OLD FASHION REVIVED.

The Samplers of Our Grandmothers'
Time In Vogue.

It was a great pity when the sam-plers of our grandmothers' time went out of fashion, for they helped many a little girl to learn how to properly handle a needle. For this reason it is good news to hear that there is work is to return. Give any little girl a bit of canvas and some bright mephyrs and let her fashion the thing in her own way. The work will sure-ty be interesting. It will keep the busy little hands out of mischief, and the result will often be surprisingly

If the diminutive lassie is allowed to choose and execute her own conception of a design the work will be doubly beneficial, for it frequently develops some latent talent.

The secret of making a task attractive lies in not letting the child work off its first enthusiasm. Any child or any grown person, for that matter, will attack a thing in the beginning with all the joy that is felt when any new task is undertaken. Unfortunately the first time the work is taken up it is continued so long that unaccustomed hands become tired and the Women in the Front Rank in This Character.

"A good lady who goes to the art class," says Samuel McChord Crothers in the Atlantic Monthly, "is able to talk of Botticelli. But she has no right to look down upon her husband as an inferior creature because he suppose that Botticelli is one of a certain kind of pickles. He may have some things which she has not, and they may be fully as important."

True enough, they may be fully as important, but it would be hard to get our lady who goes to the art class to realize this fact. This is because of no conscious perversity on her part but rather because her judgments ar irretrievably based on a certain little round of standards of her own mak

When she meets a person for the first time she performs much the same operation that a merchant does when he checks off a bill of goods She looks him over and decides whether he tallies up with the items on the bill of her perfectly satisfactory and sufficiently cultured person, and if he does all well and good. If not, if he pronounces bas-relief with an "s" or thinks that Puccini is the name of a new cheese-scratch goes the pencil, and the newcomer is marked "hopeless." Hopeless he may be as far as grand opera and mural decorations are concerned. These seem important to the good lady of the art class, but they are not the only important things in the world, and this is just where her judgment is a bit warped. By dint of constant attendance upon the constant effort grows irksome. Make ent class and much cramming up on Italian opera and French drama she havior, and in this way the novelty is preserved and the work does not cease to be interesting.

> The Frenchman Looked Innocent. Some time since, in a Tremont street store in Boston, a nervous little Frenchman brushed against a pretty trifle of vase ware valued at about $14 and succeeded in getting several score more pieces out of it than had gone into its making. The floorwalker led the abashed Parisian aside and politely explained that the broken vase must be paid for. Monsieur fetched a handful of small silver and copper, mostly foreign, from his pocket when he was told the value of the trifle.

MADE A BIG HIT.

Edward Hanlan, once champion oars-man of the world, related a good story of how he delivered a speech after winning his second race in England His first victory had found him unpre-pared. He was ready for his second with a speech composed for him by a newspaper friend neatly copied out paper and stored away for use in his coat pocket.

When the crowd outside the clubhouse insisted upon seeing and hear-ing the winner he was helped out upon a window ledge by his friends and held there by the coattails and the held there by the coatfalls and the legs. The crowd cheered him wildly. He was too confused to speak. They cheered him again. He threw out his hand in a gesture of helplessness and moved his lips in some inaudible mumble of apology for his inability to deliver a speech. It is related in Stewart Edward

It was about 11 o'clock when the Stevenson and the Beggar. While walking in London one after-noon Robert Louis Stevenson and Ed-mund Gosse met a stalwart beggar whom Gosse refused to aid. Stevenson, however, wavered and finally handed him a sixpence. The Children's Friend. Mr. C., a distinguished lawyer of Boston, was on his way to Denver to transact some important business. During the afternoon he noticed in the opposite section of the Pullman a sweet faced, tired appearing woman traveling with four small children. Being fond of children and feeling sorry for the mother, he soon made friends with the little ones. Early the next morning he heard their eager questions and the patient "Yes, dear," of the mother as she tried to dress them, and, looking out, he saw a small white foot protruding beyond the op posite curtain. Reaching across the aisle, he took hold of the large toe and began to recite, "This little pig went to market; this little pig stayed at home." The foot was suddenly withdrawn, and a cold, quiet voice said, "That is quite sufficient, thank

MRS. WILLIAM H. TAFT.

Charming Personality of the Wife of the President Elect.

What manner of woman is Mrs. Taft, whose name is so soon to be added to those of the women whose influence has made the social fame of past administrations? More pertinently still, how will it measure with the record of the Roosevelt regime? The first question is easy to answer, for few women have gone into the White House so well equipped to meet the exactions of the position of "first lady" of the land.

Mrs. Taft has brains and uses them without being in any sense aggressive or pedantic. She talks well and looks or pedautic. She talks well and looks well when she is talking. Her smile has the charm of intelligence, that quick flash of recognition distinct from the frozen, automatic smile peculiar to many women in official life, on whom social duties make many demands, even to that of continuously "looking pleasant." She has a generous mouth and handsome teeth, a straight nose, well proportioned to her other fea-tures, and a broad forehead, above soft pompadour.

In her knowledge of languages Mrs.

Taft will have the advantage over many of her predecessors. The future mistress of the White House is a good body whose organs are weary with over work. Start with the stomach and allied organs of digestion and nutrition. Put them in working order and see how quickly your liver will become active. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery as made many marvelous cures of "liver trouble" by its wonderful control of the organs of music, but a musician as well. Though she does not regard herself as sufficiently in practice to perform for a critical audience these days, she has by no means lost her skill and frequently plays for her husband and children during their evenings at home. Other avenues through which her artistic taste finds an outlet are her love of pictures and her appreciation of woodcarving. The art collection of her brother-in-law, Charles Taft, has no more appreciative friend than his sister-in-law. She is enthusiastic about every treasure he adds to it and enjoys few things more than pointing. FUTURE MISTRESS OF THE WHITE HOUSE.

grew up in a home where books came down from the shelves and made the worlds they contain part of the do-mestic environment. As Helen Herron her favorite authors were Thackeray and Dickens. Mrs. Taft is loyal to her old literary friends and still dips into their society. George Eliot is one of the favorites of her later years. Newspapers come in for a daily share of her attention. To any subject in which Mr. Taft is interested or of which he is making a study she also gives great part of her time. As few me of the period have had occasion look up information on more varied subjects as the president elect, his wife's knowledge is necessarily extensive. That Mrs. Taft is the right wo man for the position of mistress of the White House and that she will be a gracious and charming chatelaine there is no manner of doubt.

A very ingenious contrivance for foretelling the weather is the old fash-ioned "weather house," largely made in Switzerland. It is arranged in such a way that two figures act in response to the twisting of a piece of catgut. The material, supported by a wire, controls the movements of a little plat form on either end of which is placed a model. Excessive moisture in the air causes the catgut to twist and turn the nean 'hard.' Now, can you tell me hat 'bituminous' means?"

CULD WAVE AN AGREEABLE CHANGE

The cold wave predicted by the weather bureau arrived on schedule. The day broke yesterday with a fresh and bracing atmosphere. Mercury fell gradually during the day and before dark last evening had reached the freezing point. A cold wave is predicted for today.

The change was most agreeable after the several days of wet, foggy weather with its accompaniment of dirty streets and unpleasant conditions generally.

Mill street paving, although conpresents a problem in winter. During spring, summer and autumn it can be swelt and thus at most times it presents a sightly appearance. During winter, however, sweeping is impossi-ble and the filth of long periods ac-cumulates with the snow.

When a thaw occurs as during this which her brown hair is arranged in a week the accumulation of filth becomes a dreadful factor to reckon with and detracts much from the pleasure of living on Mill street. The freeze which has occurred has brought about temporary relief, at least. It would be much more satisfactory if some method could be devised whereby the paving could be kept a little more presentable in winter.

A Lazy Liver

May be only a tired liver, or a starved liver. It would be a stupid as well as savage thing to beat a weary or starved man because he lagged in his work. So man tecause he lagged in his work.
