What Dixon Would Say.

Many persons are heard to remark upon the condition of the canal in the ricinity of the Mill street culvert, er has become very offensive and con-ducive to anything else than good health. It seems that such a thing as keeping the ditch clean is out of the question and about all that remains to e done is to drain off as much of the objectionable matter as possibe and to disinfect the bottom in some way everal of our citizens discussing th matter yesterday agreed that the use of disinfectants was the best solution of the problem and named several that might be applied among them being

The question that naturally suggests itself is why water can not be kept out of the canal. If this were accomplished everything else would be easy. During heavy rains, of course, the bottom might be flooded, but a deep ditch rightly constructed would carry off all the water and the canal would be dry the greater part of the time Unless something like this is done it will be only a few weeks until we have mosquitoes by the million as last scene of summer, to say nothing of the other ways in which the stagnant old ditcl

Benefits of Paving.

One of our exchanges quotes a prominent business man of Sunbury as having said, "the paying of our streets was the making of this town." Sunbury used to have the reputation of being one of the dirtiest towns in the State and now it is one of the cleanest and most up-to-date. Every year the bor ough paves one or two squares, and now they are getting bricked streets on the outskirts. The first paving was put down on Market street fourteen years ago, and it is practically as good as when first constructed, without cost ng anything for repairs. This was he testimony of an unbiased citizen who had experienced the benefits ac cruing from permanent street improve ments, both to the individual property owner and to the community. In no town in central Pennsylvania has there been a more marked increase in real estate values than in Sunbury, and her good streets are largely responsible.

Escaped Prisoners Captured.

Fred Connor and Charles Becker, the men who escaped from the Columbia county jail at Bloomsburg Thesday night, were captured at Mud Pond, near Scranton, early Saturday morning by special Officers Macken and Fahey of the D. L. & W. company.

The capture was the direct result of their coming out in the open in an attempt to get away from the scene of their first break for freedom. When caught they were on the way to Can-

The baccalaureate sermon to the graduating class of the high school was preached by the Rev. L. D. Ulrich at Trinity Lutheran church Sunday evening. Along with the class, the faculty and the school board of Danville were present, all occupying seats that had been reserved in the front part of the auditorium. There was a very large congregation present.

Clyde Davis, Miss Mae Dreifuss, Fred Roberts and Miss Lydia Woods, of the class of 07° acted as ushers. A large pennant bearing the class colors, pink and green, and on which was inscribed the year of graduation, "'06," was spread upon the wall over the pulpit. The church was very tastefully decorated about the altar, with large palms, ferns and carnations.

As usual on such occasions much interest centered in the class, which was composed of twenty-seven persons, thirteen boys and fourteen girls. The young ladies, while not uniformly dressed in white, were very tastefully attired and presented a very bright and attractive appearance. The entire class, boys and girls alike, wore the

The church was opened with the regular service, after which special music was rendered and the sermon was preached. Rev. L. D. Ulrich, the pastor, took his text from Romans, 12th chapter, 11th verse: "Not slothful in business; fervent in spirit, serving the Lord."

The baccalaureate sermon was indeed a sound and practical discourse delivered in Mr. Ulrich's best vein. The discourse throughout was an appeal to the class, showing how religion and business should go hand in hand—how, while a person may be concerned with the affairs of the world, he may at the same time serve the Levil and attractive appearance.
