He continued James Scarlet, Esq., of this city, various denominations. He continued his search throughout the house and in all nooks and corners, old pots and old kettles, in fact in every out of the way place, he found sums of money, amounting in all, it is stated on good authority, to about $6,000.

It was known for some years that the deceased had been very close in financial matters but it was never imagined that she stored away that posed that they were very poor as they resided on a farm of but fifteen acres, rented their own farm. The husband was a regular attendant at the Shamokin market, carrying eggs and produce in large baskets. Naturally he was very jubilant over the finding of the money. The sale at the house will take place and it is natural that there will be a large number of eager bidders for the furniture and other household articles, with a hope of buying something with a bonanza in it.

SOME PLANKS IN GRANGERS' PLATFORM

At a conference of leading Grange workers and representative members of agricultural organizations, held recently in Harrisburg, it was decided to arrange a platform for the farmers for the coming State and county campaign, and ask their political parties to insert the same in their respective platforms, and to endeavor to secure pledges from candidates for State office, including House and Senate, to support the reforms. The leading planks of ithe proposed platform are as follows

Trolleys to be given the right to carry freight.

No candidate to accept a free pass during his term of office.

Corporations to live up to the constitution of the State.

No mining of coal by transportation companies; directors in corporations not to furnish supplies to them; no owning or operating of parallel or competing lines of railroads.

No discrimination in freight rates. Licenses and personal property taxes to be returned to the counties.

A uniform passenger rate of two cents a mile.

Equalization of taxation.

An increase in State aid for township roads from fifteen to fifty per

An increased appropriation for centralized township schools and township high schools.

"In the old days the trade was more dangerous. We used to work from scaffolds and got many dangerous the fixings and comforts, and if a man keeps his head he can work as well as that's hard to figure, for we work by the job. The judicial tribunal before which all Westphalian witches were forced to appear was called the vehm-gericht and was composed of the most superstitious set of bigots in the province. The trees are still standing under which this witch trying congress regularly met on the commons of Soest, and the records of their proceedings are still to be found in the archives at the town hall. One of the most noticeable things in these queer old records of the days of coarse and fine and straight and curly. In one very characteristic feature, however, that of color, all the locks have the same general appearance, being uniformly red.

It is passing curious, to say the least, that in a country where red hair does not predominate all the witches executed during a period covering several hundred years should have had red

THE TRAMP PROBLEM.

How Count Rumford Solved It In Bavaria In 1790.

A remarkable experiment was made in Bavaria in 1790 in an effort to solve the problem of the unemployed. Count Rumford, an Englishman, after an adventurous career in America, settled in Rayaria won the confidence of the elector and obtained permission to apply Cromwellian methods in ridding the state of all its tramps, beggars. thieves and undesfrables. On New Year's day four regiments of cavalry were distributed throughout the state, and at a given hour a "drive" was made of all the undesirables. Over 10,-000 were placed under arrest, includ-

These derelicts were afterward set to work in factories which had been specially established for their reception, and Count Rumford superintended the work of their reformation. Some trouble was at first experienced with the raw army, but by kindness, exhortation and encouragement, by the public distribution of special awards for mer it, the best results were achieved, and in a few years the thriftless were converted into good citizens. Count Rumford secured a great hold upon these people. On one occasion when he was reported to be dying a multitude of poor people marched in procession, silently and with bowed heads, to the principal church in Munich to offer prayers for his recovery, despite the fact that he was a for

There are towns in Hungary, and small towns, too, where from seven to ten idioms are constantly being used. On the Galician frontier there is in a lovely valley the old town of Eperjes. The number of its inhabitants do not exceed 12.000. To this day the good people of Eperjes are in the habit of talking or being talked to in six different languages and several dialects. An ordinary household will include a Slovac manservant, a Hungarian coachnan, a German cook and a Polish chambermaid. What is still more remarkable, each grade of society will tenaclously cling to its own language for centuries.

RUNNING THE GANTLET.

This Punishment Was Once Used For Military Discipline. The following extracts give informa tion concerning the punishment of "running the gantlet:" "In running the gantlope the regiment was formed six deep, and the ranks opened and faced inward. As he thus passed through the ranks every soldier gave him a stroke."-Grose's "Military
