REBUILDING OF THE CAMBRIA LI-BRARY.

The Generous Offer of Andrew Carnegie Accepted-A Building Committee Ap-me months ago it was stated that Mr. Andrew Carnegie had offered to furnish money to rebuild the Cambria Library. For sometime nothing was done by the Library Association owing to the pres sure of business, both public and private upon the members, but lately the President, Mr. Cyrus Elder, has had correspondence with Mr. Carnegie, in which the latter very generously reiterates his former statements offering to pay for the rebuilding of the Library. In regard to Mr. Carnegie's proposal the following is self-explaining:

ACTION OF THE BOARD OF MANAGERS.

At a meeting of the Board of Managers of the Cambria Library Association, held on the 10th day of December, 1889, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted :

tion accepts the offer of Andrew Carnegie to restore its Library Bulldings, as stated in his letter of the 28th ult., to the President of the Association, and thanks him for his most lib eral and grateful manifestation of his sympathy with and interest in the people of Johnst with and interest in the people of Johnstown. Resolved, That a Building Committee consisting of the President, Vice-President, Joseph Morgan, Jr., James McMillen, and Powell Stackhouse is hereby appointed and authorized to procure modified plans of a Library Building as stated in the correspondence with Mr. Carnegle, to obtain tenders for its erection, and to have supervision of the work.

In Mr. Elder's correspondence he stated it had been contemplated by the Account it had been contemplated by the Association to build an annex to the Library. Mr. Carnegie expresses his willingness to be responsible for the rebuilding on whatever plan the managers may think The building will likely be considerably larger than the old one.

SICKNESS FROM DISEASED MEAT.

A Number of Families at Moxham Taken Seriously Ill From Having Eaten Pick led Pork.

On Monday evening a number of fami fies at Moxbam bought some barrel pork from one of the butchers in that places and unsuspectingly used it for their meals that evening. That night a number of cases of severe sickness, intense nausca and great weakness in most instances, was reported. The cause of the sickness was at once attributed to the pork, as soon as it was found that all the families, in which the sickness had occurred, had used of the pork. The exact nature of the trouble has not been learned, but there was evidently something wrong with the meat. An investigation with a view of tracing the cause of the trouble to its source, should result. The lax system of management that allows articles of food to be prepared in large establishments without close inspection to prevent tainted and diseased meats and other articles of food to be sent to unsuspecting consumers, needs serious atten

Davidsville on the Move.

The cit zens of Davidsville, Somerset county, held a public meeting on Saturday evening last, and made arrangements to have the village lighted with street lamps. Mr. Joseph Walcher, fermerly of this city, was made president of the meeting; Henry Lenhart, Secretary; Jacob Hershberger, Treasurer; and Isaac Kauffman, Levi Kauffman, and Samuel Leib, a committee to attend to the matter. The lights will be placed in position this week. Davidsville is moving up to the front.

The Dibert Building.

Mr. Campbell, of Pittsburgh, an expert in moving, raising and repairing buildings, was in town yesterday examining the Dibert building. He is confident that the building can be brought out all right without tearing it down. The necessary appliances will be brought from Pittsburgh at once, and with the assistence of Hoover, Hughes & Co., the building will be straightened.

Back From Europe.

Mr. Frank Wiliams, Superintendent of the Michigan Steel Works, Detroit, Michigan, is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Williams, of Main street. Mr. Williams has just returned from a tour of inspection of European steel works and stopped off on his way to Detroit to spend the holidays at his old home.

THE STORY OF A SONG.

SIMPLE ORIGIN OF SOME OF THE POPULAR DITTIES.

Hat?" and How It Came to Be Written Other Well Known Songs-One Written with Finger Nails on a Window Sill.

The man who perpetrated that musi-cal atrocity, "Where Did You Get That Hat?" has been discovered. His name is Joe Sullivan. He is an actor. This is the only thing be ever wrote.

Frank Harding, the New York music pulisher, tells the story of how and where the author obtained his inspiration.

Tom O'Driscoll, the harum scarum grandson of old Murtagh O'Driscoll, of Cobbynaul, in the county of Roscom-mon, Ireland, was famous for his personal peculiarities. One of these was an aversion to wearing a "caubeen." It was Tom's delight to wander through the country bareheaded and barefooted. The fact that he wore no shoes excited no comment, but his refusal to wear a hat was a distress to his family. The fact is that Tom did not really need a hat, for he had been provided by nature with a shock of luxuriant red hair. He was known for miles around as the red headed man, and his adornment brought down upon Tom the anger of his grand-father, Murtagh.

Just before his death old Murtagh conceived an idea which he was almost cer-tain would bring his erring grandson to his "sivin shmall sinses," and a few days afterward he died.

Tom refused to wear a hat, even at the funeral. On the return of the family from the churchyard, the will was open-ed and read by Father O'Hoolahan, and, to the surprise of all, it was found that Tom inherited everything, including the big stocking of "goold," that could be found "bechune the tick and the boul-ster in the ould four posther." on condister in the ould four posther," on condition that for the remainder of his natural life he should wear his grandfather's hat on all occasions in the open air. This was regarded as a very hard condition by Tom, but, possessing his share of good common sense, he accepted the inevitable and presented himself on the following Sunday at church wearing old Murtagh's hat. His appearance was ludicrous in the extreme. Having neglected to get his hair cut, the hat was perched on the top of his remarkable crop of bushy and flery hair, and the the roars of laughter with which he was saluted made Tom almost wish he head. saluted made Tom almost wish he had not accepted the onerous condition of his grandfather's will. From all sides came jibes and cries of derision, the principal salutation being, "Mother o' Moses! Where did you get that hat?"

Where did you get that hat?"
During a recent trip in Ireland Mr.
Sullivan heard the story as related above,
and, after a good deal of hard thinking, he produced the song, the title of which has since become a household word throughout the country. An excellent yet simple piano arrangement was made for it by William Lorraine, a mere lad of 16, which materially aided its impetus to popularity. By the way, Lorraine is recognized among musicians generally as one of the most efficient arrangers of comic and sentimental music in this comic and sentimental music in this country. This song is an illustration of what a single phrase will do in popularwhat a single phrase will do in popularizing a ditty. There is, of course, nothing of a decided literary merit to commend it. It does not even possess the distinction of good rhyme. But it has an original jingle of melody and an easy arrangement that on the immediate it is not being the second of the control of the cont ment that go far in making it a "go" with the public. A number of songs have suddenly sprung into celebrity which had grown dusty in the obscurity which had grown dusty in the obscurity of the publishers' shelves.

Among these might be mentioned Mullaly's pretty song, "Mottoes on the Wall," Klenk's "Only a Picture," Mitchell's "Where Can the Wanderre Be" and C. A. White's tender romanza, "Marguerite." White seems to be the most profile of American converses. most prolific of American composers in the sentimental vein. With the excep-tion, perhaps, of Will S. Hays, he is also the oldest native song writer. Mr. White is a resident of Boston, and they say he has amassed nearly half a million of dollars through the sale of his songs. His latest and most successful inspira-tion was the now celebrated "Mar-guerite," which is being sung by all the romantic maidens in the country.

It is a fact not generally known that "Marguerite" was written while the author was suffering from cerebral troubles superinduced by overwork. The original text and melody he conceived while configuration is hope on this action. while confined to his home and lying at death's door. Forbidden by his family physician the use of paper and pencil, the veteran composer scratched with his finger nails upon the paint of the win-dow sill the rough outlines of the mel-ody of his famous song, and on his recovery he had it transcribed and arranged. For a long time "Marguerite" lay upon the shelves and failed to strike a popular chord, but within the past six months the song has commended itself so universally that it is difficult to supply the demand. It seems that the name "Marguerite" It seems that the name "Marguerite" is a prolific theme with poets and musical composers. There are no fewer than six different "Marguerite" songs upon the market to-day. In the more classic vein, Helmud's German love ditty, "Margaritha," is eminently a favorite, while "Farewell, Marguerite," by Boardman, is an exceedingly popular song of today, and White's "My Marguerite of Long Ago" bids fair to rival his better known production of a like character.

Comic sones, as a rule, are short lived.

Comic songs, as a rule, are short lived. This is because they depend mainly for This is because they depend mainly for their popularity upon single phrases which catch the eye of the public and are repeated in daily conversation until they become antiquities. With the de-cay of the phrases which form the keycay of the phrases which form the keynote to success the song dies. Sometimes the most mediocre comic songs attain a large circulation merely on the strength of a popular idiom, although they may be full of grammatical and harmonic crudities. Notwithstanding this some of the compositions attain to enormous sales.—Sidney Rosenfeld in A Death That Was Not Unexpected by Those Who Had Observed.

They had lifted the body out of the anal, and a dozen of us stood around it when the coroner came. He glanced at the face, asked who first saw the body, and then said:

"I have expected this for a year or more. Poor fellow! No inquest will be "'A refrigerator? Certainly, ma'am: step this way and be seated. Now, then, our Peerless refrigerator is built entirely on scientific principles. This, as you will observe, is the ice chest. The cold current, passes from the ice, down these current passes from the ice down these air pipes to the right, circulates along the racks, passes up through those pipes to the left, and escapes out of that ventilator in the end. There is always a con stant current of air, not only preserving the articles placed on the racks, but carrying the odor away. We guarantee that you may place onions and butter side by side for one week, and that one will not taste of the other. Inside this zinc lining is a layer of charcoal two inches thick. Our refrigerator is cooler with five pounds of ice than any other with twenty. The circulation is on scientific principles, as you will observe. No bellows are needed to create the current. There are no cogwheels to get out of order—no springs to give way. Actual experiments have demonstrated that there is an actual saving of 50 per cent. of ice during the season. The racks are galvanized, as you will observe, and the trimmings are of the latest and best patterns. We sold these right along last year at $18, but, having secured all the hardwood lumber in the country, and having a monopoly on the supply of ice in the United States, we have reduce the price to $15.'

"Day after day for three months, and sometimes five or six times a day, he re-peated this statement," said the coroner, "and I knew that it was only a question of time when the end would come. The lat of October they changed him into the coal stove department, and then, day after day, he sang this song:

As soon as combustion takes place the hot air is combustion takes place the hot air drawn down through these flues, passe twice around the base, ascends to radiate around the top, passes over the live fire to be reheated, and finally escapes by the flue when it has no further value as a heating power. Economical? That's our strong point, ma'am. We claim that this stove will heat four times the surface with one ton of coal that any other stove will with three. It feeds and reg-ulates itself. Any child can run it. No gas can escape when the stove is closed.
All its parts are handy to be got at, and by no possibility can any accident occur.

"Poor fellow!" sighed the coroner, as he bent over him in pity. "These were the songs he was compelled to sing to earn his daily bread, and we who were near him knew that the end must finally come. It has come. He did not want to live any longer, and none of us can blame him. I will turn the body over to the undertaker. The jury could only find that he died of a broken heart."—

The Value of a Beard in Old England. Among the Anglo-Saxons every por-tion of the human body had a recognized monetary value, and any one injuring the person of another had to pay his vic-tim the legal price for the damage done. The parts of the face were more highly valued than those of any other portion of the body, showing how much impor-tance was attached by our Saxon ances tors to their personal appearance. If a man in those days knocked out one of the front teeth of his neighbor, he had to pay him six shillings as a compensa-tion, but if he destroyed his beard he had to hand over no less than twenty shillings. He might, however, break his countryman's thigh bone for twelve and his ribs for three shillings apiece. He was allowed, of course, to smash up the members of an outlaw or of an enemy of to pay him six shillings as a compensahis country gratis.—Exchange.

A California Rabbit Drive.

The rabbit scourge, which has reduced such large tracts of land in Australia to barrenness, is now threatening parts of California with similar effects. In Fresno county these vermin have become so numerous and destructive to the farmers that the wholesale extermination of them is imperative. It is estimated that them is imperative. It is estimated that five rabbits consume as much as one sheep. They are particularly fond of the grape vines, fruit trees, corn and other grain. A drive has been made by stretching fine wire netting about three feet high and seven miles in length, Vfeet high and seven miles in length, V-shaped, terminating at the smaller end in a circular corral. One of the drives resulted in the death of 12,900 rabbits.—New York Telegram.

HENRY W. GRADY DEAD

The Great Editor and Orator Jo Great Majority.

ATEANTA, GA., December 23 .- Henry W. Grady, editor-in-chief of the Atlanta Constitution, died of pneumonia at 3:40 this morning.

Henry W. Grady, editor of the Atlanta Constitution, whose condition since his return from the recent Boston banquet, at which he was a principal speaker, has been precarious, grew worse yesterday, and late last night his physicians reported his condition as serious. Dr. F. P. Orme, in attendance, who had been in consultation with Dr. Everett, of Denver, Colora-do, said that their distinguished patient was as sick as a man could be and live, and that the next few hours would decide the case. At 10:30 P. M., his respiration was forty, temperature one hundred and five, pulse one hundred and twenty to one hundred and thirty.

Henry Wooden Grady was born in this State in 1851. With perhaps a single exception, he was the best known editor in all the Southern States. He stood in the front rank of American journalists, and the prospect of none was brighter.

His father was a Colonel in the Confederate army, and lost his life in battle when his son was only fourteen years old. Young Grady was educated at the University of Georgia, in his native city, where he graduated at the head of his class, and his studies were afterwards continued at the University of Virginia. From the first Mr. Grady was strongly attached to journalism, and leaving co lege, a lad of nineteen, he started a daily paper on his own account at Rome, Ga., which failed of support. He moved to Atlanta and issued the Atlanta Herald, and afterwards the Altanta Courier, both of which ventures proved unsuccessful. His ready pen, however, found plenty of employment. He wrote for the Atlanta Constitution, the Louisville Courier Journal, and other papers; and James Gordon Bennett, the elder, appointed him Georgia correspondent of the New York Herald, a post which he held for six years. A fortunate speculation, it is said, in railroad stock yielded him $20,000, which he very wisely invested in a quarter interest in the Atlanta Constitu This interest, now enormously enhanced, he still owned when he died.

In the December following the Charleston earthquake catastrophe, Mr. Grady delivered an address in New York, at the annual dinner of the New England Socie tv, on the "New South." That speech was, and still is, applauded all over the country, South as well as North, and helped to make its author famous in remote localities where his name had not hitherto been known.

Mr. Grady's last public appearance was at the recent dinner of the Boston Merchant's Club, where he and ex-President Cleveland were the principal speakers. His theme then was the status of the ne gro in the South, and newspapers throughout the country are still quoting from its ringing sentences and commenting upon his stirring utterances on that

Mr. Grady graduated at the Georgia State University, and also took a course at the University of Virginia. In temper and temperament he is still a boy. He has all a boy's ardor and enthusiasm. His love of home, State and country is a passion that has made itself felt in his news paper, in his speeches and in his daily
