COMMERCIAL

MUSEUM

Mr. John J. MacFarlane, Librarian of the Philadelphia Commercial Musenm last night addressed the teachers of the county and some others in the High School auditorium on the subject of Japan, dwelling principally on the products of that country. The object of the address was to interest the educators of the county in the Philadelphia Commercial Museum and its proposition to furnish free to the schools of the Commonwealth a collection of the wide range of exhibits that make up the museum.

Dr. W. P. Wilson of Philadelphia is a director of the Commercial Museum and a leading spirit of the enterprise, which has as its object the advancement of popular education along the line of commerce. The museum was first fostered by the City of Philadelphia, but during the last session of the Legislature an appropriation of $25,-000 was made by the State to enlarge the museum's scope of usefulness and to make its exhibits available to all the schools of the State. In this way will be met the need for education in regard to commercial products, the better fitting children of today for the duties that will come to them later in life as the future merchants and manufacturers of this country.

The Commercial Museum has already the State, each collection comprising one hundred photographs. Pretty nearly the whole world is represented in the European countries, which furnish but few specimens.
