After examining exhaustively the milk supply of Washington the com-mittee says that while it compares when that edifice was built and also favorably with that of any other city, there is evidence to indicate that stale and infected milk is everywhere responsible for disease and death, and that legislation should be enacted to prevent the needless sacrifice of life.

Immigration Not Checked.

The new immigration laws, with numerous restrictions upon the reception of undesirable foreigners, which went into effect the first of the month, have had no appreciable effect upon the stream of immigrants passing through Ellis island into the country. that they believed no great reduction in the number of migrating Europeans will follow the new rules. The acts, which congress passed last February, were designed chiefly to prevent the embarkation of undesirable foreigners and so save them the expense of the voyage to America. It was not so much the intention to cut down immigration as to regulate it.

The new law requires the steamship companies to examine the immigrant before accepting him for passage, and makes the companies subject to a fine of $100 for transporting any physically or mentally defective person or any afflicted with a loathsome or contagious disease. The government physicians put the newcomers through just plants. as rigid an inspection as ever, but through the workings of the new law a far smaller percentage was obtained as likely to be deported. Immigration Commissioner Watchorn believes the number of persons sent back to Europe will be nearly cut in half. The new law increases the head tax from $2 to $4 for each person.

Relating to Coal Supply.

The insistence of Eastern cities that manufacturers and others shall constead of bituminous, in order to lessen the smoke nuisance, is a losing game according to government experts.

Will Invite Bids in Ten Days.

Although the delay has been greater than anticipated things are gradually assuming shape for beginning work on the new buildings at the hospital for the insane. The plans are practically all completed and on Friday they will be submitted to Governor

The building committee of the board of trustees, Hon. R. S. Ammerman, attorney for the board, and Dr. H. B. Meredith, superintending physician of the hospital, appeared before the board of public charities at Philadelphia on Friday. Arrangements were made for presenting the plans and specifications to Governor Stuart, who according to the terms of the bill appropriating the $389,000 will have to approve of both before the money will become available. The plans will be submitted to the governor on Friday. That he will approve of the plans and specifications in the premises admits of no doubt. A sub-committee of the board of public charities will visit the hospital for the insane here in a few days for the purpose of general approval.

Within a week or ten days everything will be in readiness for inviting bids. A period of thirty days will intervene during which the advertise-ments are running, but in a very short time afterwards the actual work of building should be in progress
