EDITORIAL REMARKS.

THERE is politics enough, and to spare, in the newspapers without dragging it into the magazines.

RUDYARD KIPPLING's latest and shrewdest bid for popularity was made when he got the New York papers to abuse him.

WHAT's the matter with Henry Waterson and Murat Halstead, for a national ticket, on a platform of "everything goes?"

Was it because Mr. Holman does not like "nint in his'n" that he "knocked out" that appropriation to build a new U. S. mint in Philadelphia?

THE election of two women as alternates to the Republican National convention was a clever stroke of advertising for the state of Wyoming.

HILL says Cleveland is an outsider. Cleveland's opinion of Hill has not been published, probably because it would cause the paper that printed it to be thrown out of the mails.

THE gentlemen, reverend and otherwise, who are engaged in trying to arouse religious prejudice in this country might spend their time better by studying the constitution of the United States.

THE New York Stock Exchange has just celebrated its centennial anniversary. There are lots of people who believe it would have been better for the country had the Exchange never been born.

THE Czar should employ a corps of "sappers and miners" to offset the newly developed mining propensities of the Nihilists. Let it be mine against mine, as it was during Grant's siege of Petersburg.

FLORIDA orange-growers have made arrangements to market about one-tenth of the orange crop of that state, next season, in England. Fast steamers are to be run between Jacksonville and Liverpool.

"RAILROADS laugh at Federal laws," is a headline in a metropolitan exchange. Yes; and at all other kinds of laws, except that of gravitation. Their managers also sometimes laugh at applications for passes.

THE passenger who shot at the train robber who ordered him to hold up his hands ought to be given a free pass, for life, on every railroad in the world. He certainly deserves it for having acted so contrary to all known precedents.

IT does not take many words to summarize the difference between Protection and Free-Trade. Protection transplants European industries to the United States; Free-Trade transplants American industries to Europe. Further comment on the reasons why the McKinley bill is looked upon with disfavor by European nations seems quite unnecessary.

In 1890 the national debt of the United States was $38.83 per capita; the average for all foreign countries was $35.63, $2.71 less than ours. In 1890 our debt was only $14.24 per capita; that of the rest of the world was $32.88, more than twice as large as ours. The question is, Have we or have we not distanced the rest of the world in the last ten years?

SAYS the South Wales Daily News: "Some of the Welsh tin-plate makers are making arrangements to construct works in the United States, one near New York and the other probably in Pennsylvania, the latter more extensive than any existing works in the principality." Our tin-plate liars don't seem to have made a great impression on the Welshmen.

A RECENT census bulletin states that the number of homes in Philadelphia is in the proportion of one to every five inhabitants. Compare this with the condition of things in any one of England's great manufacturing cities, where there is scarcely one room for every five inhabitants, and you have an object lesson on the difference between Protection and Free-Trade.

THE report of the Senate Sub-Committee, appointed to investigate the effect of the Tariff on trade relations between the United States and Canada, says that "it is clear that the United States offers better markets and higher prices for everything that Canadian farmers have to sell that can be obtained in the Canadian Dominion." It also says that in every case where the McKinley duty was raised the price of the article declined correspondingly in the Canadian market. This report should make interesting reading for the calamitists.

TRADE unions are not what many people believe them to be, says the Memphis Unionist. They are not composed of ignorant, uncouth, blood-thirsty ruffians, as Charles Reade depicts them, and as they might have been at the time of which he writes, but their members are thinking, reading, loving and suffering beings, the same as any other class of God's people. If those who think and speak lightly of organized labor would only read some of the literature published and edited by men whose hands are hardened by toil, they might be brought to feel more kindly toward those who are doing more to elevate and enrich the country than all the capitalists combined. Organized workers are not illiterate, and every year produces greater learning in their ranks. The tendency of the age in labor circles is upward and onward in education and in the scope of their literary researches. It is surprising, even to those familiar with the progress of laboring men as writers, to read their literature. They are abundantly equipped, by reason of actual experience to advanced theories for mutual advantages of earners and employers, and the honesty and earnestness of their endeavors is apparent in every article.

ALBERT D. BEACHY.

A Renowned General Broker.

Many of our readers remember Albert D. Beachy, who is a native of this county, and who used to attend school right here in Salisbury. THE STAR can say truly, and with pleasure, that Mr. Beachy is today one of the most promising young men Somerset county has ever produced. The following very flattering notice of our friend Albert we clip from the Illustrated Chicago Century:

A specially prominent place on the list of noteworthy tenants of the Unity Building must be accorded to Mr. Albert D. Beachy, who has his office in suite 1440.

Mr. Beachy has been in business in this city since 1885 and has gained an enviable reputation and made many friends by his abilities, sterling integrity and zeal on behalf of his clients. He has a most retentive memory, enabling him to carry at immediate command a vast fund of accumulated knowledge concerning prices of properties and securities—a gift of great value in his wide and varied sphere of activity. He does not confine himself to any special branch or locality, as less gifted individuals are compelled to do, but he watches and studies the past, present and prospective values of real estate all over the city, and those of stocks and bonds as well, and operates wherever and whenever the best opportunity presents itself. His accurate knowledge of what has been done in these lines during the past seven years and his sagacious judgment on what is likely to come to pass have enabled him to guide his clients with wonderful precision. He also gives his attention to securing loans and placing money; in either case, exclusively on the security of first-class improved property. Furthermore, he undertakes collections, and his experience in this line and knowledge of human nature have resulted in the recovery of thousands of dollars from tricky debtors. Still another department of his business is the management of property for non-residents and other persons who do not find it feasible or convenient to attend personally to the tasks involved in the care of property. Mr. Beachy has also made arrangements for the placing of insurance with the best home and foreign countries, and can therefore serve his clients in this matter also with unsurpassed efficacy.

It will be seen from the foregoing summary that Mr. Beachy's range of usefulness is a wide one, calling for ample knowledge and sound judgment, but he is equal to the task and it is a matter of general report that none of his clients has ever had occasion to regret having conferred any interests to his care. It is his rule (and this is a rule to which there is no exception) to act for others with the same earnestness as if he were the principal, and this zealous devotion to his trust makes those persons who enter into business relations with him, his lasting friends. We can cordially advise our readers to get the services of this thoroughly qualified and active broker and agent when they want to buy or sell real estate, stock or bonds, or require advice and assistance of any kind in connection with property and investments.

The Supreme Court has decided that all bridges, after being constructed, are a part of the public highway, and as such must be kept in regular repair by the township or borough in which they are situated.—Heretofore it has been the custom of the county to keep in repair all the bridges erected at the expense of the county.—Somerset Democrat.

The Berlin Record says it had some dealings with the Lion Clothing Co., late of Meyersdale, and that the said company sneaked away without paying an advertising bill it owed the Record. This is a surprise to us, as THE STAR also did some advertising for that company, all of which was promptly and cheerfully paid for. The company was so well pleased with the returns realized from the "ad" in THE STAR that there was no quibbling about the pay.
