

NEWSPAPERS.

striking things that great men have said about them. A correspondent requests that we print some of the striking things great men have said about newspapers—that is, sayings that embody the purpose and doings of the press. With pleasure.

Bryant said: "The press is good or bad according to the character of those who direct it. It is a mill that grinds all that is put into its hopper. Fill the hopper with poisoned grain, and it will grind it to meal, but there is death in the bread."

James Parton said: "The newspaper presses in the people's university. Half the readers in Christendom read little else."

Jefferson said: "The basis of our government being the opinion of the people, the very first object should be to keep that right, and were it left to me to decide whether we should have a government without newspapers or newspapers without a government I should not hesitate a moment to prefer the latter."

Cardinal Gibbons said: "The dread of exposure in the public press keeps many a man sticking close to the path of rectitude who otherwise would swing off into the byways of graft."—Chicago Journal.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

Some men work just enough to keep dirty.

Every one wants always to be able to work, but not always to have to. If you don't like certain persons, how you hate to hear their money rattle!

Here is one sign that you are talking too much—when your listener tries to pull away from you.

After a man passes fifty it is impossible for him to get up any enthusiasm about anything but his troubles.

Ever notice how the big flies avoid fly paper? It is the same with the really big men. They avoid a room caught.

You can follow directions in making a cake or cutting out a shirt, but there are no directions that can be followed successfully in managing a man. Somehow he is not like a cake or a shirt.—Atchison Globe.

The Stuart Kings.

The family name of the Stuarts was originally, as Mr. Bayley observes, Fitzalan. The original Walter Fitzalan, brother of the ancestor of the dukes of Norfolk, was lord high steward of Scotland, and from this circumstance his branch of the family appears to have adopted the name of Stewart. When the change began is not certain, but it was probably not later than the time of Alexander, the great-grandson of Walter Fitzalan, for both his sons—James, the grandfather of Robert II. and all the Scottish Stewart kings, and John, the ancestor of Lord Darnley—appear to have borne the name of Stewart.—Notes and Queries.

A Magister and Mr. Howells.

"When F. D. Howells," said a publisher, "was the editor of Harper's, a young man of humble and rough exterior one day submitted personally to him a poem.

"Mr. Howells looked over the poem. Then he said to the young man: "Did you write this poem yourself?" "Yes, sir. Do you like it?" the youth asked.

"I think it is magnificent," said Mr. Howells. "Did you compose it unaided?" "I certainly did," said the young man firmly. "I wrote every line of it out of my own head."

"Mr. Howells rose and said: "Then, Lord Byron, I am very glad to meet you. But I was under the impression that you had died at Missolonghi a good many years ago!"—New York Tribune.

Those Headless Angels.

The Right Rev. Richard H. Wilmer, late bishop of Alabama, was remarkable at once for his piety and his humor. When some one asked him why it was that the pictures and figures of men angels as well as female angels were represented without heads, the bishop replied promptly that it seemed to be easy enough to make angels out of women, but that men could only get into heaven by a "close shave."

Cat Medicine.

The ancient physicians had a firm belief in the healing powers of different portions of the cat, probably from some confusion existing in their minds with regard to its own nine lives. One of them gives as a valuable recipe to cure fevers two pints of water mixed with three drops of blood taken from the ear of an ass and certain parts of a cat's digestive organs.

Kept a Secret.

Wife—Think I can't keep a secret, do you? Husband—Yes, do. Wife—Well, I've worn an earring that I borrowed for the past two months, and I haven't told a soul yet. So there!

As His Friend Looks at It.

Cobb—There was another girl in love with me, so my wife married me for spite. Do you know, she certainly got good and even with her. —Detroit Tribune.

Satisfied.

First Boy—Did you have plenty of nice things to eat at that party? Second Boy—Did we? We had such loads of everything that we saw Mrs. Goodson gave me some lead cake to take to my mother. I didn't even lick it going home.

Time to Change.

Elyth—Are you going to Niagara Falls on your wedding trip? Herbert—No, I went there on my two previous wedding trips, and I believe it's a hoodoo!—Detroit Free Press.

An Old English Law.

An act of parliament, passed in the reign of George III. and which is still in force, exempts members of the yeomanry from the ballot for the militia, allows them to ride through a toll bar when in uniform without paying and also relieves them from the tax on powder for the hair. Such privileges were highly valued in 1804, when the act was passed; but, as yeomen are not now liable for the militia ballot, as toll bars have been abolished and as hair powder is no longer in request, these favors have ceased to have any practical value. Nevertheless, they still exist.—London Mail.

Her Duplicate Presents.

She—Did your sister get any duplicate wedding presents. He—Yes; she married a widower with two boys.

TURNING BACKWARD

By BELLE MANIATES

Copyright, 1905, by I. D. Marshall

It was the night of the wedding of Mrs. Baxter's youngest daughter. The mother had hidden her a fond farewell and watched her with her lord depart. When the wedding guests all had gone save those who were to remain all night Mrs. Baxter went to her room, dismissed her maid and gave full away to her unwonted hour of solitude. She had loved her youngest daughter even more devotedly and fondly than she had her other two children, but she was not grieving over her departure now. Instead she was reveling in the first taste of freedom she had known in years, for her children—the practical Walter, the dominating Julia and the spoiled Dolly—had each and all in turn and on concert ruled each moment, great or small, of her life.

When five years ago her husband had been the hero of a little adventure that had shocked a shocking world and her fond, foolish heart would have forgiven him as he desired, Walter had taken the affair into his hands, ably seconded by his sister Julia, and before the prostrated, bewildered wife had fully grasped the situation she had found herself divorced. David Baxter, contrite and conciliatory, had been most generous in settlements and had then completely effaced himself from the lives of all he held dear and had taken up his abode in a distant city. Dolly had been too young to know much about the affair, and to her mother's timid proposal that the father should be asked to give the hand of his youngest and his favorite child in marriage she had lent a willing ear, but Walter and Julia had emphatically vetoed such an outrageous act.

An hour after the wedding ceremony Walter had started on an important business journey and Julia had taken the same train to her home and children. Her mother was under orders to follow in a few days, when the big house should be closed for the summer. Julia had arranged for some cousins to remain also until her departure. "I feel," thought Mrs. Baxter, "as if with a nervous little giggle, 'as I used to when I was a little girl and my mother went away and left me alone in the house. It seems as if I ought to play with the clock or do something forbidden."

A TALL, FAMILIAR FORM CAME QUICKLY TOWARD HER.

Suddenly she arose and went to her writing desk, opening a secret drawer, she drew forth two photographs. David Baxter, boyish and debonaire, aged twenty-one, and David Baxter, shrewd and jovial at the threshold of middle age, as when she had last seen him. There was also a slip of paper bearing his present address, for Mrs. Baxter had surreptitiously mailed him newspapers with marked articles from time to time, though she had never dared to write or hope to hear from him.

A tender look came into her eyes, and she swiftly reviewed her past. "It was my fault," she thought, "I neglected him for the children and their friends. Their wishes came first."

She carefully restored the pictures again and renewed her reverie. "We were perfectly happy that first year only—before David got so very rich, and we lived in that dear little cottage on the forty acres. I wish—I will!"

A sudden bold resolution came to her, and fearful lest her weak nature should make her change her mind she dashed off two letters, one of which was to the people who lived in their old home, which she had never sold, but had allowed some needy friends to occupy rent free.

Her dreams that night were happy pictures of woods, meadows and country lanes. In the morning she looked almost girlish. At the breakfast table she made a welcome proposal to her cousins, who were left in charge of her. She asked them if they would not like to stay in the house for a while and entertain their friends as they would, while she made a visit to some friends in the country.

"I am so tired and quiet, and there is no need of the children knowing anything about it. I'll send my letters back here to be mailed to them."

The cousins, who had ever disapproved of the Julia and Walter espousal over her mother, heartily concurred in the little conspiracy. The following day brought a response to her letter to the farm. They would be only too happy to receive her, not as a summer boarder, but as a guest. The next train bore her to her old home, where she planned to stay a few weeks and live again the olden days in her memory and associations.

She gave a little cry of pleasure as they drove up to The Nutshell, as David had named it. Here time seemed to have stood still. The vine covered porch, the flower beds, the old apple orchard and the little rustic seat in the arbor were the same. She went over the whole place. Every spot was replete with beautiful memories. The next morning she arose with a little tremor of excitement running through her veins.

Never, not even for Dolly's wedding, had she taken such care with her toilet. She was clean and the day gave promise of being one of extreme heat. It would account to the farm folk for the

L. McClure, W. R. Clark and Prof. J. W. Taylor. The testimony was a feature in itself and made up a whole comedy.

"Hold up both hands," then promise the evidence you shall give in the case now in hearing shall give the truth, the whole truth, part of the truth, not any of the truth or so little of the truth as you please. So help you George Washington."

The defense put up was that the complainant, Professor U. L. Gordy, never owned a rooster, but that it was only a delusion with him and that the whole case was a conspiracy laid by two of the witnesses, who wished to get even with the defendant.

The complainant and the defendant each told his story on the witness stand. Dr. Patten offered expert testimony for the defense to show that Professor Gordy had rooster on the brain. Col. Newton's address to the jury was a masterpiece of humor. His honor's charge to the jury was likewise very entertaining and was delivered with the best of effect. The jury seemed to believe that there was a "conspiracy" on foot and returned a verdict of "Not Guilty but to return the rooster."

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one disease which has been able to cure in all stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surface of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing her work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials.

HOLLY AND CHRISTMAS TREES.

The stores yesterday began to set out holly trees. The holly green leaves are indissolubly associated with the idea of Christmas and are apt to suggest the Christmas tree. The latter will come in next week. Old Bald top and other portions of Montour Ridge has yielded a harvest of Christmas trees for many years past and no one has as yet come forward with the prediction that the crop will be short this year. Bring in the Christmas trees; Santa Claus will do the rest.

MINERS ARE SAVING.

The Shamokin News says the anthracite miners are preparing for a strike next spring and are saving their earnings. It says the deposits in the four local banks amount to considerably more than two million dollars, an average of one hundred dollars for every man, woman and child in the city.

FINAL PREPARATIONS.

Many windows on Mill street are receiving a thorough cleaning out preparatory to being filled up for Christmas. Yesterday no less than four were observed as empty and receiving an overhaul. These late comers, judging by the preparations will be as handsome as any when dressed up for the Christmas throng.

NEW FRONT.

The new windows and door at Titel's hotel, Mill street, installed by George Riefersnyder, improve the appearance of the hotel very much. Large plate glass both in the windows and door take place of smaller and more inferior glass formerly used. The window blinds on the inside have also been removed.

LABORIOUS TASK.

The window of a cigar store is not supposed to lend itself very conveniently to Christmas decoration, but David Haney has accomplished the well-nigh impossible. His window is a marvel—look at it as you pass, remembering that he used up 125 yards of material in producing the effect.

BOWLING.

Judging from the crowds present and the continuous sounds of bowling heard at the new alleys on East Mahoning street, it does not seem that the sport of bowling will suffer for the want of votaries in Danville. The results that have followed the opening are in all respects gratifying to the proprietors.

DO YOU GET UP WITH A LAME BACK?

Kidney Trouble Makes You Miserable.

Almost everybody who reads the newspapers is sure to know of the wonderful cures made by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy.

It is the great medical triumph of the nineteenth century, discovered after years of scientific research by Dr. Kilmer, the eminent kidney and bladder specialist, and is wonderfully successful in promptly curing lame back, kidney, bladder, uric acid troubles and Bright's Disease, which is the worst form of kidney trouble.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but if you have kidney, liver or bladder trouble it will be found just the remedy you need. It has been tested in so many ways, in hospital work, in private practice, among the helplessly poor to purchase relief and has proved to succeed in every case that a special arrangement has been made by which all readers of this paper who have not already tried it, may have a sample bottle sent free by mail, also a book telling more about Swamp-Root and how to find out if you have kidney or bladder trouble.

When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper and send your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., 510 Broadway, N. Y. The regular fifty cent bottle is sold by all good druggists.

Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address Binghamton, N. Y. on every bottle.
