BIG MILL AGAIN IN OPERATION

The Montour rolling mills department of the Reading Iron company resumed operations Monday after a week's idleness.

The foundations for the big electric crane which will be installed in the near future were laid during the week.

The crane will be operated in the old puddle mill. The machinery is now in course of construction at the company's shops at Reading.

The crane will take the muck iron from the bank after it leaves the rolls and carry it to the shears, handling the entire heat, about 1200 pound, at one time and weighing it automatically.

As per company orders the men reported at the armory at 7 o'clock leaving for the Pennsylvania station at 7:45.

It is interesting to note that Company F goes to camp with its ranks full. The number will compare very favorably with that of any other company present.

As previously noted in these columns, at this camp of instruction, when the organized militia combine for the time with the United States army, many luxuries dear to the men at camp were by order of the United States authorities eliminated.

The company arrived at Gettysburg about 4 o'clock. It is expected that camp will be broken on the morning of July 18.

PAYING UP SLOWLY

MORE PAVING TALK ABROAD

A letter from Arthur S. Clay, engineer of the State highway department, has again brought to the fore the matter of paving with macadam the stretch of road on East Market street between Foust street and the borough line, to which latter point the hospital macadam extends.

From Engineer Clay's letter, which has just been received by Borough Secretary Patton, it appears that while the highway department finds itself unable to pave all the way from Cook's court to the borough line, it is willing to undertake the section of macadam at the upper end-between Foust street and the borough line.

It is the probability that council will act favorably on this proposition at its next meeting on Friday, July 15.

As it is the policy of the State highway department to add to roads already improved, instead of building in separate places, the reconstruction of the stretch between Foust street and the borough line, would likely have the effect of inducing the department to view favorably the paving with brick of the section between Cook's court and Foust street.

DEATH OF AN AGED RESIDENT

John Reppert, one of Danville's oldest and best known citizens, died Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock, aged 80 years.

Mr. Reppert was born in Exter township, Berks county, on October 15th, 1830. His parents dying, he came to Danville when an infant, making the trip by stage before the days of railroads.

For the past five years he has been janitor at the court house, and was in active employment there until two weeks ago, when he was compelled to take his bed.

The deceased is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Emery Heimbach, East Danville; four sons, Howard, of Danville; John, of New Castle; Charles, of Patterson, New Jersey, and Dallas, of East Pittsburg.

RIVER COAL

While the sights of the coal dredges steaming down the river to the dredging grounds or into shore loaded after the day's work, is a familiar sight to many, it is likely that very few people have any idea of the quantity of coal brought in.

While the dredges are all doing fairly well, the business is not as good as it might be. Indeed because of the constant fall on the river and the absence of any freshet, to bring down a fresh supply, the amount of coal dredged daily is now but half that secured in the early part of the summer.

When it is explained, however, that each boat averages fifteen tons and that there are seven boats or a total of 105 tons being brought to shore every day, it will be seen that the business is still a profitable one.

The owner of one of the dredges explained that now a great amount of unnecessary work is done in sifting over the "tailings" as the worked over coal is called, in order to get coal suitable in size for fuel.
