A THREE YEARS' SOJOURN IN CUBA

BLOOM STREET

Harry Hollingshead, of this city, after a three-years' sojourn in Cuba made in the interest of a business venture has come back to resume life in the United States. His experience while interesting are not of a sort to inspire confidence in the future of the island-at least not under the present

Mr. Hollingshead was located near Pinar del Rio, in the province of that name at the west end of the island. He went there during February, 1908, at which time a large number of Americans poured into Cuba. It was thought there were fine opportunities in Cuba for raising poultry and vege-

The great storms to which the island is subject are bad enough, but business in time would no doubt recover, if conditions in other respects were all right. As it is, there are many drawbacks. In the first place the government is weak, and it is probably only a question of time when there only a question of time was are in will be a change. Practices are in states.

What is needed to make agriculture a success is irrigation. The rainy season begins about the middle of October and lasts until about the mid-dle of June following. During this time vegetables will grow luxuriantly, but they will not fruit. During the dry season crops are uncertain. Tobacco and sugar cane are staples. The former can no longer be grown caused by Porto Rico and the Philip-

Under all the circumstances Mr. Hollingshead thought it best not to rebuild on his land, but he sold out his business and returned to the Unit-

Mr. Hollingshead embarked in the poultry raising business. He had carried his enterprise to a point that insured at least moderate success, when the terrible harricane last October nearly swept him off the face of the earth.

Probably only those that have lived through a West India hurricane have any adequate conception of what one is like. For ninety-six hours—from Thursday [night antil about Monday noon following— the cyclonic winds beat upon the island. It was the hardest storm since 1840. Mr. Hollingshead's buildings were destroyed and all that part of the island was devastated. The hurricane at intervals was accompanied with rain, which for hours poured upon the earth like a deluge.

NEW FLOOR

The armory is receiving a much eeded improvement in the form of a new floor.

The old floor was not only worn out but it was in a warped, uneven condi tion as the result of the flood of 1904. It answered well enough for drilling will be held next November, with genwith profit owing to the competition purposes, but it was hardly fit for eral and municipal elections alternatdancing, a use to which the floor is very frequently put.

The new floor is of hard wood, maple, and in laving it the very best of workmanship is employed. In making the improvement the platform belonging to the big windows in the Americans the highways are mere front of the building has been removed and the space formerly occupied by
