ALL ENGLAND IS STRIKING.

Half a Million Miners and Factory Hands Idle.

LONDON, March 14.—By the great strike of English miners for the purpose of keeping their wages from being reduced, about 800,000 men are idle to-day. Saturday the Durham miners, 70,000 strong, struck their picks. The diggers of Lancashire, Yorkshire, Warwickshire, Staffordshire, Cheshire, Cumberland and North Wales, to the number of 35,000 men, also quit work. The strike is spreading rapidly. A convention will be held in London on Wednesday, when it will be decided how long the suspension shall be continued. In the Tyne, Wear and Lancashire factories about 600,000 persons have been notified that the stopping of the coal supply will throw them out of work. Altogether there are now 900,000 men idle, and this number is likely to be doubled. Many of the establishments in Leeds and Manchester have already damped their fires.

MANY MORE OUT.
Today the miners of Lincolnshire quit work, acting in sympathy with the Miners' Federation. This action will make necessary the shutting down of the Appleby Iron Company, the North Lincoln Iron Company, the Frodingham Steel and Iron Company, the Trent Works, the Redburn Hill Iron and Coal Company and several other large concerns in the North Lincolnshire trade. By the action of to-day alone, it is estimated by the most conservative, that at least 100,000 men will be added to the great army already at play. Reports from Sheffield, Birmingham and other places show a slow stoppage of work in the factories in case the strike continues more than a week or two.

THE POOR SUFFER.
The poor in this city and elsewhere are already suffering from a lack of fuel. Only English colliers at work are those of South Wales. Prices have already risen 50 per cent. DEAD AND ALIVE ENTOMBED, 150 MINERS KILLED.

A Series of Fire-Damp Explosions Occur While 300 Men and Women Are In a Belgium Mine.

BRUSSELS, March 12.—A terrible series of explosions of fire-damp occurred yesterday at the colliery at Anderlues, near Charleroi. About 300 persons were in the mine when it occurred, 25 of them being women. Fully 100, and probably 150, people have perished either through suffocation, fire or falling debris. Of the dead 30 have been recovered and brought to the surface. Five of them are women. Ten miners were rescued still living, but can hardly live more than a few hours. The pit mouth is surrounded by a walling, desperate crowd of the relatives of those who were in the mine.

There are more than 200 miners and women still unaccounted for. The work of rescue is proceeding slowly, as many parts of the mine have fallen in, while other parts are flooded and the rescuers themselves are in deadly peril.

The explosions took place about noon. Volunteers were let down the pit mouth over which a dark cloud hung. When the cage containing the brave volunteers was half way down on the first trip the furnace caving of the shaft frightened them and they returned. Five of the 10 men refused to go down again as the mine was flooding rapidly, they said, and the loosened sides of the shaft threatened to fall in and bury them. The other five made the second trip and reached the mouth of the second gallery. They found a few men who had been nearest the shaft when the first explosion occurred. The miners had run for their lives, but had been caught at the entrance by falling timbers.

All had broken bones and three were so firmly lodged in the wreck that the rescuing party dared not wait to extricate them. Five of the wounded were brought up on the second trip, and two others and five dead were brought up on the third trip. The rescued men say that 25 of the miners still imprisoned are women. There are about 200 in all still to be accounted for. It is thought that those nearest the first cave in, in the gallery, may be rescued alive. Those furthest from the entrance of the gallery have probably been suffocated before this, and if not will die before they can be reached.

The work has been set back twice this evening by the caving of great blocks of soil and stone from the sides of the wrecked shaft, and since the third trip no volunteers have been sent down to assist. The superintendent of the mine has twice gone down 200 feet, but has returned saying that the chances would be four to one against him if he went lower. The dead will number at least 100 and probably 150. About 400 members of the families of the missing men will camp in the fields around the shaft all night.

About 50 of the 300 men in the gallery at the time of the first explosion got out by the second gallery, 300 feet below the surface, and work at this depth is difficult and dangerous.

The foul fumes coming from the mine are greatly hindering in the work of rescue.

BRUSSELS, March 14.—Another explosion at the Anderlues pit, near Charleroi, added the horrors of fire to the scene. The crowd about the pit mouth has increased. Hour by hour more mutilated remains are brought to the surface by the searchers. It has been learned that the number of men in the pit was 238. Of these 30 have been brought up dead, 9 injured, 25 escaped by the shaft, and 174 are entombed. There were 90 in the lower gallery when the explosion occurred. It is impossible even to hazard a guess when more bodies will be brought to the surface. Eight days at least will be required to flood the lower middle galleries, which are at present the seat of fire, and before the submerged bodies can be recovered the water will have to be pumped out. The second explosion occurred when the flooding of the mine had been commenced. Help is being given the families of the distressed. A great column of flames has shot out of the mouth of the pit, destroying the buildings connected therewith.

THE CONDITION OF BUSINESS.
 outlook Seems to Be Favorable Despite Complaints.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade says: Distribution of products is unquestionably improving. Transactions are, on the whole, larger than a year ago, in spite of depression at the South, being very much larger in the West. Nor is improvement confined to that section. Though general there, it is also more distinctly felt in Eastern cities, and there are not wanting signs that trade at the South, though still much embarrassed by the low price of cotton is steadily gaining. With all the great industries active, with money abundant in spite of gold exports and with speculation kept in wholesome check, the outlook would seem to be unusually favorable, notwithstanding general complaints that prices are low and margins of profit unusually small.

Pittsburg finds the volume of trade in iron smaller, and some further talk of closing hardware, boots and crockery, and the grocery trade at Cincinnati is good. Good trade is noted at Cleveland in dry goods, hardware, boots and crockery, and jobbing trade. Money is plenty for legitimate trade in Chicago. Throughout the Northwest the storm has unsettled trade, though even where prospects are considered bright.

The business failures during the last seven days for the United States were 230, for Canada 23, total, 253 as compared with 240 last week, 270 the week previous by the last, and 273 for the corresponding week of last year.
