

GRAND ARMY ENCAMPMENT

AT WASHINGTON, D. C.

About 100,000 Veterans March in the Great Parade: History of the Organization.

At Washington, D. C., on Monday General Palmer, with his staff, reviewed the parade, which preceded the dedication ceremonies at Grand Army place. The long procession assembled promptly, moved off without a hitch, marched well and looked well. The entire avenue was clear from the Peace monument to Seventeenth street and over the broad, smooth space the troops moved with wonderful precision.

A. G. WEISSERT, THE NEW COMMANDER.

Brevet Major General Eugene A. Carr was in command and to his rear, acting in concert, were such soldiers as Brigadier General Guy V. Henry, the hero of many fights, and Brigadier General Albert Ordway. Viewed as a scenic affair it was brilliant. All arms of the United States were represented and almost every variety of uniform was in line.

Immediately after the great parade the Commander-in-Chief delivered his address at the dedication of Grand Army place, formerly known as White lot. Vice President Morton was then presented and was warmly received. When the cheering had ceased, he made a telling address. The flag on the staff, 150 feet overhead, was then unfurled and saluted by artillery. With "The Star Spangled Banner" by the Marine Band, the dedication of the Grand Army place was completed, and the thousands of cheering veterans dispersed.

On the stand reserved for distinguished guests were Secretaries Charles Foster, Noble, Rank and Attorney-General Miller. General Lucius Fairchild, of Wisconsin, and St. Yoder, Commander-in-Chief of the Union Veterans League, were among the prominent ex-military men who had seats on the platform.

In his prayer, Chaplain-in-Chief Payne invoked in eloquent terms the mercy and blessings of God upon President Harrison and his stricken wife, and with an urgent petition that in all time there may be but one flag in this country—the glorious stars and stripes, to both of which a hearty "Amen" went up from the crowd.

TUESDAY'S GREAT PARADE, ABOUT 100,000 VETERANS IN LINE. The great parade of the Grand Army took place Tuesday, and was witnessed by thousands of spectators. It is estimated that upwards of 400,000 strangers were brought into the city. Over 100,000 men were in line and the weather for marching was delightful, as the sun did not show itself but an hour or so all day. The column moved at 9 o'clock in the morning and the last division of Naval Veterans passed the reviewing stand at 4:10 in the afternoon, making nine hours in passing a given point.

The reviewing stand was near the east entrance of the White House and was occupied by Vice President Morton, members of the Cabinet, and many other distinguished personages.

THE ORDER OF PROCESSION. The order of procession was as follows: Citizens' Committee escort to the Commander-in-Chief, Old Guard of Washington, Albany Grand Army Battalion, Commander-in-Chief, Junior Vice Commander, Senior Vice Commander, Official Staff of the Commander-in-Chief, Aide-de-Camp to the Commander-in-Chief, Escort to the Grand Army, Sixth Massachusetts, First Defenders, United States Signal Corps Veterans Association. Then came the State Departments, Pennsylvania being third, Ohio fourth and West Virginia twenty-eighth.

When the department of Ohio approached the reviewing stand, Colonel Crook, executive clerk for President Harrison, and he stand and stood upon ex-President Hayes, who was on foot in the front rank of the veterans, and was escorted to a place alongside of Vice President Morton. All along the entire line enthusiastic cheers were sent up for ex-President Hayes by citizens of Washington, to whom he had endeared himself while here.

General Benjamin F. Butler rode in an open barouche, at the head of the Department of Massachusetts, and received an ovation at every point. The General also joined the reviewing party on the stand.

The procession moved under the orders of the Commander-in-Chief, in double column, rows of 12, one on either side of the tracks, platoons being 12 paces apart, and between departments 24 paces. This procession was, as far as possible, strictly a Grand Army of the Republic organization, the first and last divisions containing the only non-veterans. The posts marched in the order of their seniority, beginning with Illinois, where the Grand Army was organized. The rear of the procession was brought up by the Naval Veterans' Association.

A pleasing feature of the march was the choral tributes of patriotic songs to the veterans by school children of the district. They were located at two points, 500 colored girls at the corner of Third street and the avenue and 500 white girls at the corner of Fifteenth street.

Secretary Rusk's striking figure at the head of the Wisconsin department was the signal for continued applause.

The Pennsylvania department presented a number of notable features. It carried the greatest number of lattered battle flags. Of the larger States, the Pennsylvania Department occupied the longest time in passing the Commander-in-Chief, occupying 30 minutes. Ohio was a close second, requiring 45 minutes, and New York third, with 30 minutes.

New York Department, as it passed General Palmer's stand, created the best impression as to personnel and organization. There was better marching by the Posts, they were dressed in effective uniforms, and they had the most and best music.

Eighty thousand veterans in line, besides 236 other organizations, such as bands and so on, a line 25 miles in length, eight hours, spectators 600,000. This is the summing up of the grand parade Tuesday by those who took notes and have had their heads together in regard to this momentous matter. It was therefore the greatest and greatest parade in the history of the Grand Army, but the greatest in the history of the country. Washington and the Grand Army boys are proud of it.

Night was even more glorious than the day. Shortly after dark, which was of the most favorable density, came the lower clouds, the multitudinous thousands repaired as far as possible to the vicinity of the monument. Here the elaborate display of fireworks provided by the committee and the pyrotechnic king, was made. It was a magnificent show. Succeeding the fireworks display, there was an electric illumination, on a scale never before attempted in this country. Pennsylvania avenue, from the Capitol to Seventeenth street, was ablaze with colored lights. Every available dynamo in the city, public and private, was brought into requisition, and many were shipped here, especially for the display. The feature of the illumination was the display along both sides of the avenue of brilliant representations of corps badges. At the entrance to Executive avenue, was a monster facsimile of the U. S. A. R. badge, 18 feet in height. It was made of incandescent lamps, and the various regulation colors of the badge, and produced a grand effect. A duplicate of the piece was also shown at the corner of Pennsylvania avenue and Seventeenth street, and the entrance to the White House, spanning the arch of the gateway, had been placed a fan of 1,300 lamps, arranged so that they could be turned on and off, giving the appearance of opening and shutting the fan. Over the outer gate was a great shield, with an eagle surmounting it.

A fine display was shown in the White House grounds, in front of the mansion. Here incandescent lights were self hidden in the shrubbery, all of them changeable in character, all appearing and reappearing in the most bewildering manner. The trees and shrubbery seemed fairly magnetized and the effects were extremely beautiful. Throughout the grounds were a number of other electrical devices, among them large wheels turning and changing colors with treacherous rapidity, and colored electrical lights, was especially fine. Powerful search lights, thrown from the tops of high buildings, produced a dazzling effect.

The display continued until midnight and was witnessed by countless thousands, who regretfully disappeared in the darkness that succeeded the turning off of the dynamo.

HISTORY OF THE G. A. R. IT WAS A WESTERN IDEA—LIST OF THE COMMANDERS IN CHIEF.

The G. A. R. as it exists to-day was a western idea. The order had its birth in comparatively few miles of St. Louis. As early as 1864 Dr. B. F. Stephenson, Surgeon of the Fourteenth Illinois Infantry, and Chaplain W. T. Rutledge, of the same regiment, while marching in Mississippi under Sherman, agreed, if circumstances did not forbid, to organize the Union veterans into an order for mutual benefit. In March 1865, these two men, with others, met at Springfield, Ill., for the purpose of taking steps toward the formation of the Grand Army of the Republic. On April 6, 1865, which date is recognized as the birth-day of the order, a meeting was held at Decatur, Ill., at which the first post was organized. Surgeon Stephenson, mustering in its members and granting them a charter. At a preliminary convention held a few months later the Constitution was drawn, and finally ratified at the first annual encampment at Indianapolis, Ind., November 20, 1865.

General S. A. Hurlburt was elected first Commander in Chief. This encampment was called together by General Stephenson, as provisional Commander-in-Chief. The main feature of the constitution is found in article II, chapter 3, which reads: "No officer or comrade of the G. A. R. shall in any manner use his position for private purposes and discussion of party questions shall not be permitted at any of its meetings, nor shall any foundation for political office be laid."

The declared objects of the society were to bring into a brotherhood all soldiers and sailors of the Union cause; to secure their recognition before the public; to relieve the needs of their widows and orphans; to instill loyalty in the minds of "Young America," and to cultivate a spirit of devotion to the Union.

The complete list of Commander-in-Chief, many of them not only famous in war, but illustrious in the annals of peace, is as follows:

- B. F. Stephenson (provisional), died August 30, 1871, elected 1865-67.
- S. A. Hurlburt, Illinois (died March 27, 1882), elected 1867-69.
- John A. Logan, Illinois (died December 29, 1886), elected 1869-71.
- Ambrose Burnside, Rhode Island (died September 13, 1881), elected 1871-72.
- Charles Devins, Massachusetts (died January 7, 1891), elected 1872-74.
- John F. Hartman, Pennsylvania (died October 17, 1885), elected 1874-76.
- John C. Robinson, New York, elected 1876-78.
- William Ershaw, Ohio (died July 17, 1885), elected 1878-80.
- Louis Wagner, Pennsylvania, elected 1880, George S. Merrill, Massachusetts, elected 1881.
- Paul Van der Voort, Nebraska, elected 1882.
- Robert B. Beath, elected 1883.
- John S. Kuntz, Ohio, elected 1884.
- S. S. Burdett, Washington, D. C., elected 1885.
- Lucius Fairchild, Wisconsin, elected 1886.
- John P. Rea, Minnesota, elected 1887.
- William Warner, Missouri, elected 1888.
- Russell Alger, Michigan, elected 1889.
- Wheelock G. Veazey, Vermont, elected 1890.
- John Palmer, New York, (present Commander-in-Chief), elected 1891.

The membership of the organization in 1891 was 419,369, an increase over the year 1890 of 9,880. While there has been a steady increase in membership each year since the date of organization, and is likely to be under conservative management, for several years to come, in the nature of things the time will arrive when the order will be numbered with the things of the past, but their motto will live forever in the hearts of every true American: "Fraternity, Charity and Loyalty."

Shortly after 6 o'clock Wednesday morning General Palmer closed the Twenty-sixth Grand Army Encampment to order and it was opened in due form. The Commander-in-Chief, General Palmer, then read his annual address. He was frequently interrupted by applause. His speech was lengthy.

At the conclusion of the address the reports of the Adjutant General, Quartermaster-General and Judge Advocate General were submitted.

The following interesting figures conclude the Adjutant General's report: "The number of persons entitled to seats at the present encampment is stated at 1,448, of which 433 are representatives at large and apportioned according to membership December 31 last. During the last calendar year there was a gain of 3,829 members, making the total number 7,568. The total number of members on December 31 last was 408,711, an apparent loss of 1,708. This loss is said to be apparent, because only one department it was found that nearly 3,000 had been added without authority and the returns previously made were incorrect. The largest gain of the total membership, 1,300 in the total strength of the organization."

"During the year the deaths numbered 6,407; honorably discharged, 1,829; transfers, 9,467; suspensions, 34,367; dishonorable discharges, 467; delinquents, 13,582. The report closes with a statement compiled from departmental returns, showing that from January 1 to December 31, 1891, $96,011 was expended by the various posts for the relief of unfortunate comrades, soldiers, widows and orphans, and the total amount of the various regulations of the badge, and produced a grand effect. A duplicate of the piece was also shown at the corner of Pennsylvania avenue and Seventeenth street, and the entrance to the White House, spanning the arch of the gateway, had been placed a fan of 1,300 lamps, arranged so that they could be turned on and off, giving the appearance of opening and shutting the fan. Over the outer gate was a great shield, with an eagle surmounting it."

"Upon the magnificent procession that occurred on Pennsylvania avenue, the only cloud that existed was one of regret, the character of which was so much to be loved, and who is upon a mission of love and duty. I believe I voice the sentiments not only of every member of this encampment, but of every loyal and grand old veteran who is present, your unanimous consent to present the following resolution and ask its unanimous adoption: "Resolved, By the members of the Twenty-sixth Grand Army Encampment, of G. A. R., and through its 500,000 members, that their sincere and heartfelt sympathy are hereby extended to Comrade Benjamin Harrison, in the sad affliction which has befallen him from our midst, and we earnestly hope and pray that his noble wife, that true American woman, may be spared to him and us for even greater opportunity for service."

The encampment, by acclamation, accepted the invitation from Indianapolis, to hold the next encampment there.

The second day's session of the National Encampment was the principal event of the G. A. R. gathering on Sunday. It was held in the afternoon at 2 o'clock, and was presided over by the Commander-in-Chief for the coming year, the principal work of the encampment. Nominations for this office were called on by G. A. R. West, of Milwaukee, was practically chosen by acclamation. R. H. Wardell, of San Francisco, was elected Senior Vice Commander, and W. C. Weyl, of Danbury, Conn., Surgeon General.

The Encampment, by a overwhelming vote, defeated a proposition to deny life membership in the encampment to past grand officers and ex-post commanders.

Past Commander-in-Chief W. B. Smith, of Iowa, was reported on the committee on the Grant memorial that a contract had been made with Franklin Simmons for a marble statue of Grant to be erected in the city of Washington at a cost of $9,000.

Captain A. G. Weissert, of Milwaukee, Wis., the new Commander-in-Chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, was born in Iowa, O., August 7, 1844, and went to Wisconsin in February, 1861. He enlisted in the Eighth (War Eagle) Regiment of Wisconsin in April, 1861, as a private; was promoted to sergeant, then to sergeant major, and was wounded at Nashville December 15, 1864. While he was yet on crutches he returned to duty and was again wounded in some localities in the field. In 1865 he was appointed a cadet to West Point, but was obliged to decline on account of his wounds. In 1868 he was elected adjutant of the department of Wisconsin, and was re-elected in 1880 and the same year chosen as Senior Vice Commander-in-Chief. By profession he is a lawyer.

WEATHER CROP BULLETIN. Reports covering the States of Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia. The September crop bulletin issued by Secretary Rusk contains the following reports from state agents:

Pennsylvania.—The long-continued dry weather has had a very damaging effect on late corn and potatoes. The tobacco crop was injured in some localities. The yield of the present crop is of finer quality than that usually raised. Farmers are becoming convinced that it pays best to plant only choice varieties. Apples promised unusually well, but are being held back by the frost before maturity. Peaches suffered a millard. Grapes in some parts of the state are injured by mildew.

West Virginia.—The condition of corn has fallen off since August 1st, owing to the extreme dry weather during the month. The oats crop was generally poor. Potatoes will be a fair crop. Stock hogs are fewer in number and their condition is not as good as last year.

Ohio.—The condition of corn has improved in the middle section of the state since the last report, but the drought has damaged the crop in the southern section. The yield of the present crop is of finer quality than that usually raised. Farmers are becoming convinced that it pays best to plant only choice varieties. Apples promised unusually well, but are being held back by the frost before maturity. Peaches suffered a millard. Grapes in some parts of the state are injured by mildew.

It had been completed without any suffering or any other ill effect to the patient. Thirty minutes later she was resting easily in her bed at the White House, her mind much relieved by reaching "home" for which she has been longing for several weeks. Her physician, Dr. Gardner, reports that she stood the trip very well and that her spirits were much buoyed up in reaching Washington, which, he thinks, will be greatly in her favor.

BAND MASTER GILMORE DEAD. The Famous Orchestra Leader Expires Suddenly in St. Louis. Prof. Patrick Sarsfield Gilmore, the great impresario died at the Lindell Hotel, St. Louis, Saturday afternoon. In the morning he was seized with an attack of cholera morbus, brought on by acute indigestion, which, combined with a cardiac affection, caused his death.

His wife, his daughter, Minnie, and Mrs. H. H. Mudd, James A. Scott, Gustav Baumgarten and W. A. Fischer were at his bedside. For weeks he had been suffering from palpitation of the heart, and even last year he complained of a weakness in that organ.

Friday night he was informed of his appointment as director of music at the World's Fair, and this probably aided the dissolution. At 5 o'clock he rallied some, but he at once lost consciousness and passed away. Among his last words were a caution not to let the people know that he had had cholera morbus, for fear of causing a scare and interfering with the fall festivities in St. Louis.

Gilmore was undoubtedly the most popular musician of recent times and the influence of his musical work, though it was far from classical, will continue to be felt for years to come. His compositions touched the popular chord, and whenever he waved his magic baton the public responded with applause.

Patrick Sarsfield Gilmore was born near Dublin on Christmas Day, 1824. When his school days were over he was apprenticed to a merchant in Athlone, but his love for music had made him a member of the Athlone Band. When 18 years old, Gilmore came to this country. In 1858 he organized in Boston what has since been known as Gilmore's Band, the one with which he has given concerts all over this country and over half of Europe.

Gilmore and his band were with Burnside in the Carolinas in the first two years of the war. After the war Gilmore returned to Boston, and there, in 1871, he held the great Peace Jubilee which made his name famous among the bandmasters of the world.

Next year he organized another of an international character, foreign nations being asked to take part. It was given in a building holding 100,000 people. The chorus numbered 2,000 and 2,000 trained musicians took part.

With his jubilee honors heaped upon him Gilmore came to New York, and adding to his original organization, formed his famous military band, now known as Gilmore's Twenty-second Regiment Band. With this band he visited in 1878 the various hospitals of Europe, taking prizes at band concerts in various parts.

Sunstrokes in September. Sunday witnessed an event for which the oldest inhabitant cannot recall a parallel. A man sustained a sunstroke in St. Paul on September 24. Isaac Hannah fell down in his place of business under the oppressive heat. He was taken to the hospital. He was deliriously prostrated, but the physicians think he will survive.

TRADE GOOD ALL ROUND. The Cholera Alarm Vanishes And Business Improves.—The General Trade Exceeds That of the Same Season Last Year. R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says: The alarm about cholera has vanished, and trade in every direction shows all the improvement that was expected. The South is a little dull, because cotton is low in price and late, but a little improvement has been seen during the past week. In a few quarters in the West farmers are holding back wheat for higher prices, so that collections are retarded. But the general tenor of advices is exceedingly favorable. The volume of business continues larger than a year ago. Collections are exceptionally good on the whole and, although money is active and in demand, at nearly all points the supply is ample. Gold exports have ceased, foreign exchange has declined and the money market is at present without disturbing features.

Wheat has recovered 14 cents from the extremely low price of a week ago, but sales have been only 5,000,000 bushels. Western receipts in four days have been 5,700,000 bushels, while the exports from Atlantic ports have been 933,000. Foreign advices to long promise and woolen manufacturers for American wheat this year, and prices are not unreasonably depressed, in view of the problem where to place the large surplus brought over from last year, and of the new crop now coming forward. Corn has declined 2c and oats 3c, partly on more hopeful news from the growing States. On the other hand, speculation in wheat has been less active, reaching 750,000 bushels, and the price has been advanced three-sixteenths by the covering of short sales. The crop is ample and the movement this far north belies the year's forecasts. Products are a shade stronger, but oil is 1/2c lower, and in coffee an active speculation has advanced the price 1/2c.

Business at Boston is good and large in volume. Cotton mills are well supplied, woolen goods are selling freely, boot and shoe factories are filled with orders, and dealers find it hard to get rubber goods fast enough. Improvement is seen in groceries at Philadelphia, especially in canned goods, and sugar is active. Stocks of dry goods are low, and in jewelry is in fair volume, and improving in paints, oil and glass. At Baltimore business is a factory, though quiet over from the South, and exceedingly good in shoes, lumber and cattle.

At Cincinnati, the wholesale jewelry trade reports sales in August 50 per cent greater than last year, and fall prospects are bright. Business in Cleveland is improving in nearly all departments, and especially in rolled pig iron, in lumber, which has advanced $2 to $3 per 1,000 feet. At Detroit business is increasing in dry goods, drugs and shoes, though farmers are holding wheat for higher prices.

The general trade at Chicago exceeds last year's, for the same week, with good prospects. The business failures during the last seven days number for the United States, 188 Canada, 23; total 211; as compared with 182 last week, 179 the week previous to the last, and 244 for the corresponding week of last year.

FOUR WOMEN KILLED. Fatal Fire Panic in Three Jewish Synagogues. Three Jewish synagogues occupying the tenement building No. 27 Ludlow street, New York City, were crowded with devout Hebrews attending the activities of the new year Friday morning when a candle over a pulpit in the synagogue on the third floor ignited a bit of drapery and a cry of "fire" was raised. The congregation stampeded immediately and rushed pell-mell down the narrow stairs leading to the other synagogues on the second and first floors respectively. The congregations of these two latter, hearing the tramp of many feet and the cries of "fire," also became panic stricken and rushed out.

The two upper congregations met in the narrow hallway, and sought safety for the greater part of the day. The struggle was short, for the light wooden hand-rail gave way and the screaming, struggling people were precipitated to the street below. There was a solid mass of humanity filling the hallway from the floor to the ceiling.

By this time an excited crowd had gathered outside the building, among which were several policemen, who at once went to work pulling the crushed shapes out of the hallway. When all had been cleared away four people were found to be dead, and a dozen seriously injured, while those not so badly hurt are beyond counting. The blaze that had caused all the trouble went out of its own accord.

The dead are Mrs. Freda Becker, aged 45 years; Mrs. Tobe Boyman, aged 50 years; Mrs. Naomi Rosenthal, aged 30 years; and Mrs. Belle Fortinberry, aged 70 years. The worst injured were removed to the general hospital, where they received every attention.

The seriously injured are: Rachel Bokawitz, 60 years old, skull fractured at base. The doctors say she will probably die. Rachel Borsuk, 27 years old. Will probably die. Annie Cohen, 58 years old. Will probably die. Ida Cohen, 21 years old. Skull fractured. Mrs. Rebecca Friedman, 41 years old. Skull fractured; said to be dying. Simon Gersonberg, 33 years old. Injured internally. Mrs. Belle Spillike, 36 years old. Skull fractured; said to be dying.

HEADQUARTERS AT MILWAUKEE. Commander in Chief Weissert Issues His First Order to His Comrades. The following was issued on Saturday from the headquarters of the Grand Army of the Republic at Washington, D. C.: Having been elected Commander in Chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, I undertake the duties of the position, fully realizing the grave responsibilities assumed. Whatever degree of success may attend the coming administration will depend largely upon the co-operation of the comrades throughout the nation, which is earnestly invoked. Headquarters will be established for the present at Milwaukee. All official business should be addressed to G. A. R., Adjutant General, G. A. R., Milwaukee, Wis., and there, in 1871, he held the great Peace Jubilee which made his name famous among the bandmasters of the world.

Next year he organized another of an international character, foreign nations being asked to take part. It was given in a building holding 100,000 people. The chorus numbered 2,000 and 2,000 trained musicians took part.
