ear. I'll lose brig, cargo and everything else in the world before I'll give in."

For a day and a night the brig made no progress, and as the weather was fair she incurred no danger.

The crew saw that the woman did not intend to give in, and it angered them. There was one among them who had read dozens of pirate books charms. It is a phrase merely to those of us who do not know war at first hand. 'Then the men threw themselves on the bayonets of the enemy." It sounds lesperate and dramatic but this account in Blackwood's Magazine by a naval sublicutement at Port Arthur shows what it really means:

For thirty long minutes a hand to hand struggle had continued. Men threw grenades in each other's faces. Half demented samural flung themselves upon the bayonets of the dozen the trench. Who shall say that the day of the bayonet is past? Although there was not a breech that had not its cartridge in the chamber, yet men roused to the limit of their animal fury overlook the mechanical appliances that make war easy. They thirsted to come to grips, and to grips they came.

But it had to end. The old colonel ad fought his way through his own men to the very point of the struggle. He stood on the parapet, and his rich coice for a second curbed the fury of the wild creatures struggling beside

A Bit of Translation. The difficulty of avoiding "howlers" when one is translating from English into such a language as that of the Micmae Indians of Nova Scotia must be very great, says the London News. We hear from the Bible society of a curious case. In the first edition of St. Matthew in Micmae the translator found when he came to revise it that in chapter xxiv, 7, instead of "Nation shall rise against nation," he had written, "A pair of snowshoes shall rise up against a pair of snowshoes." And yet there was only one letter misprinted-naooktukumiksijik (a nation), having been displaced by naooktakumiksi-
