The lack of a portmanteau word to express both sexes without specifying either did not, however, trouble the new maid who approached her mistress with the ingenious remark, "Please'm, a friend of mine has called-and may I ask it to tea?"-London Chronicle.

A Point In Punctuation.

For a century past, probably longer, the rule of the best printers and publishers has been, "Three words in the same construction are separated by commas." Two examples will illus trate the rule:

"John, James and Thomas have come." As so punctuated the first name is vocative, the second and third nominative. Two persons have come.

"John, James, and Thomas have come." And now the three names are all nominatives. Three persons have come The two meanings can be indicated otherwise only by a footnote. - New York Times.

Try It. "Don't you smell fire?" "No, I don't think I do." "I don't either, but most people do If you ask them."

A Cautious Statement. More reserved in its wording than most epicrohs is one in a Derbyshire churchvard, which, after giving particulars of birth and death, concludes "'Twas said he was an honest man." cing.
