KNOX POINTS THE WAY

Junior Senator Speaks to the Republicans of Pennsylvania.

SHOULD STAND BY THEIR PARTY

Best Way to Maintain National Republican Supremacy is to Maintain Supremacy of Party Within the States.

United States Senator Philander C. Knox has emphasized the importance of Republican success in Pennsylvania this fall in a strong public interview referring to the political situation in the Keystone State.

Without any authority whatever some of the Lincoln Party adherents have been circulating reports that members of President Roosevelt's cabinet is in sympathy with their independent canvass, but it can be positively stated that the national administration is as eager for a great Republican victory in Pennsylvania this fall, as it is desirous of Republican success throughout the country.

President Roosevelt wants a Republican congress elected next year to insure the carrying out of his policies and he is looking to Pennsylvania to furnish a big Republican delegation to the next congress. Senator Knox has frequent talks with the president and fully understands his views on this subject.

This is what Senator Knox has to say on the political situation and he said it with manifest candor and earnestness.

"I will vote the entire Republican state ticket in November and I believe it will be elected."

"I believe in electing Republicans to the state offices and that the Republican party should then see that they administer the offices faithfully and well."

"I believe the best way to maintain national Republican supremacy is to maintain the supremacy of the party within the state and to make the state's influence proportionate to its greatness. Is in my judgment, to have the party meet the just and reasonable demands of the people for wise legislation and honest administration."

"I am satisfied that this is the view of the great majority of Pennsylvanians, and a great majority of Pennsylvanians are Republicans."

SCIENTIFIC FARMING.

The Way Long Tongued Bees Saved Australian Clover.

A clerk in the department of agriculture said:

"So you think that scientific farming is a bluff? You demand some illustrations of the god that is accomplished by the scientific method? Very well."

"When clover was first introduced into Australia it grew there beautifully, but it never seeded. The soil was all right. The climate was all right. What, then, was the trouble?"

"A scientist studied the matter, and this is what he found:

"He found that the native Australian bees had tongues too short to reach the clover's pollen forming organs. These organs in red clover are hidden deeply in the heart of the tubelike petals and they can only be fertilized by the long tongued bumblebee. If red clover is not visited by bumblebees, who bear the golden pollen grains from one blossom to another, it never seeds. It cannot be grown. The scientist, aware of the fact, soon put his finger on the barren Australian clover's trouble. He imported a pair of long tongued bumblebees. These bees flourished, and immediately Australian clover, which had promised to be a failure, became one of the country's richest and finest crops."—Chicago Chronicle.

Nutmeg Tree and Fruit.

"The nutmeg tree begins to bear at the age of ten years," said a gardener. "It keeps on bearing until it is ninety. The fruit resembles an apricot, and when the fruit is ripe it bursts open, showing at its heart the black nutmeg inclosed in a network of scarlet."

"The nutmeg, after plucking, must be dried. It is dried over a slow fire, and the process is tedious. It often occupies two months."

"Before shipping the nutmegs are always steeped in sea water and lime. This is to protect them from insects. They have nothing but insects to fear. In an insect proof condition they keep well. They never practically forever."—New Haven Register.

THE ROLE OF HAMLET

MANY FAMOUS ACTRESSES ESSAYED IT AND FAILED.

Even the gifted Sarah Siddons and the brilliant Charlotte Cushman Were Not Equal to the Task—Anna Dickinson in the Part.

Although many of the cleverest actresses the world has known have essayed the part, they have, with few exceptions, failed in it.

Even Sarah Siddons, probably the greatest tragic actress of all time, was a failure as Hamlet, largely owing to the nondescript nature of her garments, which were neither masculine nor feminine, and which made it almost impossible to forget that her Hamlet was a woman and not a man, says London Times.

Charlotte Cushman was perhaps the most brilliant player of male parts of her or, indeed, of any other generation. She was equally brilliant and convincing as Romeo, Cardinal Wolsey or Claude Melnotte, but when she made the crucial experiment of playing the melancholy Dane, even she proved unequal to the task. In fact, her Hamlet was so badly received in Dublin that she there and then made up her mind never to play it again.

And yet her Romeo was such a triumph of acting that James Heath, the great dramatist, she wrote that he was completely carried away by it. Of her acting of the passage where Hamlet flings himself upon the ground, "taking the measure of an ungraved grave," he says: "It was a scene of topmost passion, not simulated passion, as no such thing—real, palpable real. The genuine heart storm was on in its wildest rapture of fury, and I listened and gazed and held my breath, while my blood ran hot and cold. I am sure it must have been the case with every one in the house, but I was all absorbed in Romeo till a further of applause recalled me to myself."

And of her assumption of the difficult part of Claude Melnotte in "The Lady of Lyons" Justin McCarthy says: "I have seen Claude Melnotte played by many great actors, from Macready to Irving, but Miss Cushman eclipsed them all. She created for me the only human, the only possible and the only endurable Claude Melnotte I have ever seen."

Miss Julia Seaman, a once popular actress, was so severely criticised when she played Hamlet some years ago that she turned round on her critics and assailed them in a very vigorous manner. The most beautiful voices ever heard on any stage, was more fortunate, although it was one of her least successful assumptions, and in the fifties an American actress, Miss Perry Knowles, made such an unfortunate exhibition of herself as the melancholy one that a country manager actually issued a notice warning his patrons against going to see her.

Ellen Terry (Mrs. Charles Keam) was the first to put on Hamlet's doublet and hose; Mrs. Glover won Edmund Keam's approval by her playing of the part, and Mme. Sarah Bernhardt gave a picturesque and clever rendering of Hamlet, although it was not to be compared with many of her brilliant assumptions.

Charlotte Crompton was noted for her clever acting of masculine parts, which would have been even more convincing if she had not been such a tiny woman. "There is a woman," Macready once said, referring to her, "who would startle the world if she were but an inch taller." She was such a magnificent swordswoman that few men dared to try their skill against her on the stage, and she was undoubtedly a genius in her way, with a courage commensurate with her skill.

She was one of the finest personators of Richard III. ever seen on the stage. Her Shylock was among the most brilliant pieces of acting in her day, and she was almost equally clever as Iago, Romeo and Don Caesar de Raza, and yet when Charlotte Crompton challenged criticism with Hamlet she failed as signally as her rival, Charlotte Cushman, had done.

Probably the most successful of all lady Hamlets was Anna Dickinson, who made considerable reputation as Macbeth and Claude Melnotte. "A number of women have tried Hamlet," she said. "None, I believe, with any success. Yet, in my opinion, the character of Hamlet is eminently suited for a woman's capabilities. Hamlet was a very young—a mere college boy, in fact. Besides, a fine actress is more likely to bring out the wonderful womanlike delicacy of Hamlet's character than a very young actor." And she supported her views by giving an attractive and clever rendering of the part.

OVER ROUTE

B. & N. ROAD

Financiers Viewed Route of Berwick & Nanticoke Road.

In company with Charles W. Miller, president of the Berwick & Nanticoke Electric Railroad, well known Philadelphia trolley financiers went over part of the route of the Berwick & Nanticoke Electric Railroad with an idea of determining upon the construction of the road.

Particular attention was paid to that part of the road which will be built in Berwick, West Berwick, Briar Creek and Salem, the purpose being, stated Mr. Miller, to give that section the best possible trolley accommodations, working as they will in conjunction with the Columbia & Montour Company, who will also extend their lines in that section.

Mr. Miller stated that the outlook is now bright for the early financing of the road, but he stated that those who had placed their money in the enterprise did not yet care to have it known who would back the enterprise.

His attention was called yesterday to a story emanating from Wilkes-Barre to the effect that the company proposed building the road with a third rail system, with the plant of the company at Berwick, and further stating that Wilkes-Barre capitalists were largely interested therein. In reply he stated that no third rail system was considered.—Bloomburg Press.

Shot by a Thief.

Mrs. Fletcher Lyons, a seventy year old widow, residing near Moccasin, was shot while investigating noises in her chicken coop, Tuesday night.

Mrs. Lyons resides alone a mile west of Moccasin, in a lonely part of the country, but not far from the Pennsylvania railroad. Hearing a noise in her chicken pen, about 9:30 o'clock, Mrs. Lyons went to the back door of her home to ascertain the cause. Her appearance upon the threshold was followed immediately by a flash of fire and the report of a gun. Mrs. Lyons fell to the floor, a lead shot having entered her face and neck.

Engineer Houser, of Sunbury, who was running an extra freight train by that point, at the time, saw the three men fire the shot, then turn and run away; he also saw Mrs. Lyons fall. Coming to Port, Engineer Houser instructed the telegraph operator to wire the Moccasin office of the shooting. Dr. Tressler, of Shickleshiny, was summoned to attend Mrs. Lyons, and upon arriving, found the woman to be suffering severely from the gunshot wounds and from the shock, the latter making recovery a matter of doubt.

Before the noise of the shot had died away, an alarm of fire sounded at Moccasin, and in a few minutes the sky was brilliantly illuminated. Five new houses, the property of the East End Coal Company, and unoccupied, were burned to the ground before the flames were controlled.

The shooting and the fire are supposed to be the handiwork of Italians in that vicinity, who have been causing much trouble lately. About a year ago a number of Italians attacked the operator at Retreat and would have murdered him but for the timely arrival of railroad officials, Graves and Brittain.

The crimes of Tuesday night are believed to be from the hands of the same gang.

Walking and Balancing.

It is pointed out that in walking or running the arms and legs produce a "balancing" line that of the supporting and revolving parts of a beam. The movements of the legs rest upon the trunk and tend to rotate it in alternate directions about a vertical axis. But the swinging of the arms, each in unison with the opposite leg, produces an opposing mechanical couple, the effect of which is to rotate the trunk in the other direction, thus balancing, in part at least, the rotating action of the legs.

Ruskin's Whimsicality.

A story illustrating Ruskin's whimsicality was given on the authority of a friend of the great writer. "One morning," he notes, "as we were coming out of chapel he said to me, 'I ought not to have come to chapel this morning.' We asked him in some astonishment why. He said, 'I am going to write a critique on 'Is picture in the academy and want to be in a perfectly diabolical temper.'"

PENNSYLVANIA'S STATE POLICE

Two Hundred and Twenty-Five Men and Officers.

Governor Pennycuik is said to be taking special interest in the organization of the new state police force. Under the law the force will consist of 225 policemen and officers and Captain John C. Groome, of Philadelphia, who has been appointed at its head, and who has just returned from Ireland, where he has been inspecting the royal constabulary, one of the most efficient bodies of the kind in its physical prowess, has promised that the Pennsylvania force shall be recruited among the most reputable and competent men that can be obtained for the service.

The duties of the state constabulary will bear pretty much the same relation to the commonwealth that the duties of policemen and detectives do to a city. They will particularly enforce the state laws that hitherto have been difficult to execute, cooperate with local officers when necessary, protect country roads and put down the kinds of disorder or tumult which the militia has usually been summoned to suppress when local authority has been powerless.

It is thought that with such a system it will not be necessary hereafter to employ private bodies of men like the "coal and iron police" for the protection of property against mobs, although it is doubtful whether the new constabulary will be large enough, as now constituted, to deal with some of the emergencies which arise in the coal mining districts and other industrial regions. But so far as it may tend to put an end to the practice under which police is exercised in the hands of armed men is considered privately, it is thought by many to be a step in the right direction.

At the Court of Rex

By FANNIE HEASLIP LEA

"I am lost!" said the pretty maiden with a quivering tongue.

She stood back against the window of a big department store on Canal street and scanned the surging crowd before her. It was Mardi Gras day in New Orleans, and the pretty maiden had been in town only three hours, two of which had been spent in a hotel.

"I have lost my mother," she said again as if to impress the fact upon her self as an afterthought, "and my purse."

In the street the people crowded each other for more room, and there was a constant stream of muskies, gay domino fellows with tinkling bells and snapping whips, and the pretty maiden watched them from the entrance to the department store, and her ideas quite lost their balance and tumbled over into the mad whirl of carnival.

"I'm glad I'm lost," she said to herself, "they'll know I was separated from them by the crowd and they'll be fearfully worried, but after awhile they'll find me, and meantime I feel as if something were going to happen—a wild adventure perhaps. Oh, I love this life!"

A drum thrummed subtly in the distance, the crowd surged to the edge of the banquet, then surged back again with easy laughter, for no parade appeared.

"Ah," said some one at the pretty maiden's elbow, "I beg your pardon, but I thought I was never going to find you. The crowd is so thick."

The pretty maiden stared. A young man, clean shaven and eminently respectable, was regarding her, but in hand.

"I'm afraid you don't remember me," he suggested, a little crestfallen. "Isn't this the 'Fountain'?"

The pretty maiden's eyes widened. To herself she cried, "The adventure!" but aloud she said quite coolly:

"I'm afraid the advantage is yours."

"I'm sorry," he answered stiffly. "But please don't think me an impertinent stranger. My cousin wrote me to meet you here, you and your sister. She asked me to show you around for the parade. I—my name is Robert Randolph," he finished awkwardly.

The pretty maiden hesitated a bare moment, but the carnival spirit was strong within her, and the trick that in her natural environment would have been impossible unfolded itself like magic in this atmosphere.

The moment was a bare one—then—"Oh," she said, with the friendliest smile imaginable, "you are Bobby Randolph?"

"Of course," he agreed cheerfully. "It's been a great while since we saw each other, but still—"

"So it has," said the pretty maiden cunningly. "Let me see, just how long exactly?"

"Just ten years," said Mr. Randolph; "ten years, three months, seven days, two hours and, I think, twenty-seven minutes."

"Dear me," she murmured breathlessly, "and by the way, where's your sister? Didn't she come?"

"My sister?" said the pretty maiden, quite astonished. "My sister? Oh—yes, of course she came. But she had a fearful headache, and she decided to stay at the hotel, and I hate to leave the parade, you see."

"Of course," she had said, "you see," said Mr. Randolph regretfully. "The trip was so long and tiresome," said the pretty maiden incautiously. "Two hours' longer I like that. Why, it's only forty-eight miles between here and Pass Christian."

"You're right," said the pretty maiden sentimentally, "it's not a matter of miles—with me, at least," she added prudently.

"Well, we can have a jolly time by ourselves, anyhow," Mr. Randolph assured her.

The pretty maiden hesitated—that is, she would have hesitated, but Mr. Randolph's cheerful confidence left her no room to do so.

They walked on rather slowly, for the crowd was dense, and Mr. Randolph's shoulders acted as a buffer between them.

"You looked so angry," she explained between gasps, "then stopped suddenly because a small red devil, with battered mask, aimed a shower of confetti at her laughing face."

There was a blare of trumpets down the street and the long roll of a drum. A wave of excitement submerged the people. Randolph used his shoulders and elbows with a skill that bespoke long experience on the football field, and the pretty maiden found herself in the front of the crowd. Mounted policemen passed slowly past her, a band marching forth "If Ever I Cease to Love," and then Rex and his cohorts.

"The pretty maiden applauded and blushed from sheer delight at the gorgeous spectacle, and the expert maskers on the fantastic floats repaid her interest. One threw her a great fragrant bunch of violets, which she clasped with both hands like an excited child; another tossed an armful of brass; a third a box of French sweets, until young Randolph was hugely proud of her. Then, when the last silver tower and shimmering yell had melted down the street, he swung her into the crowd again, her cheeks pink with excitement and the great purple violets nestling in the furs under her pretty chin.

"Now let me have that chocolate," said Mr. Randolph. They found a corner in a pretty tea room, and he dispatched a waiter for their order, while the room filled steadily.

"Do you know," he said, "you've changed somehow?"

"The pretty maiden came back with

A Pleasure to All.

No Pill is as pleasant and positive as DeWitt's Little Early Risers. These Famous Little Pills are so mild and effective that children, delicate ladies and weak people enjoy their cleansing effect, while strong people say they are the best liver pills sold. Sold by Pauls & Co.

Some idea of the amount of liquor and tobacco consumed in this part of the state may be formed from the report of the internal revenue collector for the month of September. The collection on beer amounted to $36,721.50; spirit stamps, $5,507.29; cigars, $14,568.98; tobacco, $8,901.65.

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a running nose or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous lining.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free. Write to J. C. Hall, Littlefield, Mass., and Hall's Family Pills are the best.

Approaching Wedding.

Invitations have been received in this city to the wedding of Miss Mary Katherine Grove and Dr. John Arthur Stauden, which will take place at Ashbourne on the evening of Wednesday, October eighteenth.

Indigestion Causes Catarrh of the Stomach.

For many years it has been supposed that Catarrh of the Stomach is caused by indigestion and dyspepsia, but the truth is exactly the opposite. Indigestion causes catarrh. Repeated attacks of indigestion inflame the mucous lining of the stomach, and expose the nerves of the stomach, thus causing the glands to secrete mucin instead of the juices of natural digestion. This is called Catarrh of the Stomach.

Kidney Dyspepsia Cure

relieves all inflammation of the mucous membranes lining the stomach, protects the nerves, and cures bad breath, sour risings, a sense of fullness after eating, indigestion, dyspepsia and all stomach troubles.

Kidney Digests What You Eat

Made the Stomach Sweet.

Bottle only Regular size $1.00, bottle 24 times as large $2.50.

Seeking Safety in Numbers.

Dr. R. J. Baldwin, secretary of the Southern Educational conference, patented the little Mobile-colored boy on the head.

"This little boy," he said, "fell in an examination last week. It was an examination of the Bible, and the first question the teacher asked was, 'How many commandments are there?'"

"The little boy thought awhile, and then he answered, 'A hundred!'"

"A hundred! No, of course not," said the examiner. "That will do for you."

"And the little boy went out sadly. He had failed.

"But he hung about the building and in a half hour another boy appeared. He was on the way to the examination too. He asked the boy who had failed what questions had been put to him, and the unhappy failure answered:

"The teacher wanted to know how many commandments there were. What will you say when he asks you that?"

"I'll say ten," was the reply.

"The boy who had failed laughed loud and long.

"Ten!" he cried. "Well, just try him with your ten. I tried him with a hundred and he wasn't satisfied!"—Chicago Chronicle.

DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everybody who reads the newspaper is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century, discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is the best remedy for all kidney, liver and bladder troubles. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work, in private practice, among the helpless poor to procure relief and has proved so successful in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble.
