

The Blessing of Sleep.

When a man is asleep he is out of mischief. It is one of the most absolutely innocent things he can do.

It is one of the paradoxes of our civilization that sleep, innocent though it is, has become so thoroughly disreputable when it is in the public eye.

It seems that sleep may be like that equally innocent institution, religion. "This is no place to get religion," was the stern rebuke administered, as the authentic anecdote has it, by the sexton of a fashionable church when an old colored mammy gave that as an excuse for the pious ejaculations that had disturbed the course of the Sunday morning sermon.

To sleep there is to raise the suspicion that you have no regular domicile and no pew in a church, and therefore are inferentially an undesirable citizen.

Despite their collective fads, men are pretty individualistic after all. It disgusts them to see other men asleep in the open.

During the conversation Officer Voris timidly inquired whom he might have the honor of addressing. The high and mighty official, however, evaded an answer, except to say, "you are addressing one of the overseers of the poor of Scranton."

For a New Pure Food Law.

James Foust, dairy and food commissioner, of Harrisburg, delivered an address in York a few days ago before the eleventh annual convention of Retail Merchants' association of Pennsylvania, in which he said that the new food law was unsatisfactory and that it was his intention to formulate a law before the next Legislature.

Commissioner Foust's subject was "The Food Laws of Pennsylvania." He said:

"The law is not satisfactory. It means trouble by its provisions for prosecuting the wholesaler, jobber or manufacturer for food adulteration. It means the necessity of the retailer appearing in court as a witness, losing much valuable time. The kind of a law we need is one by which the retailer will be notified to discontinue the sale of adulterated products."

"Before the next Legislature convenes it is my intention to formulate a law which will eliminate the impure food evil without the necessity of a multitude of prosecutions. All that is needed is a simple law, which a man can sit down and learn in twenty minutes."

Wm. P. Prentiss a Benedict.

William P. Prentiss, of this city, and Miss Minnie D. Heninger, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Heninger, of Pottsgrove, were married Monday afternoon at the United Evangelical parsonage, by the Rev. W. E. Wallis.

The groom is a well known young man and is employed at the butt mill in the Structural Tubing works. Yesterday morning at an early hour his fellow workmen serenaded the newly married couple. Noise was produced in large quantities and was continued until the groom appeared to thank the serenaders for their efforts.

Musical Treat at Mission.

The East End mission Sunday afternoon was the scene of the finest musical treat that it has been the pleasure of a Danville audience to listen to for some time. Dr. Ellis Bond, of Binghamton, New York, sang several selections to an accompaniment played by his wife. Dr. and Mrs. Bond are visiting at the home of the former's uncle, Moses S. Bond, of Chulasky. Dr. Bond is the possessor of a magnificent baritone voice, and formerly was one of the leading vocalists of Philadelphia. The other soloist was Madam Dorsa, daughter of Robert Morris, of this city. She is a professional singer of note and has a remarkably fine voice.

"NEVER MIND THE EXPENSE"

John Collum, the man from Scranton, who turned up so mysteriously at the hospital for the insane, Friday night, is being made as comfortable as possible at the county farm.

The officers endeavored to come to some understanding with the authorities, at Scranton over the 'phone before removing the man to the poor farm Sunday afternoon. The attempt was utterly futile but the incident serves as an object lesson to show the extent to which discourtesy may be carried and how arbitrary a public official may become in dealing with the affairs of his office.

Officer Voris after much difficulty succeeded in locating a member of the Scranton board of overseers of the poor and got into communication with him. He explained the unfortunate predicament that John Collum, an alleged resident of Scranton, was in. The officers' idea was that, if the man was, as he claimed to be, a resident of Scranton, and it therefore devolved on that city to take care of him in the premises, the cheaper plan would be to get him off to Scranton immediately instead of taking him to the almshouse.

To begin with the Scranton official refused to even talk with Danville unless the message were prepaid. After this detail was arranged the official coolly informed the Danville officer that he positively would not talk with him on the subject.

On motion of Mr. Fischer it was ordered that the building and repair committee be instructed to sell all the old iron found lying about the school buildings for junk.

Mr. Fischer, of the building and repair committee, reported excellent progress in the work of installing the flush closets at the fourth ward school building. The borough is at work on the sewer, making the proper connection with the building.

River Lowest Since Year 1879.

Through the courtesy of Water Commissioner Edward Corman, the News has been furnished with some interesting data concerning the different levels of the river which have been attained during low water.

As explained in a recent issue "elephant rock," the large boulder in the river below the bridge plays an important part in the keeping of the records. As far back as the memory of the oldest resident extends, whenever the river reached a mark that was phenomally low there was always some one to row out in the stream and chisel the mark on the rock.

Rowing out to the rock Tuesday Mr. Corman discovered that the river at present is within four inches of the lowest mark inscribed, which was placed on the rock in 1854.

The river, which rose a few inches after the rain last Friday, has fallen again and is now where it stood during the low water of 1876. In 1879 it was about two inches lower than at present. With that exception, if the marks on the rock are a criterion, the river has not been lower than the present in thirty-one years.

The oldest date to be seen on the rock is "1822." The river was then not so low as the present. Accompanying the figures are the initials, "G. A. R." A trifle lower, but still above the present mark are the dates, "1833" and "1837," accompanied, respectively, with the initials, "I. O. R." and "A. D."

Party Given for Injured Man.

George O. Bartlow, of Anthony township, who was so seriously injured on the 19th of this month in falling from a wagon, is recovering and on Sunday was well enough to welcome a number of his friends and relatives who attended a gathering given in his honor at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Bartlow.

Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. William Kirkner and son, Mr. and Mrs. John Kirkner, of Milton; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bartlow and daughters Helen and Sarah of Sunbury; Mr. and Mrs. William Snyder, son and daughters Kenneth and Dorothy, of Muney; Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Fortner, of Pine Summit; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Diehl, of Strawberry Ridge, Mr. and Mrs. Cromis Whipple, of McEwensville; Mrs. Emma Michael, William Winegardner, Oliver Michael, of Clarkstown; Alvin Mohr, Jacob Conrad, James Confer, William Millheim, William Gray, Wilson Snyder, of Sunbury, and Dr. Snyder, of Washingtonville.

MISS YOUNGMAN SUPPLY TEACHER

A communication from Professor E. S. Broom, principal-elect of the high school, was read before the school board Monday night, in which the writer returned thanks and enclosed a signed contract, explaining that he would be on hand next week to enter upon his duties as principal.

On motion, Miss Emma P. Youngman was elected as supply teacher for the borough of Danville. Miss Youngman is a graduate of Park College, Parkville, Mo.; also of Bucknell university, Lewisburg. She is a resident of Danville and graduated at the local high school.

Borough Superintendent Dieffenbacher presented a report of pupils which in the natural order will be enrolled in the grammar schools of the borough this year. The first ward grammar school will have thirty-seven pupils; the second ward grammar school will have thirty-four, while in the third ward grammar school there will be fifty-eight pupils enrolled.

It was the sense of the school board that fifty-eight pupils constitute too large a number for the third ward grammar school and that the schools should be equalized, if possible. The board spent some time discussing the matter. Several plans were proposed, the most generally approved being that the non-resident pupils be distributed throughout the borough in the grammar schools where the most room is found.

On motion of Mr. Sechler the resignation of Dr. F. E. Harpel as a member of the school board was accepted.

On motion the committee was instructed to order limestone spalls from Almedia to be used on the school grounds in the fourth ward. The same material was applied on the school ground in the first ward a couple of years ago and has been found to answer the purpose admirably.

On motion of Mr. Fischer it was ordered that the building and repair committee be instructed to sell all the old iron found lying about the school buildings for junk.

Mr. Fischer, of the building and repair committee, reported excellent progress in the work of installing the flush closets at the fourth ward school building. The borough is at work on the sewer, making the proper connection with the building.

The following bills were approved for payment: George F. Reiff-nyder $87.49, Danville Stove & Mfg. Co. $131.49, George Beyers $10.12, Mrs. W. H. Jones $25.00, Mrs. Alice Miller $21.00, D. K. Pensyl $8.75, Freight & drayage $7.25

Court Decision in Market Case.

On Tuesday morning Judge Savage handed down an opinion in two cases resulting from a bitter fight over the rules and regulations governing curbstone market at Mt. Carmel which is of great importance and will no doubt be noted by every borough in the commonwealth and filed for future reference.

For a period of five years a bitter fight has been waged in the Mt. Carmel market, the farmers attending doing in all their power to run things to suit themselves in defiance to the market ordinance and it is reported on several occasions when the market clerk tried to assert his authority horses were driven so close to him that he had to flee for safety.

As a result of this continued trouble, Jacob Miller, a farmer from the Schuylkill, and J. M. Vought, a farmer from Montour county, were arrested charged with violating the borough ordinance. When the cases were heard before a justice of the peace both the farmers were sentenced to pay a heavy fine and costs of prosecution.

The cases were then appealed by the farmers to the court for a decision concerning the matter. The testimony produced showed that farmers refused to abide by the market regulations not to peddle their produce during the hours of market and the farmers contended that under the act of assembly of 1903, it was class legislation and the collecting of a market fee was a tax which was contrary to the act. The borough contended that the market ordinance was a police regulation. After examining briefs and hearing the arguments on both sides Judge Savage has handed down his decision which decides both cases in favor of the borough and in each case judgment directed against the farmers for the fine and cost imposed by the justice of the peace.

A humorous incident in connection with the case is that after the farmers were arrested so much trouble followed that in order to keep the market from being broken up by the Mt. Carmel council repealed the market ordinance. Now that the borough has won it will likely be adopted again.

A large number of Northumberland county farmers were interested in this decision and it is due to their subscribing funds that the case was taken to the courts. One of them when interviewed about the matter on Wednesday stated that the farmers would, no doubt take it to a higher court and fight it to the bitter end, as they claim it is a rank case of imposition, and they never ought to have been taxed.

MANY GRAVES ARE OBLITERATED

The committee on public improvements, if possible, today will put additional men to work in the old cemetery laying down the tombstones and otherwise getting the graves in shape for the filling up and grading of the tract, which is the next thing in order. The council is much encouraged by the activity shown by the soldiers' monument committee and it sees the necessity of pushing the work along as rapidly as possible in order to keep pace and have the park prepared for the monument when the committee is ready to erect it.

Of the four hundred and odd graves that are marked some seventy have already been obliterated with the consent of relatives and friends. Not only are the tombstones laid flat on the graves, but in every instance care is taken to see that they are at such a depth that they will not likely be disturbed when the tract is graded. Thus unless the grave is in a very low spot the tombstones are laid some two feet below the surface.

Yesterday another batch of eighty-one names was handed to Ambrose Miller, who has the work of laying down the tombstones in hand. These are all of dead who have been buried a long time, relatives and friends of which have signed releases. Yesterday Mr. Miller stated that during the morning he had laid down two tombstones, one of which bore the date "1806" and the other "1807."

The tombstones of the Hendrickson family are being removed to the well-kept little cemetery belonging to Hendrickson's church in Valley township. In the number are Abram Hendrickson, who died in 1837, and Mary C. Hendrickson, his wife, who departed this life in 1852. These are the progenitors of the rather numerous Hendrickson family living in this section.

Two other graves that of William D. Hendrickson and Peter Hendrickson, both of whom departed this life in the first half of the last century, also occupy the Hendrickson plot, which is situated beside the large tree growing west of the center of the cemetery.

A Dangerous Men.

There is reason to believe that so long as human nature is what it is this is not going to be an ideal world. Here in the United States during the last few years there has been an era of extraordinary prosperity. Capital and labor have both prospered. There has been as little unavoidable poverty as any other country or any other period of time, has witnessed. If all men and women have not had enough and to spare it has not been the fault of business and industrial conditions.

In connection with this unusual prosperity there has been a tremendous stirring of the national conscience. Beginning with the thorough investigation of the business methods of the big insurance companies of New York and extending over other fields of vast business enterprise a halt has been called upon corporate lawlessness and plutocratic intolerance, changed methods introduced and a fair start made in the direction of promoting the universal reign of law. The results have been profoundly irritating to some men who had formed the notion that the government was in subjection to them, but it has tended to confound the demagogues who persistently maintain that the law is simply another weapon of the rich.

It must be the conclusion of all fair-minded men and women who carefully observe the situation that the American people, native and foreign-born, are highly favored by fortune, which is but another name for Providence. The law is being enforced as never before. The rights of the workman are conserved. Wages are high and working hours comparatively short. The workman who is sober, industrious and economical, has enough to maintain his family in comfort and perhaps a little surplus at the end of the year. There ought to be little reason for discontent among those who are blessed with health and energy; who are able and willing to work.

And yet one occasionally encounters some blatant loafer who never did an honest day's work in his life, unless it was under compulsion, but who is filled with a sullen sense of sorrow over the injustice meted out to the American workman. This agitator, who would rather starve than earn his living by honest toil, but who is not above accepting the fruits of other men's labor, predicts the coming of a bloody catastrophe in our happy country. He talks freely about impending bloodshed because he has no sense of responsibility, and also because he has no intention of losing any of his own precious life fluid. Like Artemus Ward, he will be perfectly willing to shed the last drop of blood in the veins of his wife's relatives, but he intends to take mighty good care of his own.

Sensible men, whether employers, mechanics, laborers, professional men, should give no encouragement to the vile demagogue who distorts fact, appeals to prejudice, undertakes to stir up passion and seeks to bring neighbors who ought to be good friends all their days into deadly conflict. The country and its people have no more dangerous foes.

THE FARMERS' INSTITUTES

Fully 400 farmers' institutes will be held in Pennsylvania, under the direction of the State department of agriculture, during the period beginning November 13 next and ending March 4. Three lecturers will be furnished by the department to each county for institute work during the coming season, which will open two weeks earlier than usual. The apportionment is made on the basis of two days of institute to every county having not more than 1000 farms; three days to each county having more than 1000 and not over 1500, afterward, one day for each 1500 farms or fraction thereof, additional. This insures department aid to each county in proportion to its agricultural interests.

The State has been divided into five sections by Deputy Secretary Martin, under whose direction the institutes will be held. A separate set of lecturers will be assigned to each section, and in a given county the same department workers will continue until all the institutes in that county have been held.

Secretary of Agriculture Critchfield, Deputy Secretary Martin, Dairy and Food Commissioner Foust, State Zoologist Surface and State Veterinarian Pearson will assist in the institute work in so far as time and circumstances will permit.

The amount of money to be distributed to the various managers for local expenses will be according to the number of days of institute held. In order to make the amount ample for the coming season, Deputy Secretary Martin has fixed the sum of $12.50 per day of institute. This provides $25 for each two days of institute, to be used for local expenses.

The following are the times and places for holding the institutes in Montour, Northumberland and Columbia counties:

Montour—Mausdale, February 3; Washingtonville, 4, 5.

Northumberland—Dalmatia, January 27, 28; Pottsgrove, 29, 30; Paradise, 31, February 1.

Columbia—Catawissa, January 27, 28; Millville, 29, 30; Millville, 31.

The department has also arranged to conduct movable schools of agriculture during the institute season. These schools will be separate from the institutes and will be held in each congressional district. If they prove a success, a school will be conducted in every county of the State next year.

"We never repent of eating too little," was one of the ten rules of life of Thomas Jefferson, president of the United States, and the rule applies to every one, without exception during this hot weather, because it is hard for food, even in small quantities to be digested when the blood is at high temperature. At this season we should eat sparingly and properly. We should also help the stomach as much as possible by the use of Little Koidol for Indigestion and Dyspepsia, which will rest the stomach by digesting the food itself. Sold by Paules & Co.

AN ARREST AND A MOVING

Charles Switzer was arraigned before Justice of the Peace Oglesby Tuesday night on a charge brought by his wife, Nora Switzer. In lodging information the woman told a terrible story of abuse and threats and at the hearing was accompanied by numerous witnesses. The defendant, however, escaped by payment of costs, a trifle over five dollars.

Northumberland street was the scene of a big excitement Tuesday forenoon and while the two policemen were dragging the defendant off to the lockup handcuffed, neighbors and others were assisting Mrs. Switzer to remove her household goods to Bloomsburg.

Mrs. Switzer claimed to be very much afraid of her husband and her object was to get out of town before he succeeded in extricating himself from the toils of the law. At the justice's office when swearing out the warrant Mrs. Switzer declared that, owing to her husband's threats and abuse the night before with her children she had spent the greater part of the night on the bridge over Mahoning creek. She declared that she was afraid of her life and begged the justice to protect her until she could get her children and household goods to Bloomsburg.

The arrest was made under the disorderly conduct act of 1901, which imposes a penalty of ten dollars for such conduct and in default of payment carries with it imprisonment not exceeding 30 days.

At the hearing the defendant pleaded guilty, after which the justice asked the wife whether she would withdraw the charge if the defendant would pay the costs. She finally consented, only stipulating that he should for all time remain away from her. He promised to comply and very readily procured the money needed to pay the costs.
