Merry millions of little buglets sup Where the tiny cochineal insect comes from is something of a mystery, but he does come wherever the nopal plan grows and for a long time was thought to be a seed or a floweret of the plant The living female insect is twice as large as the male, weighs one-tenth o a grain and loses much weight in dry ing, so that 70,000 are needed to make ene pound. During the rainy season many millions of the creatures are drowned or washed off the plants, so that when the long dry summer comes plant But these multiply so rapidly that before long the plants are cover The last act of the female's life is to deposit a large number of eggs, on which her dead body rests, protecting them from the burning rays of the sun until the little ones emerge. In about six weeks after the beginning of the dry season comes the first harvest. The plantation laborers make the round of the nopalry and with a brush go over the entire plant, sweeping the creatures into a bag. They then are killed by immersion in hot water, by exposure to steam or by drying in hot ovens. The hot water or steam makes them a dark reddish brown or black The hot ovens make them cochineal. a red gray hue or silver cochineal. The females outnumber the males by at least 200 to 1, a fortunate fact for the planter, since the males are of no use

THE SACRED LOTUS. Sentiment of the Orient About the Fruit of Destiny. Concerning the rich fruit of the lotus, which grew luxuriantly in the Nile many charming legends have been told It was believed that it was so delight ful that those who ate of it would nev er leave the spot where it grew, but for it would abandon home and friend to spend their lives in a dream of se rene delight. Homer, in the Odyssey mentions the lotus eaters who lived on the northern coast of Africa and records their attempts to detain the followers of Ulysses by giving them the fruits of the lotus to eat, so that they should never wish to leave the pot where it grew.

The same poetical idea is known to the Arabs who call it the "fruit of destiny," which is to be eaten in Para dise, and it is on this foundation that Tennyson built his charming poem of the "Lotus Eaters." This mythical lotus has been identified by several botanists with that indigenous to Tuals, which is a thorny shrub, with ber mes the size of an olive.

Mungo Park found a species of lotus in Central Africa bearing berries of a delicious taste, which on being dried and pounded made wholesome and in Tunis has a stimulating, almost in toxicating, effect, and it is therefore probable that this plant furnished the foundation of the ancient legends.

THE LAND OF ROMANCE.

Ppain and the Peculiar Temperament of Its People. If I were asked to sum up the domiment impression that the survival in Spain of the old world mediaevalism makes, I should say that Spain is in the precise and specific sense of the word the home of romance. The spe cial character of the Spanish temperament and of Spanish developments in literature and in art is marked by a quality, rising and sinking with the rise and fall of Gothic, which we call the romantic spirit-a mixture, that is, of the mysterious and grandiose with the grotesquely bizarre of the soaringly ideal with the crudely real, a mixture which to us today has the cunning fas cination of art, but was really on both sides the natural outcome of the experiences and feelings of the men who created it. This romantic spirit was once the common possession of all ment peculiarly lent itself to the romantic attitude, and it is in Spain to day that we may catch its final vanishing echoes. It is the church, always the most powerful stronghold of tradition among any people, which enables the stranger most vividly to realize how well the romantic spirit has been preserved in Spain. Notwithstanding invasions from without and revolutions from within, especially during the early years of the last century, Spain splendidly embodied and preserved.

Power of Imagination. It is conceded by scientists that imagination has much power as a occurred !u the experience of Sir Hum phry Davy. A man went to him suf fering from paralysis to be treated by When the patient ha seated biaself Davy, as a preliminary placed a small glass thermometer b neath his tongue to take his tempera ture. The sick man thought that thi was the instrument for curing him and declared that he felt it run through all his system. Davy, curiou to see what lasting effect the imagina tion would exert, did not undeceive the man, but sent him away, telling him to return daily to have the treat ment repeated. The man did as he was told and returned daily to sit in chair with the end of a little ther mometer tucked beneath his tongue. In a few days the paralysis was completely cured by the patient's own is still the country where the mediae val spirit of romantic devotion is most

The Scheme by Which Malet Nearly others the police prefect. Another bat-twenty-three of his abettors, was shot.
