RUNAWAY GIRLS WERE CAPTURED

Two girls from this city followed the Eclipse Carnival company to Berwick on Saturday and Sunday when the father and uncle of the runaways followed to Berwick and attempted to take the girls in charge, they were given a lively chase through the streets of that town before a capture was effected.
 The girls, daughters of Jacob Ashton, aged 16 and 18 years, left Danville Saturday night, after having told some of their friends that they intended to join the carnival company. The parents of the girls thought differently of the matter, however, and followed the runaways to Berwick on Sunday.
 Sunday night about 7:30 o'clock Mr. Ashton and his brother were inquiring about the Hotel Morton as to whether anything had been seen of the girls when the father happened to spy them on Market square.
 The girls saw Mr. Ashton about the same time, and ran out Market street as fast as they could go. Mr. Ashton and his brother following. The one girl was caught only after a chase of several blocks.
 The girls were taken to the hotel and later in the evening were brought back to Danville.

Celebrated Fifth Birthday.
 A very pleasant affair took place Saturday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry G. Miller, Sidler Hill, when they tendered a party to their son, Arthur A. Miller in honor of his fifth birthday. The boy was the recipient of a number of gifts, among which was a purse of money. Refreshments were served.
 Those present were: Mrs. Anthony Schott and children Carl, Francis, Alice and Lillian, from Sunbury; Mrs. William Miller and Mr. and Mrs. Philip Pollock and children Louzo, Hannah and Ellen, from South Danville; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas R. Williams, Mr. and Mrs. George Gulliver and children Ruth, Ellen and Esther, Mr. and Mrs. Dallas Hummer and children Ada, Thomas and William, Mr. and Mrs. Harry G. How to Manicure Trees.
 A new method of overhauling and treating shade trees has been tried in nearby towns with much success.
 The method is first to trim the tree taking care to remove all dead wood and leave the top open for the circulation of the air. Then the body of the tree is scraped so as to remove the rough, hard, ragged portions of the bark that harbors insects and various kinds of scale. Then all decayed spots are cleaned out. The rotten portions dug out and the holes filled up with cement, much after the way a dentist treats a cavity in a tooth. This arrests the decay and makes the wound certain to heal over in a natural way.
 When all that work has been done the trunk and lower limbs of the tree are treated to a coat of linseed oil, with a quantity of coal oil and other ingredients mixed into it. This the bark absorbs and holds. The insects that are usually harbored in the bark find it distasteful and die or disappear. As a result of this treatment it is claimed the trees become healthy and live longer. After four or five years the treatment has to be repeated if its good results are to be maintained.

WELL LAD SCHEME TO DEFAUD

But for an item which appeared in the Morning News as well as several other newspapers warning farmers against a couple of swindlers in the guise of lightning rod agents Jesse Bogart, of Liberty township, might have been defrauded out of a snug sum of money by an alleged lightning rod concern. As it is the would be swindlers, notwithstanding their well-devised scheme, are wholly the losers and at last accounts had practically abandoned the fight, while the farmer was in the possession of a brand new lightning rod for his barn and was in position to dictate his own terms in settlement.

A couple of weeks ago the wily lightning rod men appeared at the farm of Jesse Bogart a short distance below Oak Grove. Their scheme was as follows: They endeavored to impress upon the farmer that they had an especially good thing in lightning rods, which they desired to introduce in that locality. They wanted to erect a lightning rod on his barn as a specimen of what they could do. If he would consent the cost to him should be only nominal and the lightning rod men would look for their return in the increased business that should result from the lightning rod as an advertisement.

They tried to make it clear to the farmer that he would not be running the least semblance of risk. He would not even be asked to sign an agreement, although one was carefully prepared, ostensibly intended for other farmers to sign, less favored than Mr. Bogart, who, as above stated, was to have special terms. The agreement bound the farmer to pay for the lightning rod at the rate of seventy-five cents per foot with the proviso that each ball or similar feature comprising the fixtures should count ten feet. This in itself is indefinite and illusory, but, as the sequel would show, persons approached are never asked to sign the agreement.

The only thing that was to bind Mr. Bogart was a verbal agreement, by which he was to pay $7.50 for the whole job. He was to tell his neighbors that he had paid for the lightning rod at the rate of seventy-five cents per foot, but it was to be understood between himself and the agents that he was paying for only ten feet of the lightning rod.
 To say that the farmer did not become a little suspicious at this stage of the game would probably be assuming too much. At all events, he left them go ahead and put up the lightning rod but as the sequel showed he was very careful of the part he played and saw to it that they got no signature from him.
 In a short time the job was completed and then the agent went into calling the farmer's attention to this or that feature, which stood unexcelled. It would be a good help to them they declared, if Mr. Bogart would sign a certificate to the effect that they had satisfactorily put up a lightning rod on his farm carrying out all the terms of their agreement. This, they held, he could not reasonably decline to do, now that he had a sample of their work before his eyes.

Now, it occurred that the paper on which this certificate was written was the one on the opposite side of which was the carefully worded agreement that the farmer was not asked to sign. The lightning rod men, of course, took pains to conceal the fact that if the farmer gave on the back of the agreement a certificate such as they desired it would give the document all the legal force of an agreement properly signed and would make Mr. Bogart liable for the full cost of the lightning rod or in all probability a sum that really exceeded the cost.
 During the days that the lightning rod men had Mr. Bogart in tow he read or he remembered of having read of a scheme practiced elsewhere by lightning rod agents to defraud farmers. The methods employed in those instances suggested several features of the present transaction. Therefore, when the men asked him to sign the certificate on the back of the agreement he peremptorily declined.
 There were several days before there were any developments. Then a party came along and demanded that Mr. Bogart pay for the lightning rod, not according to the verbal agreement, which made him liable for $7.50, but for the full amount as implied in the written agreement, $140.
 Of course they didn't get the money. The signature which they had expected to obtain in order to make the agreement legally binding was lacking and they had to resort to bluster and bluffing. They threatened the farmer with arrest and imprisonment and pointed to the fact that the lightning rod was on the barn to prove that they had him in their power.
 Mr. Bogart was taken to town and placed the matter in the hands of an attorney, who sustained him in the course he had taken and gave him some valuable advice as to how to proceed. When the lightning rod men appeared again they had abandoned the idea of putting the farmer in jail or even of giving him any trouble. They wanted to compromise and were willing to take $25 for the lightning rod. The farmer was not anxious to have anything to do with the men and he told them to take down the rod. This they were not willing to do but declared they would rather give him the lightning rod.

Mr. Bogart was in town Saturday reporting progress to his attorney. The case stands at present as above described, which leaves no doubt but that Mr. Bogart will come out all right with in all probability a brand new lightning rod in the bargain.

IRON DRAIN PIPE IN POSITION

North Mill street, which was closed on Friday, was thrown open to travel again on Saturday. Some persons are heard to protest against the closing of streets while repairs or reconstruction is under way, but Friday afternoon afforded an instance when it was really impracticable to keep the street open during its whole length.

It occurred while the heavy iron pipe of 16 and 24 inches respectively were being sunk at the intersection of Spruce street. Night came on before the work was completed but early on Saturday the pipe along one half of the width of the street was buried and the spot was graded over. The street was in good condition for traffic Saturday night and yesterday.
 Comparatively few persons were inconvenienced, as, while reconstruction is in progress, many persons in entering and leaving town make it a practice of using Montour row and West Centre street. The road over the center pier connecting Montour row with the State highway just beyond the borough line affords a clean and level drive and the way through Montour row is much preferable to the more roundabout and hilly route that leads over Upper Mulberry street.
 Just at present North Mill street can be driven with comparative comfort. Excavation is pretty nearly completed and the bottom of the roadway is fairly level and solid. A little later, while the actual laying of brick is in progress it is difficult to understand how traffic can be admitted to the street.
 The sinking of the heavy iron pipe made it necessary to change the location of the water plug at Mill and Spruce streets. It was removed about 12 feet further eastward up Spruce street by Superintendent of Construction P. J. Kiefer yesterday afternoon. The work, along with the insertion of a new plug at Upper Mulberry and Centre streets, occupied several hours, the borough water in the third ward being shut off during that time.

DOING THEIR DUTY.
 Scores of Danville Readers Are Learning the Duties of the Kidneys.
 To filter the blood is the kidneys' duty.
 When they fail to do this the kidneys are sick.
 Backache and many kidney ills follow.
 Urinary trouble, diabetes, Doan's Kidney Pills cure them all. Danville people endorse our claim.
 David B. Jones, printer of 401 Church street, says: "I think very highly of Doan's Kidney Pills. They cured me of an enervating backache and lameness across the small of my back. This trouble commenced with sharp twinges just over my hips and later I had considerable pain all over my back even extending to the top of the head, in fact, I never knew where the pain would strike me next. I saw Doan's Kidney Pills in a drug store. It only required a short time to show that they were helping me, and after taking the treatment for a time the trouble left me entirely and I have had no return of it for years. I made a statement to that effect in 1896 and that statement stands as good today as it did then."

Pa Is After Sheriff Sharpless.
 John Haupt, of Lewisburg, father of Caroline Haupt Bozark, went to Sunbury last week to see about prosecuting Sheriff Joseph Sharpless, of Northumberland county, because of the marriage of his daughter to William Bozark, an inmate of the county jail.
 The girl went to Sunbury in May and went through the jail. She saw Bozark and fell in love with him. Frequent visits to the prison were made by her, and recently the pair were married in the parlor of the warden's residence.
 Haupt says his daughter is under age, not accountable for her actions and that the sheriff had no right to allow the marriage to take place. The father wants the marriage annulled.
 Mrs. Bozark wants the judge to release Bozark so that they may go to housekeeping.

G. E. Burns Testifies After Four Years.
 G. E. Burns, of Carlisle Center, N. Y., writes: "About four years ago I wrote you stating that I had been entirely cured of a severe kidney trouble by taking less than two bottles of Foley's Kidney Cure. It entirely stopped the brick dust sediment, and pain and symptoms of kidney disease disappeared. I am glad to say that I have never had a return of any of those symptoms during the four years that have elapsed and I am evidently cured to stay cured, and heartily recommend Foley's Kidney Cure to any one suffering from kidney or bladder trouble."

More Pay for Court Duty.
 Jurors serving at next session of court which convenes in September, will receive $2.50 per diem for their services. Witnesses for the Commonwealth at the same court will also get an increased compensation of $1.50 per diem. The court will be an expensive one, owing to the increased fees to be paid. The additional financial obligations placed upon the county may cause the county tax rate to be raised next year. For years it has been difficult to get persons to serve as jurors in trials, both civil and criminal, because of the inadequate compensation relative thereto. The same trouble confronted the prosecuting attorneys in getting persons to testify for the Commonwealth. The increased financial recognition is expected to cause more persons to be willing to serve in capacities indicated.

OLD TREES FALLING UNDER THE AXE

The three fine old trees in front of J. H. Goesser's property, Centre street, which have swayed in the tempest and cast their refreshing shadows down on the thoroughfare for the greater part of a century, are being cut down to make room for a modern concrete pavement.

The trees are three in number—one buttonwood and two maples standing in front of the Askins homestead, now the property of Mr. Goesser. They are veritable giants towering far above the houses. It is practicable to remove the trees only by cutting them down in sections, first removing the limbs and lastly the trunk. Even employing this method much care has to be exercised lest the buildings, the telephone or electric light wires be damaged.
 To assist in looking after the wires Borough Electrician Smith was on the ground yesterday and rendered valuable assistance. In addition a large crowd was present and advice tendered to the workmen as to how to proceed was as plentiful as it was free. The first big tree next to Mr. Goesser's warehouse was removed and the trunk extracted from the sidewalk on Thursday. The second tree, or the big buttonwood, was practically gotten out of the way Friday.
 What adds a special interest to the trees is their great age. The oldest persons living in the neighborhood have only the merest traditions as to when they were planted. Michael Powers, who is considerably over ninety years of age and has lived for the greater part of his life literally in the shadow of the fine old trees, says he has no knowledge of when they were planted. They were there when he took up his residence on the street. He has known the trees sixty and odd years. Mr. Powers remarked yesterday that he always understood that the three trees, which actually stand on the sidewalk, grew naturally at that spot and were there before the street was laid out.

One of Danville's special charms lies in its beautiful trees, which in many parts of town stand in stately rows, imparting to the streets in summer an inviting and sylvan appearance that is sure to appeal to the stranger. One can not help but regard with regret the tendency to get rid of as many of these trees as possible, thus destroying with a few strokes of the axe what beneficent nature with its unbounded resources was able to produce only in the span of a human life.
 In the case of the three trees in question, however, as viewed by those living near by, there is a pretty good excuse for removing them. Although apparently sound, owing to their massive limbs and great height no one knows what to expect in case a storm or unusual wind should strike the town. The shade, too, at that particular point is regarded by some as a little too dense to contribute to healthful conditions. Nevertheless, the row of fine trees will be much missed for awhile, even though a concrete pavement as a modern improvement takes their place.

Fine Specimen of Wheat.
 Ezra Woodside, manager of the Bowden farm, Rush township, Friday brought to the Morning News the finest specimen of wheat that have been seen by the News staff in a long while. There were eight heads averaging 4 inches in length and fully developed. Mr. Woodside states that his wheat crop this year is the finest that he has ever had. This is a rather remarkable statement in view of the fact that crops generally are supposed to be most backward this season.

A pair of horses driven by Charles Higgins, of Shenandoah, ran off for him on the mountain above Mahanoy city, on Monday, and upset the carriage, throwing out Higgins and his companion, Mart Franey. Dashing along they ran over Margaret Conley and her 2-year-old sister, Rosa, who were walking along the road. Rosa was killed and Margaret was severely injured. Higgins was also severely injured, but Franey escaped unhurt. The horses were hurt so badly that they had to be killed.

AGNES H. GARGER LAID TO REST

Agnes H. Garger, who lost her life Thursday morning by falling out of an automobile, was consigned to the grave in Odd Fellows' cemetery at 3 o'clock Friday afternoon. Although none of her relatives were present and none knew of her death yet she was very nicely buried and the services both at Doster's undertaking establishment and at the cemetery were attended by a large number of people including the members of the Eclipse Carnival company.

The unfortunate girl was laid to rest in a beautiful silver plush casket with silver trimmings, the lid bearing a large plate with the inscription, "At Rest." She was buried with the simple Episcopal ceremony, in addition to which a quartette sang a selection. There was also a beautiful floral offering as a tribute from the company to which she belonged.

No information has as yet been received from any of the sources addressed relating to Miss Garger's family, and as time wears on it begins to seem doubtful whether any of her relatives will ever be located. While the last sad rites were being performed over the dead girl Friday the thoughts of all instinctively reverted to the mother of the dead girl in far-off Buda Pesth—at that very moment no doubt, parent-like, thinking of her absent daughter, little dreaming that her life had gone out and that alone among strangers she was being consigned to the grave.

Among the personal effects of the deceased was found a document showing that "Agnes Garger was born in Buda Pesth, February 3, 1884. This, along with the fact that she was a member of the Episcopal church, is all that has been learned concerning the dead girl since Thursday.

Manager Yost has not abandoned hope of hearing from New York in relation to the dead girl. When Miss Garger left New York for Mahanoy City, some four weeks ago, she was without funds to pay her hotel bill and she was obliged to leave her trunk as security. What ever the intrinsic value of the contents of the trunk may have been to the girl, what was contained therein was very precious and she worried much over the safety of the trunk. To relieve her anxiety, a few days before her death, Manager Yost advanced her sufficient money to pay the hotel keeper. Miss Garger sent the money to a woman in New York, who, obedient to instructions, paid the bill and placed the trunk in storage. The first mail that reached Danville after the girl's death brought a letter with the storage receipt for the trunk.

Along this clew Justice of the Peace Oglesby is at present working. At the request of the show people he addressed the chief-of-police of New York supplying him with data and requesting him with such authority as he possessed to open the trunk and see whether the address of any of Miss Garger's relatives can be found. Whether the chief-of-police of the metropolis will see his way clear to comply, or whether the storage company will yield up the trunk under the circumstances, is quite uncertain at this time. It is the last hope. Unless the desired information comes from that source it is hardly probable that her mother or any of the other relatives of the unfortunate girl will receive information of her death or in the future cease to look upon her as living.

Many Lives Were Saved.
 The State department of health has saved many more lives among the poor of Pennsylvania by the free distribution of diphtheria antitoxin as shown by the records of the cases thus treated during the first six months of 1907.
 During that period the death rate from diphtheria among the cases treated with the State antitoxin was only eight per cent, as compared with eleven per cent, for the first six months of 1906. Health Commissioner Dixon attributed this very largely to the fact that the physicians throughout the State are now using the antitoxin earlier and in more liberal doses.
 During the first six months of 1907 there were 1,712 cases of diphtheria in Pennsylvania treated by the antitoxin supplied free of charge by the department of health's five hundred distributing stations. Out of this number 1,560 persons, nearly all little children, were restored to health and strength. During this same period also, 1,073 persons were treated with the State's antitoxin in immunizing doses and the records show that of this number only eighteen contracted the disease.

The great work that Pennsylvania is doing in saving the lives of the children of poor people who could not afford to buy antitoxin when their little ones are stricken with diphtheria has attracted attention all over the country, and the health commissioner is continually receiving letters from other states asking information as to the methods of distribution pursued by his department.

GUARDSMEN'S WEEK IN CAMP

Company F, Twelfth regiment N. G. P., sixty members strong, all in good health and happy, notwithstanding their heavy drills, "hike" and sham battles, arrived at South Danville on the 2:21 Pennsylvania train, Saturday afternoon.

Not only were the men strong and vigorous on their return home, but there was not an accident nor a single case of illness in the company during the week in camp. The usual interest attached to the return of the boys and not only were the guardsmen themselves glad to get home again but they found the usual pleasant and general welcome extended, revealing that our townspeople feel a warm interest in the national guard and that what sacrifices the members are called upon to make from time to time in its behalf are by no means in vain. The same applies to Bloomsburg and Catawissa, where some of those that belong to company F reside. As a matter of fact about fifteen members of Company F reside out of town. These left Danville on the 3:50 trolley car Saturday afternoon bound for their homes in Bloomsburg and Catawissa. The same pleasant greeting that they found in Danville was accorded to them all the way between the latter point and their homes.

The members of the company, while pleased with their week's experience in camp, do not hesitate to affirm that they found the work hard. The energy, however, they feel was well applied, as never before has any camp afforded such an opportunity for gaining knowledge concerning actual warfare. The "hike" and the sham battle with the drills on advance and rear guard, extended order, etc., the members declare, were of incalculable value and have afforded to them an insight into real war that has the better enabled them to appreciate the real seriousness and the responsibility that belong to a membership in the national guard.

Among those who conducted the drills was Lieutenant Fitch, a rough rider and an experienced fighter, versed in modern warfare. In the sham battle, an imaginary enemy was entrenched; the forces of the guardsmen were arranged as in real battle and all the known tactics were employed that are used to make a successful attack and minimize loss in killed, wounded and prisoners.

It has become plain that the old form of encampment is a thing of the past. Under the new order there will be more field work with brigade, regimental and company drills.

Child of Twelve Foils a Burglar.
 Frightened by a twelve-year-old girl, a big burly robber, who had packed all the silverware in the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Knouse, of Jackson township, Columbia county, in a bag, and was about to decamp, left hurriedly, and in his excitement forgot to take the bag with him. The silver is valued at $200, and included many valuable pieces of silverware. His identity has not been learned.
 The Knouses on last Friday went away to spend the day, and their twelve-year-old daughter, Miss Elizabeth, remained with a neighbor until they should return to the house. She went home early in the evening, and seeing the side window open, she went to it and called out: "Papa," but instead the big form of a man appeared in the window.
 She was very much frightened, and started to run the burglar at the same time also started to run, and it was thought that he, too, was very much frightened.
 The child went to the neighbor's home, and gave the alarm. When they returned no trace of the man could be found. He had gained an entrance through the window, and on a table in the centre of the room was a burlap bag in which the silverware had been tied.
 She said she was too frightened to remember his face, but that the man was very big and had a moustache.

There is a disease prevailing in this country most dangerous because so deceptive. Tramps Getting Prosperous.
 The employes of the lower yard at Sunbury were recently treated to a new experience in the life of the American hobo. They saw two men climb into a gondola car, carrying with them a suspiciously big bag. Making an investigation and cautiously peering into the car they were surprised to see the tramps open the bag, take out a miniature oil stove and then a pan, and cook a dainty meal of bacon and eggs and fried potatoes. The country's prosperity is reaching even the hoboes.

The willing helpers came from all the country round, several hundred of them, and danced to the inspiring music furnished by the Mohr orchestra, until four o'clock Saturday morning. Everybody had a delightful time.
