

THE REPUBLICAN NATIONAL CONVENTION

General Benjamin Harrison Nominated For President on the First Ballot.

EX-MINISTER WHITELAW REID CHOSEN FOR VICE-PRESIDENT.

A Four-Day Session at Minneapolis. The Platform in Full. Sketch of the Nominees.

FIRST DAY'S PROCEEDINGS.
The Tenth National Republican Convention was called to order by J. S. Clarkson, chairman of the national committee. The first day's session was short one. After prayer of a non-partisan character, J. Sloan Fassett, of New York, was unanimously chosen temporary chairman. His speech was intensely listened to. Hon. Thos. B. Rice followed with a stirring speech. After the committee were appointed, a motion to adjourn until to-morrow was then put and carried, and those of the delegates not members of the standing committees slowly filed out of the hall, and the committeemen adjourned to their respective committee rooms to proceed to business.

Collum, of Illinois, offered a resolution reciting that the Columbian exposition is a great national undertaking, and that the convention recommend congress to make liberal appropriations to carry it to a successful termination. The resolution was referred to the committee on platform. Then the chairman of the committee on credentials stated that the committee had not yet completed its labors, but hoped to do so by 8 p. m., and asked for further time. The question was voted without serious opposition, and a recess taken until that hour.

BENJAMIN HARRISON.

WHITELAW REID.

General H. H. Bingham, of Pennsylvania, chairman and Judge S. F. Stahl, of Arkansas, secretary. It was decided to recommend to the convention the adoption of the rules of the convention of 1888, with a few unimportant changes made necessary by the admission of new States since then. The Committee on Permanent Organization organized by the selection of Lockwood, of Idaho, as chairman, and King, of New Hampshire, as secretary. A subcommittee, consisting of Ellis, of Kansas; Thomas, of New York; T. Madison Vance, of Louisiana, and Depew, of Indiana, was appointed.

When the delegates had assembled "Long" Jones, of Illinois, mounted the platform and asked that the Harrison leaders from each delegation join him. This was done, and so that they could all know for themselves who the saints were.

CONVENTION HALL, MINNEAPOLIS.

WILLIAM MCKINLEY.

upon the report of the committee, elected permanent chairman, and Messrs. Fessenden, Spooner and Mahone named as the committee to conduct him to the chair. With McKinley's appearance with the committee, the delegates and audience rose to their feet, cheering wildly. When the cheering ceased, McKinley warmly thanked the convention and said that the convention would present a platform and a candidate that would meet with approval of the country.

At 1:26 was then taken until 11 o'clock Friday morning.

At 11:37 o'clock the convention was called to order. Prayer was offered by the Rev. Dr. Wayland Hoyt of Minneapolis. Credentials were then reported by the Committee on Credentials. It was then reported that the committee had taken a recess. The object of the meeting was not stated. Only the leaders of the Harrison movement knew its purpose. But its importance was impressed upon each of the delegates, and he was urged to come from the convention direct to the place of meeting.

At the conclusion of the roll call, Mr. Magee announced that the total number of votes promised to Harrison was 530. This includes figures from New Mexico, Oklahoma and Utah, which were not represented in the meeting.

THE PLATFORM.

The following is the full text of the platform, as adopted by the Republican Convention at Minneapolis:

The representatives of the Republicans of the United States assembled in general convention on the shores of the Mississippi river, the everlasting bond of an undisturbable Republic, whose most glorious chapter of history is the record of the Republican party, congratulate their countrymen on the majestic march of the Nation under the banners inscribed with the principles of our platform of 1888, vindicated by victory at the polls and prosperity in our fields, workshops and mines, and make the following declaration of principles:

We believe that all articles which cannot be produced in the United States except luxuries should be brought to the market, and that on all imports coming in competition with the products of American labor, equal duties should be levied equal to the difference between wages abroad and at home. We assert that the prices of manufactured articles of general consumption have been reduced under the operation of the tariff act of 1890.

We denounce efforts of the Democratic majority of the House of Representatives to destroy our tariff laws by piecemeal, as is manifested by their attacks upon wool, lead and lead ores, the chief products of a number of States; and we ask the people for their judgment thereon.

We favor the extension of all the people, as well as their just and equal protection under the laws, are the foundation of our republican institutions, and our party will ever relax its efforts until the integrity of the ballot and the purity of elections shall be fully guaranteed and protected in every State. We denounce the continued outrages perpetrated upon American citizens for political reasons in certain States of the Union.

We favor the enactment of more stringent laws and regulations for the restriction of criminal, pauper and contract immigration. We favor efficient legislation by Congress to protect the life and limbs of employees of transportation companies engaged in carrying on interstate commerce, and recommend legislation by the respective States that will protect employees engaged in State commerce, in mining and manufacturing.

At 11 o'clock the convention adjourned until 11 o'clock to-morrow.
