WHAT LEROY FOUND

By AMY DARLING Copyright, 1906, by E. C. Para

"'Deed, I ain't agwine tuh break no doo's down disbyer time o' night." The able servitor was firm even though a for the men who caught their fancy ten dollar bill waved gently under his | Clearly she would give no sign of pref-

ed Leroy. "My keys, my papers-everything, in fact, except my pocketbook and eigar case, is in my other clothes." "Th. hu," agreed the new elevator boy, "but I ainer gwine ter lose no job bustin' in yo flat and gettin' fired in the mo'nin'." He turned out the light in the elevator ere and went back to down again as he suddenly remember- "It is a serious matter." Imogene the settee in the reception room. Nat ed that he was draped largely in a bit off the end of her embroidery linen Lerov's secret of success had been his ability to admit defeat, and he turned sadly toward the door. next block where Margaret lived. The clerk there knew him. There might be a chance to get an unoccupied apartment. It was his only hope unless he took the long trip down town, and he was tired to the point of exhaustion. The clerk looked up in surprise as he way to mirth when Nat drolly imitated

"You can't blame 'em," the clerk condoned. "There was a chap the other night got a boy in the Belfort apartments to break in; gave him a fiver for the job. The police figured that he must have made a clean profit of about $500."

"How about you?" asked Nat. "Happen to have a vacant apartment where I could put up overnight?"

"We've got a walting list of fiftyeight names," declared the clerk. "We I'm glad you know." won't have an apartment vacant until October even at that. "No chance?" pleaded Nat.

The clerk shook his head and Leroy turned away. Just as he was about to name called and he turned back. "I tell you what I might do," whispered the clerk. "Miss Ashton is out

The pencil was forgotten now. He vrapped himself in the slumber robe rom the couch and sat at the open window, which commanded a view of the river, and he watched the lights across the water glinting on the quiet stream. He did not feel like sleeping. He had come in utterly exhausted, but this revelation had completely changed his mood. He was conscious neither of fatigue nor sleepiness. He knew only that Margaret loved him, cherished the little trinkets he had given her and held his memory dear in secret. He lard before you marry him." recalled now something she had said once about girls who laid their snares erence, and she had buried her secret "But I can't get in otherwise," plead- in her desk to wait until he found out- was frankly angry and perplexed. if he ever did. He shuddered as he that will only make any subsequent thought of what might have been. There was the sound of the opening explanation so unpleasant. Men are and shutting of a door, but he gave no peculiar, anyway, and in an affair of heed. He had told the boy to bring ice this kind"water.

"Nat, what are you doing here?" He sprang to his feet and then sat too strongly." "Nat, what are you doing here?" colored slumber robe.

"I suppose you think I am playing deliberately. "If it were my own af-Indian," he remarked over the back of fair I should consider it a matter of There was an apartment hotel on the the chair, "but I am here through the conscience. Willard is the sort of man tended the consideration and told me to take anything of that kind to heart. charity of our friend downstairs." Quickly he sketched his dilemma, and I know him well." "I don't care a bit whether he knows she had to laugh in spite of herself. "Aunt Ruth and I came home sooner than we expected," she said. "The I should have told him in the first clerk was asleep, but we had our keys place, but he never asked me, and I and did not awaken him. I guess the didn't consider it necessary. I never entered the office, but surprise gave boy did not know you were coming thought Bart would." here.' "I haven't been stealing anything," with screece significance. "But the fact remains that Bart has"he defended.

"Been prying into my secrets?" she "Has what? Am I always in troulaughed. "Just one," he said slowly. "I was Lazily, comfortably interested, the ble?"

looking for a pencil, and-I-saw that voice sounded from the inner room middle panel. I didn't mean to pry, whose windows opened on the verandear-but-I never should have dream- | da. Kate stood, silent, indignant, her ed, and-I'm glad I did."

She came toward the chair. "I don't From the coel shadow of the curtained know that I'm sorry," she said simply. | window seat Bart Holman thought "I never should have let you see, but her sweeter and dearer than ever. And "I never thought," he smilled, "that "Are you in there, Bart?" Imogene the gate of heaven lay through a parti- laughed. "How long have you been tion in a writing desk."

"Heaven," she said as her lips brush-ed his forehead, "lies in many places." me? Whatever made you come home when everybody wanted you to stay in push through the door he heard his I find mine in a Morris chair wrapped Japan?" in a slumber robe."

"I must have been slumbering a long | request." "I must have been similation a total "And went in th time," he laughed. "That menu card is cial request too?" "And went in the first place by spedated three years ago." Kate flashed one single glance at her

"I cannot realize even now," she whispered, "that this is not all a cousin. She had not known how much dream." "From which may we never awak- had told her. Against her will she en," he whispered as he drew her face looked at Bart. He was smiling at down to his again. "You may remain here," Margaret said after a few minutes. "I shall go good boy. He had come home the same to Aunt Ruth's room, and as a recompense to her for letting me share her apartment I'll-I'll tell her about it. eyes steatter. Inc. She loves a romance."

The Retort Humorous.

Bart. It was such a foolish, childish "You don't seem to understand," name for a girl, she thought, for the blustered the man who was trying to kind of girl at least that she prided make his point with a university proherself on being. She was not the make his point with a university pro-fessor. "I tell you, sir, I ought to know. I'm an alumni of this institu-know. I'm an alumni of this instituknow. I'm an alumni of this institu-tion myself." "Are you? That's notheyes that changed like the sea with her ing singular," was the witty rejoinder, mood. uttered so quietly that the blustering "We are not even engaged yet," man never knew what had happened. answered composedly. "I can hardly On another occasion the same pro- say when the wedding will be." fessor, having ordered from a music

"Kate is so cautious about matripublishing house a copy of a "Valse mony this time," Imogene said amused-Impromptu" by a certain French comly. "She has actually put poor Willard poser, received an "Impromptu Waltz" on probation. If he is a good boy for by another man. The publishers, when three months and manages to fulfill her called to account for their mistake, re- ideal in that time, then she will consent plied rather insolently that they had to an engagement." been in the music publishing business "If I were a girl I'd put Willard on the difference between a "Valse Im-promptu" and an "Impromptu Waltz." Would Dr. Smith kindly state to them | foreclo that difference? "Three months is long enough," said

Copyright, 1906, by Ruby Douglas

"Imogene Wayne"-Kate's face flush-chin upraised, her lashes downcast.

it had been nearly two years ago.

"When is the wedding, Kitty?"

He kissed the ring and the fingers. and Kate's hand rested of its own volltion on the bowed boyish head. The figure in gray flannels was close at hand. Bart lifted his head and looked "I think that you ought to tell Wilher squarely in the eyes, a long, full look that admitted of no compromise Kate did not even turn her head. even after two years' misunderstand-After listening to variations of the same advice and opinion for half an "Bart I must tell him." hour she felt more than annoyed. She "I'll tell him," said Bart, and when Willard came up the step leisurely Kate stood with her face seaward, and Bart "If you don't some one else will, and met him. "You look awfully unsociable, you two," said Willard gayly. "Imogene just told me you were scrapping."

"It isn't a scrap," said Bart slowly. "It's a discussion on conscience, Kate's conscience. You see, Kate and I used to be engaged, two years ago, and Kate thinks that you ought to be told of it." "Very considerate, I'm sure." Willard's face whitened. He did not look at Kate. "I think she might have ex-

Kate turned instantly. There was a look in her eyes he had never seen before, a look of tenderness and gladness. "I know I should have, Willard," she exclaimed. "But it was only Bart, and we were not really engaged yet, you and I, you know. I didn't think you would mind." "No one did," interposed Imogene,

"I don't," said Willard sturdily. "It's only a matter of conscience, after all. Anything else?"

Bart slipped his arm about Kate's waist in proprietary fashion.

"Yes. We've just renewed the old engagement, and I think you ought to be told of it-as a matter of conscience."

Corroboration.

Each man around the store had told his tale of the "hardest rain he ever saw fall out of the sky." 'Tom Limkins was an easy winner with his of the great harvest rain of '93.

"It began with big drops kinder scatlistening-long enough to agree with terin' like," he said, "then it got to a shower, and I just thought I'd crawl under the canvas on the reaper till it was over-knowed the team would "Not everybody. I came by special stand-but, sir, when the lightnin' took to hittin' right at that binder I concluded to get out from there. I had a gallon and a half bucket on my arm, and I lit out for the mule shed. When 1 was about halfway there the thing Imogene knew. She wondered if Bart begun to get heavy. I looked down, water I'm a"- her, and suddenly, vaguely, she felt The lank individual who had been more at ease. After all Bart was a leaning against a barrel broke in: "Well, now, I reckon that must 'a' -a trifle browner, the lines about his been the day I am thinkin' about. mouth a bit deeper, the look of his What made me know it was rainin' eyes steadier. The two years in Japan some was seein' a flock o' wild ducks go over. Gents, them ducks had fold-No one ever called her Kitty but paddlin'.' For the space of two minutes not a sound was heard save the purring of ity that surprised himself. the cat asleep on the counter, then silently, with bowed heads, the crowd dispersed. -- Woman's Home Compan-

Had Become Second Nature.

When Uncle Dave Barker had rounded out his half century in the employ back and watching the animated pair, of a great dry goods house he was built air castles peopled with little folk summoned to the private office of the who were truly her grandchildren and chief proprietor. "Uucle Dave," said who had Bob's eyes and Dalsy's hair. the head of the house, "you have work-you?" "Yes, sir," faltered the old man, won-dering if he was going to be turned of: "Well, you needn't work any more, but you can come round every Satur-day afternoon as long as you live and draw your pay. The little envelope groups of letters.—Springfield Repub draw your pay. The little envelope the long evenings while they sat out on the piazza in the cool dusk a bud of will always be waiting for you." lican. Tears stood in Uncle Dave's old eyes romance sturdy plant. as the head of the house, after shaking him cordially by the hand and wish-Bob's success in business had been due to his directness and commanding "Don't be vindictive and catty, ing him many more years of life, bowqualities, and these he brought to bear now. Before a week had elapsed the ed him out. question he longed to ask seemed cer-A few days afterward, however, he came round again. tain of a favorable answer. "Mr. Stevenson," he said, "I've put in He decided to ask her Saturday aftthree of the hardest days' work of my ernoon and had come out early for that life doing nothing. If you don't mind purpose. Datsy and his mother were I'll go back to my old place and kind in the yard tooking after the flower "No one sent me announcement cards o' hang around as if I was one of the beds. They waved their hands to him, of the probation," answered Bart calmly. "I like Newpoint. Willard men. Maybe I can help a little once expecting hint to come right out, but in awhile, and I'll promise not to get he caught a letter from the table on "Were you really?" Imogene glanced back over her shoulder to laugh again. Uncle Dave was allowed to have his the way out, and the contents brought him to a dead halt on the back steps. in anybody's way." "Isn't it comical, though, the whole affair? Well, there is one thing sure, It was from Billy Corson and ran: supremely happy. "Dear Old Chap-I suppose you are

Fate's Romance By George Masters

Copyright, 1965, by M. M. Cunningham has not written me."

"You'll be good to the youngster when she comes, won't you?" said Linden as he bent to kiss his mother. "If she looks anything like Billy she should have gray eyes and a sort of quiet brown hair-you know the kind I mean." "Of course I'll be good to her, you foolish boy," she laughed. "Don't you get his own refusal to wed.

know how glad I shall be to have a little child about the house?" Linden blushed. It was one of his mother's greatest regrets that he never had married, but he was absurdly bashful, and he hated the thought.

orson." For that reason he had welcomed the suggestion that he should lend his mother to Billy Corson's motherless little sister. It would help her to for-rt Linton." There had been great preparations made since the letter of acceptance had been sent. Linden had almost bankrupted himself in the purchase of toys, and the little room where as a child he had played was overflowing with all soris of dolls and things. Daisy was to come on the noon train in the care of the conductor, and Bobby Linden could scarcely wait until he "That's Ballport, not Bellville," he could get his most pressing affairs straightened out before he rushed off of the state." to the station to take the train back On the way he stopped to pick up a part of a play, a comedy." few more toys, and it was with his arms loaded down that he hurried through the shady street and into his own gate. Then he gave a gasp. On the porch sat a girl in summery cosprotested. tume talking to his mother. It could not be the nurse. She was far too well dressed for a nurse. It must be one of the local girls calling. He thought of the toy store package that had come undone and from which a doll's legs waved pinkly and unrestrained, and the perspiration beaded his forehead.

fied before the girls. It kept them at a distance. But how on earth could he look dignified with those infernal toys of our lives again." dangling beneath his elbow? The two women rose as he ascended the steps, and Mrs. Linden presented the other "Miss Corson," he echoed blankly.

ward. "I hope you are not disappointed."

companion of such a glorious girl? Bob chuckled, and in the saving grace of humor he lost his bashfulness as his hand closed over hers. "Since ed their wings and was just naturally you are Dalsy Corson these are for you." And he waved those pink abom-inations under her eyes with an audac-

In the days that followed the dream

Lizzie Is My Hat on Straight, Blg Bill

haps he would lose Daisy after all. H heart was troubled, but one gland from those merry eyes reassured him and he went manfully to work helping them with their gardening. It was not until after supper and they had established themselves on the plazza that he mentioned the note. "I had a letter from Billy today," he said, "a very funny letter." "What did he say?" she laughed. "He character. "That he was sorry he was not able send you to us," he said quietly. "I don't see the joke," she scolded "You are not nice to speak in riddles." "There is some mistake," he ex plained. "Billy did not send his sister ere, so you must be some other Billy's dster." He handed her the letter and he read it through with changing color. Then her eve caught the business card n the corner.

"But this is from a Mr. Corson, not erson," she explained. "That's Lilly," he explained-"Billy

'My name is Gorson," she answered. "I thought both you and your mother pronounced it oddly. But why should have made a mistake? You are Rob-

"How do you spell it?" he asked. "L-in-t-o-i.," she spelled slowly. "L-i-n-d-e-n." he corrected. "Funny that there should be a double mistake. don'i know any Linton in town." "I have it on a letter upstairs," she aid as she rese from her seat. Presntly she returned and held out an en elope. Bub glanced at the card.

aid. "Beliport is in the northern part "That's a triplet of doubles," she ughed. "It seems to be as if I were

"I don't think that it's a comedy," he aid slowly. "Surely you are not going to be so ngracious as to call it a tragedy," she "I'd like to make it a romance," he explained. "You see, I've always been ort of girl shy. Girls made me bashful and I've kept away from them. Then you came. I was all ready to be nice to a kid, and instead you burst upon me so suddenly that I did not have time to be frightened.

"The mater wants awfully to see us He had always tried to appear digninarried, and I, well can't tell you, little girl, how I want you. Surely you about his neck. begun to get heavy. I looked down, and if the blamed thing wasn't full of little sister," "she said as she came for-

> Disappointed that he should be the write before he learned to race once made a bitter enemy of a highly respectable Texas sportsman by having "You are most welcome," he laughed fun with the name he gave his pet two-year-old filly. The filly was the foal of the pet of the ranch, Little

It broke the ice all around, and in the little interval before dinner they chatted as three old friends. Since she was to be a permanent guest there was no sense in being afraid of her, so Bob exerted himself to make her feel at home, and his mother, sitting quietly

STRENGTH OF CHARACTER. It Combines Power of Will and Power of Self Restraint. Strength of character consists of two things-power of will and power of self restraint. It requires two things, there fore, for its existence-strong feeling fore, for its existence—strong feeling and strong command over them. Now, it is here we make a great mistake. We mistake strong feelings for strong A man who bears all before him, be fore whose frown domestics tremble and the children quake, because he has his will obeyed and his own way has his will obeyed and his own way in all things, we call a strong man. The truth is he is a weak man. It is his passions that are strong. He that is mastered by them is weak. You must measure the strength of a man by the power of the feelings he subdues, not by the power of those which sublue him, and hence com-

We want to do all posure is often the result of strength. Did we never see a man receive a flagrant insult only growing a little pale and then reply quietly? This is a man spiritually strong. kinds of Printing Or did we never see a man bearing a

It's Neat.

It will Please.

It's Reasonable

A well printed

tasty, Bill or Le

ter Head, Poster

Ticket, Circular,

Program, State

ment or Card 's an advertisement

hopeless, daily trial remain silent and never tell the world what cankered his home peace? That is strength. He who, keenly sensitive, with many powers of indignation in him, can be provoked and yet restrain himself and forgive-he is the strong man, the spir itual hero.

Pelted With Epithets. Sir Wilfrid Lawson, the most famous temperance advocate in England, was the target of the political wits. During his last campaign for parliament Sir Wilfrid was greeted as a "peregrinating pump handle," "an old cracked teapot," "a confiscatory mollycoddle," "a washed out water party, "a pop bottle pump orator," "the apostle of slops," "a maudlin mountebank" and "a buffoon." The last epithet was so often hurled at Sir Wilfrid that he remarked it reminded him of "Selah" in the Psalms. His hatred of war and rum led to an epigram which has frequently been repeated. "The country," he said, "is governed by two heathen deities-Bacchus and Mars, or, in other words, by the god of bottles and the god of The Opinion She Sought. "Well, what do you think of my new vill not let this mistake take you out hat?" she asked. "Do you want a candid opinion?" he For a moment Dalsy looked out across questioned.

"Heavens, no!" she replied. "Say the fields to where the sky shone redly. something nice."-New York Press. Then she turned and put her arms I don't want to brag, but I've got

"Bob," she said softly, "I think the my health and my friends, so what on whole thing must have been arranged earth more do I want?-Deland. by fate. We'll call it a romance, dear."

Queer Names For Horses.

LACKAWANNA RAILROAD. A turf critic who learned to read and -BLOOMSBURG DIVISION

Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad.

In Effect Jan. 1, 1905. TRAINS LEAVE DANVILLE.

TRAINS ARRIVE AT DANVILLE

foal of the pet of the ranch, Little Pearl, and the size was Gallantry. The Texan called the offspring Little Pearls of Gallantry. The first and the only time Little Pearls of Gallantry started the young critic took occasion to childe the gentleman who hung that title on the filly. In the course of his playful tart remarks he undertook to name the future product of the ranch whence came Little Pearls of Gallantry. Among the names he suggested were Little Things to Think About, Little Jars of Marmalade, Little Bales of Timothy, Lizzle Is My Hat on Straight, Big Bill EASTWARD.

GRAPH.

of town. She expects to be away a if you promise not to let on."

It seemed a rather mean trick to play tween a blind Venetian and a Venetian stay away?" on Margaret; to invade her apart- blind. ments without permission, but he promised himself to pry into none of her secrets and confronted himself with the reflection that she would probably have said yes, but Margaret was queer. Almost from childhood she had been self supporting, and she had steadfastly refused to regard men as romen's natural protectors and sup- the customer, "for it certainly doesn't porters. Twice since he had known her, men had asked her hand, and she had not only said no, but they had been quietly dropped from her friend-

Leroy valued this friendship too of being her chosen friend.

Rapidly he divested himself of his tumbleweeds, and there are some in outer clothing, but when he came to the prairie region. It is natural that his collar he could find no place to they should be most abundant where put it except the tiny writing desk by there are no hills or trees to stop be sure. But" the window, and that reminded him of them in their course. But we have one some notes that he must make if he tumbleweed in the east-the old witch me?" would keep them fresh in mind for the grass, so called, maybe, because it rides and reached for some paper. There panicle, with hairlike, purple branches, was paper in plotty in the neat pigeon-holes, and he thought of what his are ripe the plants are blown across sister used to say: man's desk and I'll tell you what and along fences and hedgerows. As might whom she loves with its orderly array of notes and is found throughout the United States trinkets, its well kept pigeonholes and from ocean to ocean. the spotless blotter, but pencils were sadly lacking.

that the middle of the lower s.ction was not blank, is he had supposed formed a sort of secret panel. Here, then, was where the pencils were to be found. He threw up the place from which come the majority of the toothpicks that are used in the the toothpicks that are used in the what makes it different. Why, Bart, do you know you were the first man to be a sort of chrine, and, to his won-derment, Nat found that he was its

There in the center was his photograph. He could not remember that she had ever asked for one, yet here it assortment of trinkets. There was the tiny flower ne had worn in his coat when they had had their first dinner. He had begged a rose, and she had sketched the odd couple at the table across the aisle.

One by one he recognized little souve nirs of their jaunts. Then with reverent hands he drew down the panel again. It was as if some skilled surheart. He felt almost guilty of sacri- Blatter.

"Gentlemen," wrote the genial pro- Kate. "A man who cannot stand a week longer. I can put you in there fessor, in answer, "I have not, like three months' test is not worth waiting yourselves, been in the music publish- a lifetime for." "Til promise anything for a night's ing business, and am therefore not rest," agreed Nat, mindful of a fully qualified to inform you, but since fully qualified to inform you, but since of embroidery odds and ends. "Every-Margaret's den. A bill changed hands to me I would venture to suggest that body at Newpoint knows about you and and presently he was following a hall boy, also sworn to secrecy, up the stairs.

"Yours very truly," etc.

Selfish Clock. "Want me to take the clock back, you say?" exclaimed the dealer. "Why, what's the matter with it? It's warranted to keep good time." "Perhaps that's the trouble," replied Bart, you won't be pals if Kate's conscience troubles her."

fore the silence was broken. Then The Tumpieweeu. Tumbleweeds spread themselves in Bart asked: a wholesale fashion. Instead of send-

"Does it?" ing the separate seeds out into the "Trouble me?" Kate lifted her head, world with wings or hairs to carry and the anxiety in her eyes startled highly to risk it on a proposal, and he had worshiped, if not from afar, at least he had concealed his worship and had been rewarded with the privilege the wind. The bare, sun scorched des- sense. I only asked him to give me erts of the great west produce several three months to make up my mind." "I didn't give you three minutes." "And I changed it in three weeks," she retorted quickly. "It is better to and I are old college pals."

"But you haven't told Willard about "Not yet," She hesitated and then don Sphere.

the wind like an old beidame. In Sep- added nervously, earnestly: "It isn't He turned down the unlocked flap tember this grass spreads its head or that he would mind, although I suppose he would too. I know I should mind if he had done such a thing and had not told me. But I thought he "Show me a wo- the field, often piling up in masses me he didn't believe a girl ever loved be expected, the hair grass, which has more than one man sincerely and ab-This desk was very like Margaret, so effective a way of spreading itself, solutely, and he was glad for that reason that I had never been engaged before."

Only one characteristic distinguishes the peculiar industry which serves to Kitty, will you?" was not blank, as he had supposed, but support the entire community. Strong The impersonal frankness of his tone | here.'

Courting Worry. "My wife was rather worried when I left her this morning."

"What was the matter?" "Well, she had been worrying about something or other yesterday evening, stared at him from the midst of an odd and this merning she couldn't remember what it was."

Food Far Reflection Only.

I am in a hideous pickle. Here I've inghingly insisted upon an exchange. got nothing to eat, and the only thing case. The color rose in her cheeks as He could have sworn that he had seen I've got to pawn are my false teeth, and he tossed it over on her lap. She openher throw it away, yet here it was be- if I pawn them and buy something to ed it with fingers not quite steady. such an awful fix in all my life .- Bos- flannel walking up the board walk ton Globe. Fitness. ner, to himself)-A miserable dinner! tears.

Bart?"

next day to me

Hadrian's Wall.

They were alone several minutes be Hadrian in A. D. 120 built a stone wall from Bowness, near Carlisle, on Solway frith, to the river Tyne, near Newcastle. It was eighty miles long and garrisoned by 10,000 troops. It was twelve to twenty feet high at various points, eight feet thick at the top and provided with a gallery in the rear which enabled its defenders to take their stand with only head and shoulders visible to the enemy. At every quarter of a mile there was a castle with a garrison of troops. Beacon lights and signals were used, and on an attack, whether by day or by night, the news was at once flashed up and down the wall from sea to sea.-Lon-

A man rushed into the barber shop and jumped into the first waiting chair, explaining, "Shave in a hurry." The knew, of course, until one day he told barber was about to apply the lather when he noticed the customer's face. It had been shaved in spots and looked like a wornout hair rug. "I beg your pardon," said the barber, "but whoever shaved you did not understand "I agree with him." Bart swung his business or must have been nearsadly lacking. Twice he searched the pigecaholes without result, and at last he found Twice he searched the pigecaholes without result, and at last he found Twice he searched the pigecaholes the little village of Strong, Me, from the thousands of others that are seat the thousands of others that are seat the thousands of others that are seat the little village of Strong, Me, from the thousands of others that are seat the thousands of others that are seat the searched the pigecaholes the thousands of others that are seat the thousands of others that are seat the searched the pigecaholes the thousands of others that are seat the searched the pigecaholes the thousands of others that are seat the thousands of the thousands of others that are seat the thousands of the thousands of the thousands of the thousands of the thousands others the thousands of the thousands others the thousan tered all over New England. That is you'll ever love any one as you did me, man to his trade-you are a barberwell, I am not-that's why I came Too Busy to Whistle. It is said the art of whistling will exen be counted among the lost unless do you know you were the first man there is a revival of the cheery spirit that seems to be forsaking men. who ever asked me to be his wife? body whisties as he works in these And it seemed so queer. You never strenuous days. He has too much on said a word, do you remember, just"his mind to pucker his lips in a whis "I remember," said Bart. "It was tle. Nor does he hum or sing to himenough. You gave it back."

"And you brought the ring the very self for that matter. Life is, if not downright sad, too busy for that joyous and unconscious expression of con "You gave that back too." He looked her left hand as he spoke. It was tentment.—Boston Herald. Champion Divers. ringless. Willard was certainly on probation. He reached in his inside coat "Larry Donovan," said a profession al swimmer, "made the highest dive pocket and drew out a small leather on record. It was 210 feet-a dive from the Brooklyn bridge. Donovan also took a dive from Niagara bridge, a side the menu card, on which he had eat, then I can't eat it. I never was in Bart was watching a figure in gray. good 200 feet. There are no other divers in the same class with Larry. Jack from the beach. It was Willard Burns made a dive of 150 feet from When Kate raised her lashes from the the topmost yardarm of the Three Author (invited to a very poor din- little leather case they sparkled with Brothers, the largest sailing ship of its time, and Jim O'Rourke and Julius I'll have to take care that I don't let "Why did you ever come back?" she Gautier have done some good diving, geon had laid bare Margaret's inmost anything witty slip out. - Fliegende asked. "What made you keep it, too-100 feet, 125 feet, and so on-but Bart?" Rart hent over her quickly. The ever be broken."

plessing me for my stupidity, but really I am not to blame. I had to leave town for a few days, and in the interval my maternal aunt swooped down on us and carried poor Daisy off to the cery fate I was trying to save her from-immurement in the desolate little town where I suffered so when I was a youngster. No one had your address, so they could not notify you. I im sorry that you have been put to this trouble needlessly, but hope that you and your mother will forgive me.

Bob tucked the letter into his pocked nd went toward the pair. There was ome mistake that was evident. Per

Why He Came.

KILL THE COUCH AND CURE THE LUNCS WITH Dr. King's New Discovery

ONSUMPTION Price OUGHS and 50c & $1.00 Free Trial. FOR Furnaces, etc.

PRICES THE LOWEST! QUALITY THE BEST !

----:0:-----

JOHN HIXSON NO. 116 E. FRONT ST.

THE

EOPLE'S

APER.

Sunday at

and and a second s

OPULAR

