CHANGES IN THE

A new policy will be pursued this year by Gen. Gobin when the division is called together at Gettysburg for its annual encampment in July, when it is expected that maneuvers somewhat similar to that pursued at the order were observed. encampment of the Third Brigade at Mt. Gretna will be carried out.

It was decided finally that the annual encampment be held from July 21st to July 28th, and commanding officers are now making their arrangements accordingly. Gobin, the new major general, will institute a number of reforms in the Guard, among which is the one change mentioned. He has long been an advocate of more thorough training during encampment week ;and some radical changes are in store. He is opposed to spending the week in training that may be obtained at any time in the armories, and his new system is calculated to give the guardsmen a better idea of active service.

FELL FROM SECOND STORY WINDOW

Little Mildred Mottern, aged abou 2 years, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Mottern, East Market street, had a remarkable escape from serious injury vesterday morning.

The child fell from the second story of the Mottern home unto a porch roof and thence to the ground. In alighting on the earth she fell among some window sashes, breaking two panes of glass.

Aside from some bruises about the head and a thorough shaking up the to parties. little girl was uninjured.

Al. Leech Dying.

Al Leech, one of the best known light comedians in musical comedy, 'Girls Will Be Girls,' is lying at the point of death at a hotel in Lancaster. Leech appeared on the stage Monday night and gave a satisfactory performance, although a very sick man.

Tuesday he collapsed entirely, as the result of a critical stomach disorder and attending physicians give no hope of his recovery. Al Leech and "The Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Three Rosebuds'' were a head-line railroad company, has resigned, to take feature in all the large vaudeville houses of the country until two years ago, when they were starred in musicagent of the road, whose office now is al comedy with success by William A. Hawaiian Huckleberry. On the island of Hawaii are great thickets of the ohelo, or Hawaiian huckleberry (Vaccinium reticulatum), which the natives consider sacred to Pele, the goddess who is supposed to preside over the famous crater of Kilauea, and which, together with white pigs and chickens, are thrown by then into the boiling red lake during an eruption to appease the wrath of the aggressive dame and thus cause the rivers of lava cease flowing on their destructive ourse. These berries grow in clusters of the brimsione beds and are so nunerous that a bushel may be easily gathered in half an hour. In appearance they somewhat resemble a cranberry, and the flavor is pleasantly suggestive of grapes.

The Word "Expire,"

"Expire" in its literal sense is breathng out. Inspiration and expiration together constitute respiration. Izaak Walton observed that "if the inspiring flat and covered with forests, salt lakes or expiring organ of any animal be stopt it suddenly dies." The Romans an area which is not less than 100,000 life instead of "dying," by way of dense clouds of mosquitoes float over (he has lived) instead of "he is dead." In all languages the reluctance frankly to say "dead" or "die" appears; hence treacherously concealed under a sway such words and phrases as "pass away." "decease." "demise." "the departed," "defunct," "the late," "no "if anything should happen to one's life.
