

The Excursion from Here to Ohio Falls on June 19th Under the Auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association.

For some time there has been a great amount of interest taken in the preparations for the grand excursion to Ohio Falls over the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association.

The success with which the excursions—this being the fifth annual one—in the past have met is an assurance that the contemplated trip will be a most enjoyable one. The date, too, meets with favor, for at no other time do the beauties of nature appear to better advantage than in the month of roses. The date of the excursion is Thursday, June 19th.

Ohio Falls is situated on the main line of the Pittsburgh division of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad. It is in eastern Fayette county in the midst of a region of unequalled beauty. Picturesque scenery abounds on every hand, and it affords a most pleasant place for a day's retreat from the busy hum of city life.

As a Committee of Entertainment Messrs. M. E. Bennett, F. D. Joly, P. A. Cobough, W. H. Hildebrand, R. J. Humphreys, Jacob Murdock, R. L. Aankin, and A. G. Utecht, have been chosen, which insures a success of that feature of the expedition.

Games and amusements will be provided for all, while those who wish to try their luck at angling can take their tackle with them.

There are acres of the wild and delightful picnic grounds, while there are many special natural points of interest, among which are the Falls, the Cliff or Lovers' Leap (as a matter of course, no summer resort is complete without it—Lovers' Leap), Prospect Hill, Devil's Den, Dean and Fulton Springs, and Cucumber Falls. Visitors can examine these localities and inspect the changing scenery and wonderful natural formations with pleasure and profit, viewing as they will Nature's grand and unaccountable transformations in all their beauty and glory. The healthfulness of this locality is unexcelled, the atmosphere pure and invigorating, and the nights always delightfully cool. Those dwelling in our cities who, from force of circumstances, are compelled to inhale odors arising from filthy sewers, dirty streets and badly ventilated premises, should make it a point to visit Ohio Falls during the hot season to recuperate their impaired and broken constitutions.

Adequate accommodations for the entertainment of those who do not wish to take baskets with them will be afforded by the Fern Cliff Hotel, which has every facility for the comfort of visitors. It is but a short distance from the station and is erected upon the highest knoll in the vicinity, surrounded by a beautiful lawn flanked by forest, river, and mountain ridge, wide, finely laid-out walks, delectable grounds and shaded retreats.

The fare for the round trip is $1.50. Tickets are now on sale at the headquarters of the Young Men's Christian Association and various other places in the city, where those who want to be sure and not be left behind can secure them in advance.

ORIGINAL PACKAGES.

Silverman's Trial at Kittanning—The Evidence Presented Against the Defendant.
KITANNING, Pa., June 12.—The case of the Commonwealth against Charles Silverman, the Leeburg "original package" man, was called for trial in the Armstrong county Quarter Sessions this morning.

Great care was exercised in selecting a jury, and the case is being fought inch by inch.

Silverman is indicted for violating the general license law of Pennsylvania in selling without license, selling to minors and to persons of known intemperate habits.

Only a portion of the Commonwealth's case is in, but the evidence so far shows that Charles Silverman, a resident of Allegheny county, Pa., bought a car of lager beer to Leeburg, a prohibition town by special act of Assembly; that he engaged a room, stored it, and sold it generally, and that he had a wagon and distributed it.

The evidence also shows that the beer was in eight or sixteen gallon kegs, stamped with Government stamps, and that the kegs were branded "Cincinnati Brewing Company, Hamilton, O." It was also disclosed that the minors got beer off this wagon, carried it away and helped to drink it, when other persons had paid for it. In one or two cases minors had given Silverman money for beer and afterwards he returned their money stating they were not old enough.

When the Court took a recess at noon the Commonwealth was trying to prove the sale to men of intemperate habits.

Considerable interest is taken in the case, and there is some speculation as to the action Judge Rayburn will take, after the suggestion in the opinion of the United States Circuit Court on the habeas corpus.

The case presents new features from the Iowa case, because in Pennsylvania there is a license law which provides for the sale of liquors and this may make a novel legal question.

A three-story brick and stone building of the Bank of Piedmont, Ala., nearly finished, was destroyed by a cyclone Monday. A white man and a negro at work on the building were fatally injured.

TO PASS A DISABILITY PENSION BILL.

The House Recedes From Its Position on the Service Clause.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—The House was compelled to recede from its position on the service clause of the pension bill which has been the bone of contention in the conference for several weeks. The Senate conferees were so positive in their antagonism on this point that the House members were compelled, in order to obtain a bill, to yield. The "pauper" or dependent clause is therefore eliminated. The law as now passed becomes a disability measure and though not entirely acceptable to the soldier element of the House is taken as the best that could be obtained under the circumstances. The bill allows a pension ranging from $6 to $12 a month to all ex-soldiers, their widows, minor children and dependent parents. The clause providing that the beneficiary should make oath to his disability was stricken out at the conference. Under the provisions of the bill it is not necessary for a pension that the disability should have been contracted in the army. Representative Pichler, of North Dakota, said today that an old soldier may have been kicked by a mule or lost a limb through any accident, he is entitled to a pension under this act. It is estimated that the bill will cost the nation about thirty-eight millions per year.

Recently, at the request of the Board of Education, of Warren, Pa., Prof. August Morek examined the eyes of the pupils of the Warren schools to ascertain to what extent they were troubled with defective vision. He has made his report, in which he states that out of 539 scholars, 106 showed some defect of vision of some degree of the eye.

A useful attribute of paper not generally known is for preserving ice in a pitcher of water. Fill the pitcher with ice and water and set it on the center of a piece of paper; then gather the paper up together at the top and place the ends tightly together, placing a strong rubber band around the coil to hold it close, so as to exclude the air. A pitcher of ice water treated in this manner has been known to stand over night with scarcely a perceptible melting of the ice.

STILL AFTER VICE PRESIDENT MORTON.

The Reformed Presbyterian Synod Decides That His Profit From the Sale of Liquor is Indirect.

NEW YORK, June 12.—At yesterday's session of the Reformed Presbyterian synod the Rev. T. H. Acheson, of Hopkinton, Ia., called attention to the editorial comments of the press on the report of the Committee on Temperance in which it was asserted that Vice President Morton derived a portion from the sale of liquor in the property which he owns or controls. The reverend gentleman then suggested that the report be amended, unless it was strictly accurate. Dr. McAllister, of Pittsburgh, said that it was certainly true that the Vice President rented his property in Washington for a purpose which the moral sense of the nation condemned. The Rev. R. J. George, of Beaver Falls, claimed that Mr. Morton derived a direct profit from the sale of wine on his property. On motion of Rev. Dr. Stevenson, of Philadelphia, the report of the committee was amended so as to read "Derives a profit indirectly" from the sale of liquors. This seemed satisfactory, and there were no dissenting voices.

The Bankruptcy Bill.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—Speaker Reed has agreed to give the Judiciary Committee one day next week, either Tuesday or Wednesday, for the consideration of the so-called Torrey bankruptcy bill.

The representatives of the National Bankruptcy Convention are doing effective work in the interest of the bill. They have organizations in every State of the Union, and so have been able to bring influence to bear upon the members of the House.

A canvass of the House shows that they have a majority for the bill, but they feel it necessary to keep up their work. There is an understanding that the measure will be taken up in the Senate as soon as it passes the House, and that friends of the measure have no objection as to the treatment it will receive at that wing of the Capitol.

Indian Outbreak in Montana.

HELENA, Mont., June 12.—Governor Toole received a dispatch signed by two prominent citizens of Miles City requesting that he send one thousand stand of arms and ammunition. In reply arms and ammunition were forwarded in charge of Col. C. O. Curtis. The Cheyennes have left their regular camps, and are gathering in small camps from fifteen to twenty-five, and are firing at settlers' houses and making the most threatening demonstrations.

Ranchmen are bringing their families into the settlement. Cattle are being shot down by the Indians through pure malice, as no parts of the animals are used for beef. Eighteen cattle were shot in one bunch on Otter creek. One troop of cavalry and two of infantry have been sent from Ft. Keogh to the Cheyenne agency.

Convention of Episcopalians.

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa., June 12.—The nineteenth annual convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church, Diocese of Central Pennsylvania, convened in Christ Church, Towanda, yesterday. Rev. Nelson S. Ralison, Assistant Bishop, presided. There are ninety-one churches and six missions, and the convention, with clerical and lay delegates, has about 300 members.

Two Girls Struck by Lightning.

TAMAQUA, Pa., June 12.—Last evening lightning struck the house of Magistrate Thomas R. Williams, at Lansford, instantly killing May Williams, aged 8 years, a grand-daughter of Mr. Williams, and so badly injuring Lizzie Jones, of Mahanoy City, a little girl of about the same age, that her recovery is doubtful. The house was struck on the side, but little damage was done to it.

Encampment of the National Guard.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—Adjutant General Hastings, General Snowden and Colonel Elliott, of the Pennsylvania State Militia, arrived last evening for the purpose of inviting the President, the Secretary of War and the General of the Army to attend the encampment of the National Guard at Mt. Gretna. A request will also be made to have the attendance of several batteries of the regular artillery.

GREENINGS FROM EVERYWHERE.

Recent tremendous rains in Iowa destroyed innumerable insects that were destroying growing crops, and it is now asserted the beneficial effects of the rain will offset the damage done.

A wild Westerner attended church on Sunday week in Winnipeg, Man., for the first time in twenty years, and during the services lit a pipe and enjoyed a smoke. On last Wednesday he was fined $10 for disturbing worship.

The Louisiana Lottery Company only needs four votes in the Lower House to secure the necessary two-thirds vote, to pass a bill favorable to a continuance of the lottery in that State. The Senate is reported by the lottery people as all right.

The greater portion of the cedar telegraph poles used by the Western Union Company came from Michigan. From forty to two hundred men and nearly forty teams are employed in gathering the poles and putting them in proper shape. The poles range from twenty-six to sixty feet in length, and are worth from $1 to $7 each.

Phelps for Congress.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 12.—It is stated upon good authority that William Walter Phelps, Minister to Germany, will resign his position and run for Congress in his old Patterson, N. J., district. There are so many broad-gauged Republicans who will drop out of Congress that the party will find itself badly handicapped. It is understood that the Republican National Leaguers are apprehensive for the Paterson district, but are confident Willie Wallie and his bangs can carry the district.

Four Horses Killed and a Woman Injured.

MOBERLY, Mo., June 12.—Yesterday afternoon, while the funeral of Mr. John Hook was taking place at Hickory Grove Church, near Darksville, this county, a severe storm of rain, accompanied by heavy thunder and lightning, passed over. A large number of saddle horses were tied to a rack which joined a wire fence. Lightning struck the fence and ran along by the horses, twenty being knocked flat and four killed outright. Mrs. Robert Derigue, who was sitting in the church at the time, was severely burned.

2,000 Miners Return to Work.

PEORIA, Ill., June 12.—The miners' strike in this district is at an end, and 2,000 men returned to work today. The operators offered 67 cents, and the offer was accepted.

Success of Obesism in Trinidad.

One circumstance that which I must allude happened during my stay at Trinidad, and with it I will close the subject of Obesism. Just before Christmas, in 1888, a negro child was kidnapped. The authorities instituted an investigation, which led to the discovery of the child's skeleton, and one or two negroes who were supposed to be connected with the deed were arrested. Kidnaping children often takes place at Christmas in spite of the vigilance of the government, and it is done either by Obes men or in accordance with their commands. The child that has been confiscated (and in the particular case to which I refer it was captured in broad daylight, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon) is taken to a secluded place and murdered. Some of the entrails are removed, the heart, spleen, etc., and a magic mixture is made with mystical herbs.

By distilling or drying a powder results, which is given to one of the racing horses, and this is supposed to give the horse the power to win the coming race. I have no doubt that this does influence the result of the race, for the jockeys on the other horses, who are negroes, are so convinced that they will not win, for they cannot hope to beat an enchanted horse, that they will not exert themselves as they otherwise would have done. This great power of the imagination is, in my opinion, the great factor in the success of Obesism, for if a man knows that Obes has been worked upon him his imagination will do all the rest that is necessary.—Professor Sharpe in Philadelphia Ledger.

Danger of Gas and Geyser Bath.

As is well known, the geyser bath is an ordinary bath with a geyser attached to it. The geyser is a kind of urn, generally standing on the edge of the bath, into which the cold water from the main runs over plates heated by a series of gas burners, which are contained in itself, and then runs out at the other side into the bath at a given uniform heat. At a meeting of the Balloon Society of Great Britain, one of the members gave a sad experience with the gas bath. His son had entered a bathroom provided with the geyser apparatus, and half an hour afterward was found in the water dead, suffocated by the deadly gas generated by the bunsen burners.

The society was so impressed by the facts adduced that it passed the following resolution: "That this meeting is of opinion, in view of the many fatal accidents that have arisen by gas and geyser baths, due to a want of a more intimate knowledge of their nature, that the time has now come when the possibility of further fatalities should be avoided." They further submit to the secretary of state a presentment with the view of compelling the makers to stamp into the metal work of the apparatus these "directions for use." Caution—The bath must be filled while the room is being ventilated, and before closing the door. When filled, turn off gas and water. The bath must on no account be entered "until this is done."—New York Commercial Advertiser.

To Raise Church Debts.

"Some of these fine churches of your city that are struggling under loads of indebtedness, incurred in periods of extraordinary fervor and hopefulness," said a Philadelphian visiting New York, "might be relieved more quickly, perhaps, than they otherwise will if their trustees would learn a lesson from one of our boards. It struggled on for a great number of years, paying interest on a big mortgage, but never succeeding in making any appreciable reduction of the principal. Meanwhile the neighborhood, which had once been fashionable, deteriorated steadily, and most of the rich members of the congregation moved away. It began to look as if the interest even could not be met, when a wide awake woman suggested that the parish go into business for itself and make enough money to pay its own debts. A lodging house—cheap, but clean, really clean—was opened, and the innovation was startling alike to church members and lodgers. It was well patronized from the start and proved a paying investment. Enlargement soon became necessary, and the debt on the church began to disappear, slowly it is true, but steadily, and the prospect of its total erasure seems certain."—New York Tribune.

The Kind She Wanted.

Katie lives in the suburbs of Boston, and her small head is not infrequently badly mixed upon things that relate to the difference between the ways of the town where she lives and the ways of Boston. She has always a great scorn, however, for having things different from city fashions, and this shows itself in the most unexpected ways.

Not long ago a traveling photographer came along and established himself not far from her father's house, and her mother decided to improve the opportunity to have some pictures of the children taken.

"Come, Katie," she said one morning, after it had all been talked over before the child, who had had no comment whatever, "go to nurse and get on your things and come with baby and me to have your tintypes taken."

But Katie drew back.

"No, mamma, dear," she said, gravely, "if you will excuse me, I won't have any tintypes taken. I'll wait, if you please, till you can take me to town and get a real telegraph of me."—Youth's Companion.

Senator Ingalls' Desk.

Senator Ingalls studied law in Massachusetts, and as soon as he was admitted to the bar started to Kansas with $70 in his inside pocket. He opened an office near Atchison. His law library was made up of three books, and the whole of his furniture was a chair and a table. His first client was a carpenter, and his fee was paid in kind. He got a table and a high desk for his legal services, and this desk painted green is kept in the Ingalls family today as one of its most precious pieces of furniture. It belongs to Ingalls' son, Ellsworth, who carried it with him to college and who probably now uses it as a part of his office furniture in the starting of his law practice.—Cor. Philadelphia Press.

Several Kinds of Mothers.

The mother represented the family sovereignty; the father was seldom seen, and he counted for little or nothing among the outside boys. It was the mother who could say whether a boy might go fishing or in swimming, and she was held a good mother or not according as she habitually said yes or no. There was no other standard of goodness for mothers in the boy's world, and could be none; and a bad mother might be outwitted by any device that the other boys could suggest to her boy. Such a boy was always willing to listen to any suggestion, and no boy took it hard if the other fellows made fun when their plan got him into trouble at home. If a boy came out after some such experience with his face wet, and his eyes red, and his lips swollen, of course you had to laugh; he expected it, and you expected him to stone you for laughing.

When a boy's mother had company, he went and hid till the guests were gone, or only came out of concealment to get some sort of shy lunch. If the other fellows' mothers were there, he might be a little bolder, and bring out cake from the second table. But he had to be pretty careful how he conformed to any of the usages of grown up society. A fellow who brushed his hair, and put on shoes, and came into the parlor when there was company, was not well seen among the fellows; he was regarded in some degree as a girl boy; a boy who wished to stand well with other boys kept in the wood shed, and only went in as far as the kitchen to get things for his guests in the back yard. Yet there were mothers who would make a boy put on a collar when they had company, and disgrace him before the world by making him stand round and help; they acted as though they had no sense and no pity; but such mothers were rare.—W. D. Howells in Harper's Young People.

Japanese Bookmaking.

Having resolved to "paint" a book, for the Japanese use a brush and not a pen, the author betakes himself to his workroom. It is a little room, a very little room.

The author sits on the floor in a flowing garment of brown silk, lined with blue, his legs disposed comfortably under him. In front of him stands a lacquered table, about a foot square, and upon it are his writing materials, which are as idyllic as his surroundings—his paper is delicately tinted yellow, with blue lines running up and down.

His inkstand is a carved ebony slab, with one end hollowed out for water to rub his cube of india ink in, and holds the four or five daintily decorated bamboo brushes which are his pens. Naturally he does not write his novel, he paints it.

Beginning at the end of the whole, at the left of every page and at the top of every line, straight down between the two blue parallels his small brown hand goes with quick, delicate, dark touches.

Although the novelist's "copy" might seem to a stranger to be daintiness itself, yet he always has it duplicated "by an artist" before sending it to the publishers, the success of the book depending so largely upon its artistic form. The "artist" to whom the "copy" is now intrusted proceeds to repaint the long series of word pictures with a professional dexterity which is something astonishing.—New York Journal.

Some One Swallowed the Tooth.

I heard a rather amusing story of a number of young people who assembled a few days ago at the home of a charming young lady somewhere in the eastern part of the city for a quiet little game at cards. During the progress of the evening one of the girls produced her bonbonniere, which passed in succession around the merry circle until its tiny lid closed only on an aching void and the delicate flavor of Italian mint. When the pretty box was returned empty to its owner, the delicate suffusion of her flushed brow faded to a ghastly pallor as she cried, "Where's my shark's tooth? I had it in this bonbonniere." Then the pallor went around as visions of the gastronomic impossibilities of the situation dawned on those who had partaken of the contents of the box—somebody had swallowed the wisdom molar of a man-eating carcharias vulgaris, but who? Nobody knows to this day, but there was a sense of uneasiness about the little gathering thereafter that fell like a pall over the general jollity.—Louisville Post.

Celluloid Silk.

In discussing the latest development in the line of silk imitation, an English contemporary says: "Celluloid 'silk' is a cleverly fabricated tissue, which ought to be repressed by common consent, or, if necessary, by parliamentary prohibition. Nothing so useful to dishonest dealers and so dangerously inflammable has hitherto been invented in the way of clothing. It is certainly cheap and handsome, and is therefore more tempting to the thoughtless, or the defrauded, who may be induced to buy as 'silk' a material which a spark would inflame, and which would burn with the fierceness of a rag steeped in petroleum. It may be in the future possible to lessen this inflammability, but the small sample referred to went off like a flash, and we may assume it was as fireproof as can at the present time be made."

Nature in Convulsion.

Volcanic eruptions, cyclones, earthquakes are awfully and tremendously picturesque, but scarcely desirable to emulate in action and effect by the administration of remedies which produce convulsion and agony in the abnormal portion of the human frame. Such is the effect of the old-fashioned violent purgatives happily falling more and more into disuse, and which Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the wholesome, pleasant, and entirely safe substitute. They weakened the intestines—the Bitters invigorates them. They left the bowels inactive, because they acted by causing feebleness. The Bitters, on the contrary, and because it enables, not forces, them to act—a vast and fortunate difference—perpetuates their activity and regularity. The liver is beneficially stimulated, as the kidneys also are, by this medicine, which easily conquers, also, malaria, nervousness and rheumatism.

A Haunted House.

This body of ours has been likened to a tenement. It often has a haunted apartment—the stomach. Scared by the electric jitters of dyspepsia, digestion flies and refuses to return. What can break the spell, what can raise the ban laid upon the unhappy organ? We answer unhesitatingly, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, and we are warranted in the response by the record testimony of myriads, covering a period of over a third of a century. A course of the Bitters, begun in any stage of the affliction, and persistently followed, will terminate in cure positive, not partial. The Bitters restores tone to the epigastric nerve, renews and purifies the juices exuding from the cellular tissue that act upon the food digestively, expels bile from the stomach and the blood, and promotes a regular habit of bowels. Malaria, kidney complaint, nervousness, rheumatism and neuralgia give way to this medicine.

Words of Advice.

To those who require a stimulant. There are many to whom we could recommend it. We think there are just as many honest liquor dealers as there are dealers in any other class of merchandise, and again, we believe that there are many who sell whiskey or other intoxicating liquors who are not reliable. We have noticed that our best physicians and superintendents of hospitals have by their reports, advised us to recommend Klein's Silver Age Bitters, therefore we say his is the place to which we would advise every one to go. He sells six quarts for $1.00, one gallon for $1.50, and one quart for 50 cents. Wines, Brandies and Cigars, cheap as the cheapest, and for complete catalogue and price list to Max Klein, 82 Federal street, Allegheny.

Special from Evans, Mich.

G. N. Bruce, Druggist, Evans, Mich. I want to say to you that Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup is, in my opinion, the greatest medicine ever put up. You are fully aware how lame and sore I was at the time you advised me to try the remedy, my back and ankles were so sore and lame, and the pain so severe that I could scarcely move about. Three bottles of this remedy cured me when everything else that I tried failed. It is a valuable medicine.

The Above Statement is True and It Affords me much pleasure to recommend this medicine.

The Disagreeable Winter Gone.

Now that the cold, drizzly rains and transformed to delightful spring, and the muddy roads to pleasant drives, it would be well to look about and prepare for the lurking disease often
