I Roumania Victims Found. Rail Road Horror in England, Disasters on Lakes Erie and Michigan. An Austrian Catastrophy.

An appalling railway accident occurred near Thirsk, in Yorkshire, England, by which 10 per room were killed and a large number injured. The express train, which leaves Edinburgh every evening for London. was running at full speed as it approached Thirsk, when ahead of it appeared a heavily laden goods train. The engineer of the express train reversed his engine and put on the brakes, but the momentum of the heavy express was too great and it dashed into the goods train, making a most terrible wreck. To add to the horror the carriages caught fire and were destroyed.

The scene at the wreck was dreadful. Some of the bodies, taken out, of the debris had been burned beyond all semblance to humanity. The clothing had been destroyed, and in some cases the jewelry worn was melted by the intense heat. This will render the identification of the dead in some cases extremely difficult, if not altogether impossible.

The official report of the killed places the number at 10. Many persons received slight injuries and a severe shaking up. The signal man who was charged with being asleep at his post, has been suspended from duty pending an investigation.

The engineer of the express train, him self badly injured and held down by the debris, implored the rescuers to save the passengers or reported to be a number of the nobility among the passengers of the express train. The marquis of Tweeddale, and the marquis of Huntley, lord-in-waiting to Queen Victoria, were aboard the train, but escaped uninjured with the exception of a few bruises and a broken thumb for the marquis of Huntley. Captan Duncan McLedo of the Forty-ninth Highlanders, is among the killed.

The accident's said to have been due to a dense fog which prevented the engineer of the express train from seeing ahead for any distance. The express was crowded with passengers returning from the highlands of Scotland, from Dundee and Edinburgh.

President Harrison has issued his annual Thanksgiving proclamation as follows:

"The gifts of God to our people during the past year have been so abundant and so special, that the spirile of devour tranksgiving awaits not a call, but only the appointment of a day when it may have a common expression. He has slayed the pestilence at our door, He has given us more love for the free civil institutions, in the creation of which, His directing providence was so conspicuous; He has awakened a deeper re erence for law; He has widened our philanthrophy by a call to succor the distress in other lands; He has blessed our schools and is bringing forward a patriotic and Godfearing generation to execute His great and benevolent designs for our country; He has given us a great increase in material wealth and a wide diffusion of contentment and comfort in the homes of our people; He has given this grace to the sorrowing.

"Wherefore, I. Benjamin Harrison, President of the United States, do call upon all our people to observe, as we have been wont. Thursday, the 24th day of this month of November, as a Day of Tanaksgiving to God for His mercies, and of supplication for His continued care and grace."

Death." Bodies Puriffy Almost Imm diately After Death.

The London British American Journal quotes some interesting facts from a hitherto unpublished report of the Governor General of Tulkestan, on the epidemic of 'black death,' which followed the cholera in that region last September and killed in six days 1,303 out of a population of 30,000 souls in Askabad. The scange vanished as suddenly as it appeared, leaving only the corpses of the victims to mark its path. The bodies of the dead decayed so rapidly that it was impracticable to perform a satis factory post moriem to learn the nature of the disease.

Black death" has long been known in Western Asia as an 'enidemic more deadly than cholera. The plague sweeps over a wide district like a pestilential si moon, striking down animals as well as men. The attack begins with rigers of intense severity coming on at intervals of five minutes for an hour. These are followed by an unendurable sen-ation of heat. The arteries become tense, the pulse increases in rapidly, and the temperature of the body steadily rises. There is no diarrhoea, vomiting is frequent. alternating with convulsions. The patient suffers great pain, Suddenly the extremities become stiff, and cold; in from 10 to 20 minutes' time the patient sinks into an unconscious condition and death relieves his suffering. As soon as breath leaves the body the skin is covered with black spots. Decomposition sets in within a few minutes.

The disease is almost or quite unknown in Europe, but London physicians express the belief that there is no reason why it should not appear in the wake of such a visitation of cholera as has just afflicted Hamburg, and, in view of this opinion, the derails given in this report possess great interest for the medical fraternity.
